The reference to the Spanish trawler was the first indication of the nationality of the fishing vessel which reported that a sub broke surface near it on the Banks July 10.

Sightings Checked

The announcement was issued after a consultation among intelligence officers on reports brought back from the Fundy coast by an officer sent there to check the sightings at first hand.

He returned last night by plane.

The strongest report was believed to be that of fisherman George Tiner, of Chance Harbor, N.B., who said a sub partially swamped his boat before crash-diving in the fog, July 5.

North Stars Take Off For Pacific Coast

Winnipeg, July 26 (CP) —Five of six RCAF North Stars, Canada's second contribution to the United Nations battle in Korea, thundered off Stevenson airport early today on the second leg of their hop to the Pacific coast.

The sixth plane, crippled by a damaged fuel pump, was to leave about four hours later.

The planes, carrying 250 men of 426 transport squadron, will join a group of American planes at McChord Field, Tacoma, Wash. Canadian crews will fly them unarmed over the Pacific between Japan and North America.

Wing-Cmdr. Campbell Mussels of Montreal said the 11 air crews will ferry supplies for U.N. forces. Four more North Stars will join the group later.

Earlier Canada sent three west coast destroyers to serve under the blue-and-white U.N. flag.

The flight touched down here at 12.45 a.m. CDT and the five planes were off the deck by 2.45 a.m. They took on 9,600 gallons of fuel while the men had a hot meal.

Sqdn.-Ldr. H. C. Lewis of Melita, Man. captain of the crippled ship, said he plans to meet the flight as they leave Vancouver before heading south to Tacoma.

"We'll be in formation with the rest of them—just as we were when we left Montreal—by the time they hit the border."

The men, too, wore something new.

Their blue-nylon coveralls are the latest RCAF issue, and they have a light blue-dark blue air force shoulder insignia recently approved but never worn.

Wing.-Cmdr. Lascelles said ground crews were taken because U.S. Army Air Force mechanics are not familiar with Canada's North Star.

Three Killed When Car Strikes Bridge

Forest, Ont., July 26 (CP) — Three persons were killed and two injured when a car crashed the cement abutment of a bridge near here early today.

The dead: Mrs. Stella Stephenson, 56; Mrs. Betheade Fox, 19, daughter of Mrs. Stephenson; and Miss Stella Reynolds, who is also related to Mrs. Stephenson. They are from R.R.E. Thedford.

Seriously injured in Sarnia General Hospital are: Bonnie Lee Stephenson 13, adopted daughter of Mrs. Stephenson; Mrs. Harriet Watts, 33, of Hamilton, daughter of Mrs. Stephenson.

Private Wesley Clifford Fox, 22, of Camp Ipperwash, said by police to be the driver of the car, was lodged in jail and charged with motor manslaughter. He suffered minor injuries.

Police said the 1933-model sedan, northbound on Highway 21, struck the bridge abutment about 1:10 a.m. One side of the car was almost torn away by the impact.

A United States tourist, who did not give his name, reported the accident. He was quoted as saying:

"The dust was still rising when I reached the scene."

Forest is 25 miles east of Sarnia.

A special appeal for blood donors was made soon after the injured were admitted to the hospital.

IMPORTS FROM U.S. $10 MILLION OVER EXPORTS

Total Export Trade In June $291 Million

Ottawa, July 26—(CP)—Canada increased her exports to the United States by more than $60,000,000 during June and achieved a total export trade of $291,800,000 during the month.

This total, said the bureau of statistics in a preliminary statement on June exports and imports, was greater by $34,000,000 than the June, 1949, exports of $257,400,000.

In sales to the United States, Canada's shipments took a significant jump from $115,600,000 in June last year to $179,850,000 boosting the U.S. share of the Canadian export pie from 45 per cent to more than 60.

Lower Exports to U.K.

In trade with Canada's other important customer — the United Kingdom — sales were not so bright. Exports slipped to $52,620,000 from $61,100,000, indicating a continual paring down of Britain's purchases of Canadian goods.

While sales climbed, Canada's appetite for foreign goods also increased from $250,500,000 in June last year to $282,000,000.

There was a significant increase in purchases from the United States, the total rising from $176,900,00 to $189,800,000.

Other countries, too shared in Canada's accelerated program of imports. The U.K. seeking to increase her supply of dollars, shipped $36,800,000 worth of goods, an increase of $9,800,000. Other Commonwealth countries boosted their sales from $19,200,000 to $23,400,000. From other foreign countries Canada took $32,800,000 worth of commodities, compared with $27,400,000 last year.

The over-all effects of this buying and selling left Canada with a favorable balance of trade of $9,000,000 a climb from $6,900,000 in June, 1949.

Reduces Adverse Trade

Among the individual countries, the month's survey showed that Canada was able to reduce her adverse balance with the United States sharply and that the U.K. was able to do the same with Canada.

Thus, Canada, which had an adverse balance of $61,300,000 in her trade with the United States in June, 1949, was able to cut this down to $9,950,000 in June, 1950.

The United Kingdom, which had an adverse balance of $34,100,000 with Canada last year, was able to pare this down to $15,820,000.

U.S. Ready for Complete Economic Mobilization Freedom Requires

Washington, July 26—(AP) — President Truman today summoned the United States to "some sacrifice" of its civilian plenty. He declared himself ready to call for "complete economic mobilization" if the defence of freedom requires it.

Truman told Congress, in his mid-year economic message, that price ceilings, rationing and "serious shortages" can be avoided if Congress quickly gives him limited control powers and a $5,000,000,000 tax increase.

But he warned: "We must realize that the engagement in Korea will be costly and may not be short. We must prepare against the possibility that new crises may arise elsewhere."

The President said that industrial output must be stepped up—possibly by a rate of $10,000,000,000 annually before Jan. 1— and that basic industry itself must be expanded by federal loans and guarantees.

"We cannot afford longer to risk the possibility of future desperate shortages of some of the most essential requirements for our national security." Truman said.

He did not name steel specifically but it headed his list of "scarcity" materials, despite capacity operation since April.

Safety from further communist aggression depends, Truman said, on "production and more production," and safety from inflation depends on business and consumers alike refraining from "hoarding and avarice."

The message asked no emergency powers beyond those requested a week ago.

It added new pressure on Congress to grant those powers, however, and its keynote was speed—speed in both law-making and munitions-making.

The powers requested, Truman said, not only will meet present needs but will perform another essential service — to "build up our strength to meet any military situation.

"Detailed plans for these further steps" have been drawn, Truman disclosed, and he added:

"If it should become necessary, I shall without hesitation ask the Congress for the grant of the powers to implement these further plans, whether for complete economic mobilization or for further intermediate action depending upon the need."

By DON WHITEHEAD

An Advanced U.S. Command Post in Korea, July 26 (AP) —A United States officer said today North Koreans herded several hundred Korean men women and children before them in this morning's attack around Yongdong.

The non-combatants were used as a shield for four tanks to cross a bridge, said Maj. William O. Witherspoon of San Francisco.

The Americans withheld their fire and the tanks got up to position for attack.

This is the way Witherspoon described the fighting, in which the Americans fell back east of Yongdong. The withdrawal was orderly and casualties were reported not heavy.

Tuesday, the enemy again struck the American right flank at 5 p.m. and fought on after dark in the first major night attack of the war. There was a little enemy artillery fire. The infantry then came swarming though the mountains around the flanks of the unit.

At 1:30 a.m. this morning the North Koreans attacked the American left flank which was drawing back.

This was the drive led by four tanks herding the non-combatants before them. The bridge had been mined by the Americans and they would have blown it up otherwise.

"The Americans just couldn't open fire on those women and children," Witherspoon said.

This gave the tanks a chance to come in close and open direct fire on the American positions

Fortunately, the Americans began late yesterday pulling their artillery back and getting heavy equipment toward the rear

This foresight undoubtedly saved the artillery.

The red flanking movement was a familiar pattern repeating itself with little hope of a chance until reinforcements of American troops—or United Nations forces —are thrown into the fight.

Optimism Vanishes

Says Quick Reinforcement Needed to Save Beachhead

By LIEF ERICKSON

U.S. Eighth Army headquarters in Korea, July 26 (AP) — The American optimism of one week ago now is sorely misplaced.

Quick American reinforcement is vital.

Optimism was high a week ago. Two fresh United States divisions were moving up to the front. There was talk of—even firm plans—for an American attack.

But overwhelming masses of Red troops kept shoving into the vital rail and highway corridor that runs from Taejon southeast of Pusan, the main U.S. supply front.

Red tanks and massed infantry forced the U.S. 24th Division to make a costly retreat from Taejon. Yesterday the communists hammered the U.S. 1st Cavalry Division out of Yongdong.

Meanwhile, a red scythe has made a lightning swing down the Yellow Sea coast and across southwestern Korea. This sweep threatens to envelop the supply lines running from Pusan northward to the front.

Almost certainly the next battle in the Taejon-Pusan corridor will be another delaying action —with another eventual withdrawal.

Kumchon is the next city on the important railway and highway southeast of Yongdong. By air it is 20 miles from Yongdong —30 by a winding course through the mountain valley.

If Kumchon falls, the Americans and South Koreans will lose a vital north-south road net linking the northern front with the Pusan-Kumchon rail and highway routes.

Labor Party Warns Communists Of Punishment for Their Crimes

London, July 26 —(Reuters)— The British Labor party today warned communists in Eastern Europe they would be punished for their "crimes against the workers" when their countries were restored to freedom.

The party's national executive declared that during the last few weeks "the communist offensive against the workers in Eastern Europe has reached a new pitch of fury."

Savage Labor legislation and destruction of trade union rights had caused resistance and unrest in the factories.

Vojtech Dundr, trade unionist with 55 years service in the Labor movement and former general secretary of the Czechoslovak Social Democratic Party, had been sentenced to 19 years hard labor — "a death sentence for a man aged 71."

Zdenek Peska, another Social Democrat and leader of the Czechoslovak Resistance Movement against the Nazis, had been sentenced to 25 years hard labor.

In Hungary over 500 Social Democrats had been secretly imprisoned without trial, the executive claimed.

Many Obstacles Discourage Britain From Developing Groundnuts Projects

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 26 (CP)—Britain's groundnuts (peanuts) plan, which roused political passions and grew few groundnuts, has been scrapped.

Nobody says so officially. It is merely admitted that after three years of controversy, well-meant plans to plant the plains of Africa with groundnuts have been abandoned. The idea now is to transform the original scheme into a broad project for colonial development, leaving the groundnuts to wither as they will.

The groundnuts plan, one of the Labor government's pet projects, started in a fine glow of idealism and quickly became a political headache. From the first, nothing went right. The drive to grow groundnuts—what North Americans call peanuts—encountered obstacle after obstacle from drought and flood to native labor trouble.

Now, it is known, nearly £36,000,000 ($111,600,000) has been spent. In return, this year's yield of oil-bearing seeds is about £350,000. This includes both groundnuts and sunflowers, which were introduced as a substitute when the nuts proved difficult to grow.

When the plan was launched, the hope was to produce essential fats in a hurry to cope with a world shortage. Now Webb says:

"Whether or not those shortages are as valid as they were—which is open to argument — it now seems clear to any realist that it would be unwise to focus the project exclusively on this original purpose of producing fats."

BARUCH CALLS FOR ALL-OUT MOBILIZATION

Must Fully Organize Resources of Nation

Washington, July 26 (AP) — Elder statesman Bernard Baruch today called for all-out economic mobilization of the United States with a quick freeze on prices, wages and rents.

"Events have left us no choice" he said. "We have to mobilize."

Baruch, the government's mobilization adviser in two world wars, urged quick action in testimony prepared for the Senate Banking Committee.

The Senators are weighing a bill to give President Truman limited wartime controls in the present emergency. These would not include price control of any kind.

Not Doing Enough

Baruch's recommendations included—but went far beyond — the President's requests. He has taken the position that the President was not doing enough for preparedness.

"I proposed that we organize ourselves—all our resources of men, money, materials and morale, so that whatever happens—new aggressions abroad, possible destruction at home—whatever happens, the armed forces can get what they need, when they need it, with the least necessary dislocation of the civilians."

Baruch said the U.S. has the choice of "peace or butter" and the real danger is not government control but military defeat abroad and inflation at home.

Present Profiteering

"The situation is sufficiently grave to warrant an over-all ceiling across the entire economy —over—all prices, wages, rents, fees and so on, with high enough taxes to prevent profiteering and to pay all defence costs, and an all-embracing effective system of priorities," Baruch asserted.

SUES HIS LAWYER

Sacramento, Calif., July 26 — (AP) — Quan Shuck Hong wanted to sue a taxicab company after he was injured, he said, by one of its cabs in 1948. The case never developed. So yesterday Quan sued his lawyer for $23,653.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS:

Toronto, July 26 (CP) — Synopsis: Scattered thundershowers were reported just west of Lake Michigan last night and more general showers occurred in the area south of Lake Michigan. In Ontario skies were mainly clear.

Generally sunny skies are forecast throughout the province for today. A few showers are expected in northern sections on Thursday.

Britain, Australia and N. Zealand Join Nations Sending Ground Aid

(By The Canadian Press)

Britain, Australia and New Zealand boosted the roster of United Nations forces pledged to aid United States troops in Korea with offers of ground forces.

In London, Defence Minister Emmanuel Shinwell said Britain is prepared to send Korea "effective land reinforcements including infantry, armor, artillery and engineers along with administrative backing."

Size of the British force was not announced immediately, but Shinwell said it would leave as soon as possible.

Britain already has put into the Korean action her Far Eastern fleet of 22 ships, placed today on a "war footing."

In Ottawa, it was reported that key cabinet ministers are expected to confer today on a possible revision of Canada's stand against sending ground troops to Korea "at this stage."

The new offers raised to five the number of countries pledging ground troops. Turkey and Thailand earlier offered troops. Bolivia said she would send 30 officers.

In Canberra, acting Prime Minister Arthur Fadden announced the decision to send Australian ground troops to aid South Korea. The size of the force will be announced later. Australia earlier contributed a destroyer and fighter planes.

In Auckland, N.Z., Prime Minister Sydney Holland told the House of Representatives that a New Zealand artillery combat force would be added to the United Nations forces. Enlistment of volunteers will begin tomorrow. Size of the force was not announced immediately. Two New Zealand destroyers already are in the Korea fight.

Meanwhile, six RCAF four-engined transport aircraft —Canada's latest addition to the U.N. forces—were on their way to begin service. The dominion already has sent three destroyers —the Cayuga, Sioux and Athabaskan.

Other pledges answering the United Nations resolution calling for aid in fighting the reds in Korea:

Turkey — 4,500 fully-armed troops equipped with United States arms received under the current U.S. military air program.

Thailand—4,000 officers and men.

Bolivia—30 officers.

Waves of Infantry Hurled at Yanks In Yongdong Area

Reports Indicate Hadong May Have Been Recaptured

Tokyo, July 27 — (Thursday) — (CP) — Outnumbered American and South Korean troops clung stubbornly to defence positions Wednesday in the face of "heavy pressure" along all fronts, Gen. MacArthur's headquarters said today.

A field report indicated that the embattled defenders may have recaptured Hadong, only 70 miles by air west of the major American supply port of Pusan, after furious air strikes left the city ablaze.

Headquarters of the United Nations commander in Tokyo, in a release issued at 12:50 a.m. (10.50 a.m. Wednesday EDT), said the U.S. First Cavalry Division had repulsed a number of North Korean attacks on the Yongdong front in the centre of the defence lines. The reds hurled waves of tanks and infantry in an effort to overwhelm the defenders.

Continue Flanking Movement

The fourth North Korean Division was reported continuing its flanking move along Korea's west coast, while the communist Fifth Division was "heavily engaged" on the east coast, somewhere south of Yongdong.

Fresh enemy forces — of undetermined size— were spotted by American pilots pushing south along the east coast from Sanchok, 74 miles north of Yongdok, to back up the red offensive on the extreme right wing of the line. The battle was within 25 miles of the American beachhead and supply port of Pohang where the First Cavalry Division landed one week ago.

Headquarters said "no alarm was felt" over the flanking move of the enemy down Korea's west coast because of the small number of troops involved.

However, north and east of Yongdong where First Cavalry Division lines are under heavy pressure, the reds were streaming through mountainous passes at Yongsan, Chongsan and Ponghwang mountain. These were eight, 13 and 23 air miles respectively north, and east of Yongdong.

Largest Ground Battle

The four-day battle in which the communists won Yongdong earlier this week was the largest ground battle of the campaign thus far, with overwhelming pressure placed on four new U.S. regiments strung along a 25-mile front.

In the Hadong battle, a Fifth Airforce spokesman said the city was subjected to vigorous assault by infantry and planes.

He said carrier-launched planes attacked the central front.

The unconfirmed report of the city's recapture might be the first step by United Nations forces to plug the gap in their shrinking defence perimeter in southeast Korea.

Threaten Pusan

Besides seizing Hadong—which they may have since lost— they pushed the U.S. First Cavalry further away from Yongdong, threatened Pusan, vital U.S. southeastern base, and gathered strength for a running fight down the road to Kumchon from Yongdong. Yongdong was lost in the biggest ground action of the war.

Evidently the communist columns were moving at night. British and American airmen from two carriers flew more than 100 sorties in the southwest, but reported results were "negligible due to a lack of targets."

Revise Defence Plan

AP correspondent Don Whitehead reported the tank-led night attacked on Yongdong pushed the Americans back "farther than their planned withdrawal." He said the defence plan had to be "revised completely."

MacArthur reported the retreat totalled about three miles and was orderly. Heavy artillery and other weapons were saved.

The North Koreans continued attacks against both the 1st Cavalry and the U.S. 25th Infantry Divisions in new defensive positions east of Yongdong.

MacArthur's announcement said that it was still "an indecisive action".

Favored by sunny skies, Allied fighters and bombers hammered relentlessly at enemy communications, railroad marshalling yards and ground forces.

On the east coast, much battered Yongdok took another naval shelling—this time from a U.S. destroyer. Heavy casualties were reported among Red troops in the area.

A Naval announcement reported that, at other points along the coast, ships of the seventh fleet caused between 600 and 700 North Korean casualties.

Fishermen's Dream Comes True —When Pair Bag 22 Four-Pound Bass

Denny Anger and Sid Hewitt, of Hamilton, the bass fishermen's bass fishermen, who were reported last Monday to have hauled in fifteen finny beauties from the near temperate waters of Muscote Bay at an average weight of four pounds each have done it again.

Yesterday afternoon, the midday siesta on Front Street took on the appearance of a carnival as the two men drew up in front of the Ontario Intelligencer office and proceeded to lay out on the walk 22, read em and weep brethren, 22, large huge mouth bass at an average weight of four pounds each.

The extra seven had fallen victim to the pair Monday afternoon following their weekend triumph of 15.

It took no time for a crowd to gather to stare and comment on the haul. General reaction was that most men had seen one or two bass before which could have been as large as the largest yesterday, but never had any of the spectators been overwhelmed with 22 fish of such magnificent and constant size.

Home-Made Lures

"Whatcha catch 'em on, mister?" was the prime question, and the answer turned out to be home-made red-and-white wooden plug, whose piscatorial attractions are such that at one point in the fishing five casts brought in five fish.

A photographer was rushed to the scene to make a permanent record of the event.

When the oohing and ahaaing had been reduced to unbelieving head shaking and low moans, the two visitors from Hamilton stuffed a kit bag full of bass and headed for the deep freeze lockers where the meat was removed from the bones and preserved until next winter sometime. It then will be pushed into public view along the knife and fork circuit as palatable proof of the fishing possibilities in the Bay of Quinte and the prowess of the fishermen who enjoy Lady Luck's smiles.

Missing Yacht Reports Safely At Picton

An all-day sea and air search by two planes from the RCAF station at Trenton and a U.S. Coast Guard cutter ended in Picton last night when the 24-foot C class sailing craft, Cherie, and her crew of three reported in safely after being missing and unreported for 24 hours.

The boat had been blown off course in the Freeman Cup race which started from Youngstown N.Y., last Sunday. Safe on board were Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Lackner of 66 Dale Avenue, Toronto, and Fred Stinson, 17 Haddington, Avenue, Toronto.

A widespread search of the eastern end of the lake was started when it was feared that the Cherie, which has no auxiliary engine, had become dismasted in the storms which troubled all 54 boats in the race. However, aside from a soaking from the high waves, no other distress was reported by the crew when they came into harbor here last night.

Grills Dairy Twice Entered, Money Taken

Someone seems to have a pick on the Grills' Dairy on Coleman Street.

Sunday night operators gained entrance to the building and stole something like $12 in change from the drivers' pouches. Last night there was a repeat performance with $1.74 in change missing and roughly $2,000 in cheques which were to have been delivered today.

Police reported that the cheques would be of no use to the party taking them.

Kinsmen Will Stage Annual Summer Carnival

With proceeds earmarked for their community swimming pool project, the Kinsmen Club will stage their annual summer carnival next week Wednesday through Saturday.

In previous years it has been customary for the club to set its carnival equipment in the downtown section of the city but this year Victoria Park will be the locale. In utilizing this site it will be possible for the club to leave its equipment erected for the entire four nights of the carnival.

A feature of the carnival will be the $175 in cash attendance prizes given away each night. The carnival program will consist of bingo, rides and games of all description.

So starting Wednesday evening the Kinsmen Karnival on Victoria Park will be a centre of attraction. And it's all for a good cause—to swell the fund which will make a swimming pool possible for the kiddies of this city.

Cow Wanders Into Churchill Heights District

Churchill Heights district cannot be termed as exactly being in the country but Tuesday night the residential area must at least have had a country flair.

Police Constable Cook while off duty was returning home to Churchill Heights Tuesday night after midnight when he was more than a little surprised to see a cow walking placidly up the centre of Pine Street. The cow apparently had not heard of traffic regulations and refused to budge so the officer turned out and went on by. On getting home he called the police station and Constable MacDonald went to the scene.

Although he makes no claim to experience on a Western cow range, the officer managed to get the bossie headed in the other direction and it was eventually lodged in a pasture field at the end of the street.

BOAT UPSETS, MAN DROWNS

Orillia, July 26 — (CP) — Raymond Belaire, 19, was drowned last night when an outboard motorboat upset in Lake Couchiching near here. A companion, Ernest Phypher, clung to the boat until rescued. Neither could swim.

BOY DROWNED

Ottawa, July 26 (CP)—George Smith, 15, was drowned early today when he slipped from the rocky banks of the Rideau River at Hog's Back while on an all-night fishing party with his brother and four other companions.

Opinion is Divided as to Method Of Paying for Resurfacing of Streets

Opinion is divided in the city as to the need this year of the proposed paving of Front Street; Bridge Street, West to Highland Ave., and Dundas Street, West from the "Devil's Elbow" to the city limits.

And not only is opinion divided as to the need of the proposed work, but interested citizens are not seeing eye to eye as to the manner of paying for the new pavement should the work be proceeded with.

With the Front Street pavement having been down since back in 1914 many merchants in the business section are in favor of the resurfacing, while the city engineering department has expressed the view that the work needs to be done. Citizens will agree generally that the present pavement with its many patches is rough.

But the rub is how to pay for the resurfacing. Cost of the entire project is estimated at $43,319.

Merchants generally would like to see the Front Street pavement paid for out of the general rate claiming that streets in the business section are used by everyone. But not all Front Street businessmen are of the same feeling.

Mayor H. J. Allin has expressed the view that the cost should be borne on the same principle as when the street was originally paved back in 1914. Then property owners paid for 17 feet out from the curb along their frontage while the city paid the shot for the remaining 12 foot strip in the centre of the street and also for intersections. Front Street is 46 feet wide between the sidewalks.

He said the alternative to this principle would be to have the cost borne out of the general tax rate.

"The merchants would undoubtedly be unhappy if the work was done under local improvement and charged against frontage, but we have the other taxpayers in the city to consider," the mayor observed.

The mayor went on to say that he thought the work of repaving Front Street could be delayed until next year, but said it was necessary to make a major repair in front of the Albert College this year.

Should Not Be Penalized

Many of the property owners along Bridge Street, West, will oppose resurfacing of their street this year if the work is paid for under local improvements. They feel they should not be penalized because of owning residential property on a highway route through the city.

However, if the work was paid for out of the general tax rate, residents have stated they would not object to the work being done this year.

City council has applied to the Ontario Municipal Board for dispensation of a vote in respect to the resurfacing of the three streets and a public hearing with respect to the matter will be held at the Municipal Board's chambers on Monday, July 31st, at 2:00 p.m. All interested property owners supporting or opposing the application will be given an opportunity to be heard at the hearing.

Rev. F. Harback Addresses Club

A brief incident from world history in the third century, with its present interpretation provided the subject matter for an interesting address by Kiwanian Frank Harback to the weekly luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club held Tuesday noon in their club rooms.

The regular speaker was unavoidably absent and at short notice Mr. Harback produced a serious address delivered in a light vein.

The speaker was introduced by Fraser Fulton, and received the thanks of the club as expressed by Cliff Baragar.

Director Everett Fairman was chairman of the meeting in the absence of President Taylor Franklin.

Drying Pastures Cut Milk Yield

Drying pastures in the Bay of Quinte district have been responsible for a falling off in the milk flow, it is stated in the weekly crop report published by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

In Hastings County the milk flow is stated to be falling off quite rapidly, while in Prince Edward County the drop was more gradual.

Haying is near completion with a good average crop reported while fall wheat and rye is being harvested with higher than average yields of wheat being expected.

The picking of a good crop of cherries is in progress in Northumberland County while raspberries are ripening with promise of a fair crop.

Prince Edward County reported spring grain crop filling well. Vining of peas is about completed with the average yield of shelled peas going only about 1,500 pounds this year.

SAIL IN KETCH FOR BRITAIN

Sydney, Australia, July 26 — (Reuters) —Two men and a woman sailed last night in a 35-foot home-built ketch in hopes of reaching Britain. Marine engineer J. Walsh, who is taking his wife and R. Chapman as crew, built the ketch in his spare time.

Bateman Family Meets at Tweed

During the afternoon, races, contests and bingo resulted in a busy time for all. The prize awarded to the eldest person attending was won by Mrs. Jos. Bateman, of Belleville, who is 84, while Mr. Henry Lough of Belleville was the oldest gentleman, being 83. Four-months-old Dorian Bateman son of Mr. and Mrs. Burrell Bateman, Eldorado, was the youngest in attendance. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bates of Plainfield, with five children won the prize for the largest family present. Mrs. E. Moore, of Santa Clare, California, won the honor of coming the longest distance. Mr. and Mrs. Gerald B. Hyde of Belleville, won the prize as the most recently married couple.

Mr. Kenneth Bateman of Eldorado, succeeds Dr. J. H. Bateman of Belleville as president and Mrs. Laurison Ketcheson, Halloway was re-elected secretary treasurer.

Members of the Bateman clan were present from Belleville, Napanee, Toronto, Stirling, Madoc, Eldorado, Trenton and other neighboring communities.

London, July 26 (Reuters) — The Duke of Edinburgh, husband of Princess Elizabeth, is returning to Britain Friday for a month's leave from his navy service in the Mediterranean. Princess Elizabeth is expecting a second baby late in August.

Obituary

MRS. JOSEPH E. SHORTT

Mrs. Joseph E. Shortt, 77 Chatham Street, died suddenly early Wednesday morning at Weslemkoon Lake, where, with her husband, she was spending holidays at their summer home.

The late Mrs. Shortt was born in Toronto and would have reached the age of 75 years had she lived until August 8th. Prior to her marriage she was Florence Roberts, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Dawson Roberts. For the past 24 years she resided in this city and the announcement of her sudden death will bring sincere regret to many friends by whom she was held in high regard. Mrs. Shortt was a member of Bridge Street United Church and for some time took an active part in the work of the Women's Association.

Surviving her are her husband, Joseph E. Shortt; four sons, Joseph Edward Shortt, Sherbrooke, Quebec; Norman Shortt, Detroit, Mich.; Albert Shortt, Toronto; and Charles Shortt, Montreal; two daughters, Mrs. W. Carey (Dorothy) Foster, Detroit, Mich., and Mrs. Ford J. (Evelyn) Chick, Belleville; two sisters, Miss Annie Roberts and Mrs. Frank Lewis, both of Toronto, and one brother, Albert Roberts, Hamilton.

Resting at the Pinkston Funeral Home, Victoria Avenue, at Church Street, late Wednesday evening; the funeral announcement will be made later.

WILLIAM JAMES FAYERS

William James Fayers died early Wednesday morning at his home, 143 North Front Street. He was in failing health for some time.

Born in England the late Mr. Fayers was in his 66th year and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Fayers. For the past 40 years he resided in this city and since 1912 he was employed with the Canadian National Railways, being engaged in the Bridge and Building Department since 1919. He retired last September. Mr. Fayers attended Victoria Avenue Baptist Church and fraternally he was a member of Belleville Lodge No. 81 I.O.O.F.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Gertude Beer Wilson; one son, Edward Fayers, New Toronto; three daughters, Mrs. Russell (Marjorie) Nesbitt, Napanee; Mrs. Bert (Irene) Girling, and Mrs. John (Helen) Harvey, both of Belleville; also six brothers and three sisters in England.

The funeral announcement is made in this edition.

HAROLD O'BRIEN
(Niagara Falls—Tyendinaga)

Harold O'Brien, who was born in Tyendinaga township, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William O'Brien, died in St. Mary's Hospital, Niagara Falls, N.Y., on Tuesday. He was in failing health for some time. He was a member of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, Niagara Falls, N.Y., where he lived for some years.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Mary Agnes McGrath; three sisters, Mrs. Gordon Craig, Belleville; Mrs. Philip McAvoy, Ivanhoe and Mrs. Eugene McAvoy, Stirling; three brothers, William O'Brien and Bernard O'Brien both of Belleville, and Stanley O'Brien of Sarnia.

Resting at the Corrigan and O'Brien Funeral Home, 30 Moira Street west; the funeral announcement will be made later.

WALTER LEE HOULDEN
(Sidney Township)

Frankford, July 26 — Walter Lee Houlden died early Wednesday morning at his home in the 5th concession of Sidney township after an illness of one year's duration.

Born in Sidney township the late Mr. Houlden was in his 49th year and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Mark Houlden. He was engaged in farming and all his life was passed in the district where he was born. He was a member of the United Church.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Pearl May Sharpe; two daughters, Mrs. Harry (Reta) Chard, Frankford, and Mrs. Evan (Jean) Wentzell, Toronto; one son, Mark Houlden at home; one brother, Max Houlden, 5th concession of Sidney township; one sister, Mrs. Claude Sharpe, Meaford; also one grandchild.

The funeral announcement is made in this edition.

IN MEMORIAM

HULL — In loving memory of our dear son, Walter Percival Hull, who was electrocuted one year ago today, July 26, 1949.

He bid no one a last farewell,
He said goodbye to none,
The heavenly gates were open wide,
A loving voice said "Come."
We often sit and think of you,
The things you used to say and do,
We wonder why you had to die
Without a chance to say goodbye.

Always remembered by mother and dad. J26

HULL — In loving memory of our dear brother, Walter Percival Hull, who was electrocuted July 26, 1949.

Today recalls sad memories,
Of a dear brother gone to rest,
And the ones who think of him today,
Are the ones who loved him best.

Always remembered by sisters and brothers. J26

MURRAY — In loving memory of our dear brother, James Murray, who entered into rest one year ago, July 26th, 1949.

In tears we saw you sinking,
We watched you fade away,
Our hearts were almost broken
You tried so hard to stay.
But when we saw you sleeping
So peacefully free from pain,
We could not wish you back
To suffer so much pain again.

So sadly missed and always will be remembered by brothers and sisters and sisters-in-law. J26

Hit by Ball, Umpire Dies

Valens, Ont., July 26 — (CP)— Pheron Cosby, 65, was hit on the head with a baseball while umpiring a game Tuesday night and died within a few minutes.

Cosby, a West Flamborough market gardener, was walking between first and second bases during a warm-up session between the first and second innings of a game between West Flamborough and Valens when he was hit by a wild throw to first base.

Valens is nine miles west of Galt.

BIRTHS

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 26—(CP)—Prices were held to a narrow price path as the session progressed on the Toronto stock exchange today. Signs of recovery of a two-day decline appeared at the opening but the upward movement failed to hold. Volume for the first three hours was 465,000 shares.

Expectation of increased purchases in Canada by the United States of lead, zinc, copper and other metals for armament purposes pushed leading Base Metal stocks higher. Key stocks like Consolidated Smelters and Quemont led the mild advance.

Some early demand pulled a handful of industrials higher but renewed selling at mid-session wiped out the gains. Aluminium Ltd., held the trading spotlight, jumping to a new high at 75 1-4 at the opening but settling to 72, up a point.

Junior gold producers chalked up losses ranging to about 10 cents. McIntyre slipped in senior golds despite an improved quarterly earnings report.

Western Oils also sagged slowly.

HOG PRICES

Toronto, July 26—(CP)—Dressed, Grade A hogs, delivered, were up 25 cents to $32.25 at Hull, Que., this morning.

Hog prices at Stratford, Ont., have not yet been established this week.

BUFFALO LIVESTOCK

Buffalo, N.Y., July 26—(AP)—Cattle 300; good holstein cows quoted 19.50-21.50; good dairy-type heifers for slaughter 23.00-24.00; good weighty sausage bulls 25.00-26.00.

Calves 150; good and choice handyweight calves 31.00-32.00; culls and strongweight bobs 27.00-29.00.

Hogs 550; good and choice hogs 20.00-25.50; good sows 16.00-18.00.

Britain to Send Ground Troops To Korean Front

London, July 26. (Reuters)—Britain will send ground troops to fight in Korea, Defence Minister Shinwell announced today.

He said the government had notified the United Nations that Britain was prepared to send to Korea "an effective land reinforcement".

This would include infantry, artillery and engineers together with the administrative backing required to maintain it.

Shinwell said Britain could not dispatch such a force at a moment's notice but it would be prepared without delay and sent to Korea as quickly as possible.

Measures now being taken to increase Britain's war potential would cost an additional £100,000,000 ($310,000,000), Shinwell said.

Further expenditure beyond this would in all probability be required next year to enable Britain to play her full part under the Atlantic Pact.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, July 26 (CP) —Cattle supply was mostly common to medium quality at the Ontario stockyards today and prices dipped $1-$1.50 a cwt lower for the week. Receipts: Cattle 400; calves 200; hogs, 400; sheep and lambs 190. Left from yesterday were 2,000 cattle.

A few good weighty steers sold $29.50-$30.50 common to medium steers and heifers $20,-$28; medium to good cows $18.50 to $22; good bulls $23-$24; stockers mostly $22-$26.

Calves were strong at $29-$30 for choice vealers; common to medium $20-$28.

Hog prices not established.

Off car lambs sold at $32 for good ewes and wethers; off truck lambs $31, bucks $1 a cwt discount; good light sheep $13-$15.

The egg market continued steady in forenoon buying today. Country shippers quoted graded eggs, cases free: Grade A large, 51; A medium, 49; A pullet, 39; Grade B, 33; Grade C, 28. Wholesale to retail: Grade A large, 54; A medium, 52; A pullet, 44; Grade B, 37; Grade C, 33.

60,000 Pilgrims Visit Shrine

Ste. Anne de Beaupre, Que., July 26—(CP)—A throng of 60,000 pilgrims today celebrated the feast of Ste. Anne in this St. Lawrence riverside town, now one of the famous Roman Catholic shrines in the western world.

Today's ceremonies followed the traditional night-time torch-light procession through the town's narrow streets from the basilica to a memorial chapel commemorating the original chapel of Ste. Anne erected in 1658.

Pilgrims, among them aged sufferer, cripples and ailing children, prayed aloud while they moved up to the "Scala Canta"—28 stone steps built up a grassy slope near the memorial chapel.

During the summer the total number of visitors from all parts of the world will run to about 1,000,000.

Neilson Bats And Pitches Cubs to Win

Speedy St. Louis, like the Wizard of Oz, dipped into his coaching hat last evening and came up with some wonderful magic in the form of a fastball pitcher who may be just what the Belleville Cubs need to humble the front running Sixardee Repairmen in the forthcoming Belleville and District League playdowns. The Cubs, in drawing and quartering the Cannifton Clippers 24-4 last evening sent in Elder Neilson to pitch in the sixth inning. The big righthander, in addition to clouting two home runs and a double in four appearances at the plate came through with seven strikeouts in three innings while limiting the Clippers to three runs and two hits.

The lopsided win consolidate the Cubs second place position in the loop.

Youthful Gabby Moynes, in toiling five innings and allowing but one run and three hits, received credit for the win.

May started for Cannifton and in five innings was shelled for eight hits and twelve runs. Reid came on to douse the fire but only succeeded in heaping fuel on the blaze as the Cubs roared out for four runs on eight hits in one third of an inning. Barberstock went the rest of the way in a hopeless cause.

N. Z. WILL SEND ARTILLERY

Auckland, N.Z., July 26 (CP) —Prime Minister Sydney Holland told the House of Commons today that New Zealand has decided to send an artillery combat force to fight in Korea.

He said enlistment of volunteers would begin tomorrow morning. It was not immediately announced how many men in the government hoped to enroll for the overseas task.

BIRTHDAY COMES TO SHAW

The world's most irascible Irishman celebrates his birthday today. George Bernard Shaw, a millionaire playwright, is 94 years old, and still insists on acting like the child he thinks he is.

Shaw has long been one of the most outspoken men in the world, daring royalty and governments to quieten him. Years before the world realized what communism was or what it might mean to the universe, Shaw had investigated it and pronounced it a fine system. He loves to discredit institutions that the world holds sacred—Christmas, coronations, history.

The man who hates his given name of George and prefers to be known as GBS has, in truth, made the world aware of Shaw. Many are the vcitims of Shavian wit, and many are those who have no use for his sharp tongue. He has called Christmas a "horrible carnival." In 1933, Shaw said that he admired Hitler and his methods, but not his Aryan ideas; in 1937 GBS refused to attend the Coronation, saying that "amateur pageants" bored him.

Shaw, who makes himself appear rdiiculous at times merely for the sake of emphasizing his eccentricity, will not even celebrate his own birthday. He will not grant interviews, will not answer the telephone and refuses to open congratulatory messages. There have been men who ridiculed the Shavian indifference to congratulations, saying that after the excitement was over, GBS would secretly open the messages and revel in them.

Regardless of whether or not Shaw is bluffing, it is a fact that he has made and is making his mark on the world, and if an old man of 94 wants to be eccentric, who are we to quarrel?

WOODLOTS

One of the little realized sources of income from farm land is that from woodlots. Not only is the value of the farm woodlot almost unknown to the purchasing public, but many farmers are overlooking a very lucrative source of income.

Figures released by the National Chemurgic Committee of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce indicate that even though most farm woodlots are the cut-over remains of vast forest tracts, income from this source is comparable, per acre, with that of other farm crops. In one case cited by authorities, a farmer obtained 90 per cent of his net income from dairying, and only five per cent from wood products. Yet, he netted only $1.00 per hour for his dairy operations, as compared with $1.75 in the woodlot. Figures are from a survey made in the Upper Missouri River Valley in the United States.

The monetary gains from the woodlot are not by any means the only value it shows. In addition, land erosion and floods are checked before they get a start. The unfortunate aspect of the situation is that intangible values such as these are not realized for their worth until after the timber has been destroyed.

Ontario, with a production value per acre from farm woodlots of $2.43, is second in line, with Quebec heading the parade with an acreage value of $2.87. Alberta is at the bottom of the list with a value of 59c.

Authorities estimate that Canada has 22,266,082 woodlot acres which yield a total income of about $39,955,176. In Ontario alone, it is felt that there are about 8,000 square miles, or 3,120,000 acres of waste land that should be returned to forest. Of that total, something more than 2,500,000 acres might be operated in a profitable manner.

Farmers who have woodlots in Ontario are in many cases losing not only a profit, but are failing to realize what the operation of such lots may do for their lands.

OLD HORSE

"Old Bill," the ancient horse, believed to have been the oldest in Canada, who died at the age of 41 years a few days after parading in the Smiths Falls Old Home Week celebrations, was one of the "grand old men" of the district comments Brockville Recorder and Times. It has been estimated that his life span of 41 years was equivalent to 150 years in the human life. Although he had enjoyed complete retirement for the past few years, like any other old timer, he probably found the celebrations of Old Home Week a fitting climax to his long career.

A Brooklyn grandma announces, says Hamilton Spectator, that she will attempt to swim the English Channel. She would be a lot more comfortable sitting in her rocking chair, with her feet on a hassock.

In the huge mass of evil as it rolls and swells, there is ever some good working toward deliverance and triumph. —Carlyle.

That is the most perfect government under which a wrong to the humblest is an affront to all. — Solon.

QUARRELSOME A AND B

A and B are a quarrelsome pair,
Whatever the game they play.
It's A contending that B's unfair;
B saying the same of A.
And as wise as Solomon must be he
Who settles the wrangles of A and B.

The official journal of golf I read
Has frequently pages three Entirely filled with the bitter need
Of quarrelsome A and B.
'Tis plain that neither can rest content
'Til a judge has settled their argument.

And B in a row with A.
And this is the question that puzzles me:
Why together they want to play.
I'm sure it would be no fun for me
To golf with either one—A or B.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Down in Texas, they have a dance that they have pretty much made their own; and it is one of the loveliest sight in the world to see it being danced by a big dance floor full of people. It is called "Put Your Little Foot Out." Every social dance, every college and school dance has, for the peak of the evening, this one number. The orchestras usually play it, without warning, somewhere near the full flower of the evening, as you might say. And when the simple little tune breaks forth, the whole crowd suddenly utters an odd little cheer—a cheer with a lump in the throat—and, sweetly, softly, begin to dance.

Not being a dancing man, I cannot say if it is a minuet, a schottise, or which of the old-fashioned measures. As a relief from the jump and bounce of our familiar square dances, "Put Your Little Foot Out," the record of which is to be had, might be extremely popular in this country.

The first time I saw it was on a Christmas Eve in the little Mexican border town of Villa Acuna. In that primitive town is one of the greatest eating places in North America, Maw Crosby's. She is a Mexican lady who married a Gringo, and she serves food that brings Texans over the border in swarms on such occasions as Christmas or New Years.

As we sat eating quail a la Maw Crosby and watching the happy Texan family parties dancin gand celebrating, suddenly the between-dance chatter and roar was hushed. From the Mexican dance band came a simple almost childish lifting tune. That funny little gasp of a cheer rose. Up stood everybody, fathers, mothers, kids, sweethearts, couples, old, young, and stood side by side in pairs holding hands. And with a joy that is utterly indescribable, those Texans converted that dance floor into a completely silent, softly moving sea of radiant dancers, lifting, turning, to the clear small tune. It is a dance that possesses, with an emotion of glorious innocence, both the dancers and the beholders.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

RAY OF GLOOM

Moose Jaw, Sask.— We are in a nine dollar room of Moose Jaw's Grant Hotel tonight, looking down on the town's neon-lit main street, on which every second establishment seems to be a billiard hall, and I'm afraid that the morale of our expedition is scraping bottom.

Earlier, over dinner, we had a formal meeting with the full quorum in attendance, and discussed the pros and cons of the question: "Is it worthwhile to keep on going?"

It took a pretty black day to get us down to that essential question. It was that kind of a day.

As chairman, I opened this glum session with a resume of certain well-established facts.

"Well, girls," I said, "We had better face it. The roads are even worse than we'd expected they'd be. It doesn't look as if they're going to get any better. The trailer just can't stand up to them, as we found out today to our sorrow.

"We are having such a time getting from place to place we just aren't discovering the country the way we hoped we would. Should we call it off? Or sneak down through the States to get around the prairies? Or should we carry on this way?

Brown Eyes took the stand in defense of the original plans. "This is supopsed to be a report on a Canadian trailer trip, good or bad," she pointed out. "It's no picnic now, but we've had some good times and it's all been interesting and I think we ought to press on."

We didn't bother to put it to a vote. Just got out the maps and figured our next jump eastward.

Liquid Lane

The trouble again today was roads. Or what the Saskatchewan government laughingly refers to as roads.

Before we left Medicine Hat I'd been reading a report on this province by Cecil Carnes, an American travel writer whose book, "You Must See Canada" is worth reading.

Carnes had been surprised to find that Saskatchewan is brutally frank about its highways. A Tourist Bureau official he questioned said firmly, "In most cases, if it has rained, you can't drive over them." Carnes' own word, after looking them over, was simply, "atrocious."

I was remembering his description when we left Alberta behind. The road from Medicine Hat is black top until the provincial border. The border is marked by a modest sign saying, "Welcome To Saskatchewan." Before you can say a mental "thank you" a washboard gravel surface starts to give you a rivet-gun jolting.

After a few teeth-chattering miles of this highway—good old Trans-Canada Highway No. 1—we came upon one of the inevitable detours. It looked like a country lane and when we turned into it we saw it leading through the rippling grain fields for 20 or 30 miles ahead. "Right into the sky," as Judy put it.

It had been raining in these parts. This foolish little road was like milk chocolate that's been sitting in the sun. In ten minutes the trailer was larded with mud.

Occasionally we'd come to a dip and plunge with a prayer through a small lake of sepia water.

The car and trailer slithered from one slick to the other. Only luck kept it from the deep gumbo on either side. Two trucks hadn't been as lucky. They were buried down to their running boards in goo. The drivers sat patiently in their cabs, smoking cigarettes, waiting for help.

There must have been 40 miles of this torture. When we squirted out of it finally, 20 miles from Moose Jaw, we'd lost our last, stubborn faith in Canadian roads.

Tired Home

Ten miles farther along the trailer's right hand tire blew out. Before I could get it under control our travelling home was in the ditch, leaning at a perilous angle, and with all that mud on it looking a pretty sorrowful sight.

I'd been expecting something like this right along. Our rig has been taking some severe punishment from old No. 1. On a hard surface she glides along beautifully, but on the kind of road that girds our proud dominion she takes a brutal beating, clearly not anticipated by the manufacturers.

We unhitched the car, drove into town and picked up a mechanic and a jack that would lift baby up. Turned out that not only the heavy tire and "puncture-proof" tube were shot to pieces, but the wheel itself was squashed beyond repair.

They towed her into town and squeezed her through the door of a garage and tonight there's a mechanic, at time-and-a-half, trying to get her back into shape again. It's the first time in two months that we've been out of our "home" and although the kids are delighted with a hotel room and the magic of room service, we're getting just a little tired of facing a new crisis every time we move.

I am still hopeful that we can get this away from being a road report and into something a little more entertaining and hope you will bear with us. We will get to the other side if we have to haul the thing by our teeth.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

RELIGION

Religion is what has given to human beings their greatest comfort and hold on life. All about us are the facts confirming the existence of a creative and ever mindful God. There is born wihin us all the urge to be better, kinder, and more helpful to others. Planted within us all is the seed of God.

I like to think of all out-of-doors as God's great Cathedral, especially away from the marts of trade and the teeming swarms of people whose greatest thought is for gain. You don't have to hunt for God, for He is everywhere. In every flower He abides, and His voice echoes through forests, valleys, over mountain tops and into the humblest of homes.

I regret all cults, dogmas, and associations that do not glorify God as the supreme idea beyond all formal manifestations. I don't like to see God divided up. He should be one everywhere, for His works and influence are universal.

Religion has seeped through all the races of man from the earliest of times. The savages have theirs to this day. It is essential to our happiest development that we cling to a religious faith. The best religion is not that one which is heralded afar, but that one which abides most in one's heart, giving hope and solace. That religion which is felt, not spoken, but acted out. Its name in itself, is unimportant.

Ever since the world began, religious nations have made the greatest progress, and have contributed most to the happiness of their people, as well as benefitting all nations. In a free democracy, no matter what the faith of an individual may be, it is his to cherish and abide by, without question of interference. So long as God is in the centre, that's all that matters.

The moment that God gets into the human heart He starts doing things—cleaning things up and renovating life itself for such a one. It should be an outstanding event, a happy day to celebrate, not once a year, but every day of one's life.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

(Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease diagnosis, or treatment will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letter should be brief and written in ink Owing to the large number of letters received only a few can be answered here. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address: Dr. William Brady, care of this newspaper.)

PRINCIPAL FUNCTION OF THE LIVER

The liver is the largest gland in the body. It weighs 3½ pounds more or less. It lies in the northwest territory of the abdomen with the accent on the dough—by now, I hope, most readers of this column know that the abdomen is the great body cavity containing the liver, stomach, spleen and intestines and it is not the belly nor the diaphragm nor the stomach, as some prudes would have it.

Bile formation is only one of the functions of the liver and one of the less important functions at that. Another name for bile is gall. Perhaps we may talk about the formation of secretion of bile, the bile or gall ducts and the gall bladder some other time. Right now the part played by the liver in carbohydrate metabolism (assimilation and utilization of starch and sugar) should be of interest to every one, whether he or she be a diabetic, a potential diabetic or not. A potential diabetic is a person who has inherited the tendency to develop diabetes, but whether he or she actually develops diabetes depends largely upon the way he or she lives—and according to Joslin and other authorities there are now 35,000,000 potential diabetics in the United States. For practical facts about this study Training for Diabetes, for which send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope. For a pattern basic health diet or reduction diet or corrective protective diet, on which to build your own, and other instructions on how to live, study the booklet The 7 Keys to Vite, available on the same terms.

Any and every kind of starch and/or sugar one may take as food is converted by digestion into glucose, otherwise called grape sugar or dextrose. The glucose is absorbed from the intestine directly into tributaries of the portal vein and so carried to the liver, where most of it is stored in the form of glycogen, otherwise called animal starch. Some of the glucose passes through the liver into the systemic circulation.

In the healthy person there is a constant level of sugar in the blood, even in the morning before any food is taken—the normal fasting blood sugar level is between 80 and 100 milligrams of glucose per 100 cubic centimeters of blood—roughly 1½ grains of sugar in 3½ fluidounces of blood.

In half an hour after a person takes up to 200 grams (less than half a pound) of sugar in any form the blood sugar level rises to 140 or 160 milligrams per 100 cubic centimeters, owing to some of the glucose passing through the liver into the systemic circulation. During the next hour, however, the blood sugar level falls to its original 80 to 100 milligrams per 100 cc. as the excess of sugar is burned to yield muscular energy (work, play, exercise) or stored in the muscles and other tissues.

The storage of fuel (glycogen, animal starch) in the liver and the release or liberation of precisely the amount of this vital source of energy required in an emergency or for maintenance of the ordinary vital functions (basal metabolism) is the most important function of the liver.

Carbohydrate metabolism is influenced to a considerable degree by vitamins of the B complex, particularly thiamine. This is a bit of new knowledge which concerns everybody's health. I think Right here I'll quote only one co-author of Vitamin B1 and its Use in Medicine (Macmillan), referring to the general use refined white flour: "Man commits a crime against nature when he eats the starch from the seed and throws away the mechanism necessary for the metabolism of that starch."

Think this over every time you eat a piece of white bread, cracker, cake, and be sure to keep your subscription paid up, so you will get the talks to follow, on this "mechanism", which I call poor man's insulin.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Make No Bones About It

Is powdered beef bone digestible? Is it a good way to get calcium? Can you tell me how much to take and how to powder or grind it fine enough. Food stores do not have it. (S. E.)

Answer — Much simpler and better to get calcium from calcium rich foods such as milk, cheese, nuts, eggs (yolks), peas, beans, cabbage, oranges, apples, celery, turnips, wheat. Most of us suffer various ailments because of insufficient calcium in our everyday diet.

Can't Check a Woman's Tongue

Daughter, 20, has badly coated tongue. I have begged her to go to a doctor to check it but thinks that would be silly, as she feels perfectly well. (Mrs. T. G.)

Answer—So do I. If it has any significance at all it merely suggests that she should eat more fresh fruit and fresh vegetables, particularly the salad greens.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

WE CAN'T BEAT THE GAME

In oriental countries a goad or sharp-pointed stick used to be—and sometimes still is—attached to the front of a plow. If the oxen drawing the plow began to kick, they find their kicking not only futile but painful. The plowman does not punish them by prodding them with a pointed stick; the pointed stick, or goad, is part of the plow.

So it is in the spiritual universe of which we are a part. Retribution does not come upon us when we offend against the moral law; retribution is built into the moral law. It is a part of it, just as the goad was a part of the ancient plow. When we try to kick against the moral law, and to transgress it, we experience about the same thing the oxen experience. And this not because God is angry with us and has reached down his hand to punish us, but because the moral law is equipped with a goad which automatically punishes us if we kick against it.

Yet people still go on believing that they can beat the universe. Just like the poor, empty-headed folk who step up to a slot machine and think that they can win a rigged equipment, so many people defy the universe and think they can get away with it.

But they can't. It is hard always to kick against the goad.

News of Trenton

Delegation Meets With Doucett On Maintenance of Road Costs

Trenton (Special) — A delegation representing all the communities and municipalities in this district served by the Stirling Highway No. 33, met with Highways Minister Hon. George Doucett in Toronto this morning to discuss the question of responsibility for repairing and maintaining the mile and one half stretch of the road from the subway to the town limits.

The delegation included Mayor Couch and council, Bruce Jandrew, Reeve of Murray, and Warden of the United Counties, the reeve of Frankford and a representative of the Bata Shoe Company.

Purpose of the meeting with the minister is to try and get the Ontario government to assume some responsibility for fixing the part of the road inside corporation, which is badly in need of repair.

The land through which the road passes is not built up and the amount of taxes collected on the adjacent property does not begin to meet the cost of maintaining the highway.

As a result, Trenton council has been trying to obtain assistance from the government in order to keep the road in repair. However, the provincial government is not responsible for maintaining roads in incorporated towns such as Trenton. Early this month, Murray council met with Trenton council to discuss the problem.

Reeve Jandrew was not agreeable to the suggestion that Murray take over the strip of highway and in turn hand it over to the province because he said he was afraid the township might be stuck with the road if the province refused to accept responsibility for it.

At the time of the joint meeting, Warden Jandrew said that in his opinion "it would be best to get the Ontario government to pass a special act incorporating the road section into the provincial road system."

Ballplayer Found Guilty of Assault Fined $1, Costs

Trenton—(Special)— Charged with assault occasioning bodily harm, Maurice "Lefty" Reid, Trenton, was found guilty and fined $1 plus $58.40 in costs by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in Police Court, Tuesday afternoon.

Reid was charged with striking Lionel Holmes of Campbellford, during a fracas which developed during a Campbellford-Trenton softball game at Bayshore Park on June 26th. The blow broke Holmes' jaw in two places.

Prior to striking Holmes, Reid had hit plate umpire Owen Hendy in the mask and as a result, Hendy ordered Reid out of the game. Several witnesses testified that in the melee which followed, Holmes pushed to the centre of the crowd and told Reid he would likely be thrown out of the league for his actions.

On hearing Holmes' remarks, Reid broke away from the players who were restraining him in an effort to quell the disturbance and on freeing his left arm, Reid struck Holmes on the jaw.

Not Premeditated

In summing up the evidence, defence counsel F. L. Ward of Picton said, "All of us who indulge in ball games know that there is bound to be some rowdyism. While it is a matter of great regret that this occurrence took place, it is not an ordinary charge under this section of the criminal code, since there is no evidene of preconceived intent. If the story told by defence witnesses is true, and Reid was not in a position to give fine measured judgment in the situation, I do not think he should be convicted of a criminal offence."

Assistant crown attorney, S. G. Robertson did not question Mr. Ward's summary and Magistrate Wills said he was satisfied that "Reid had no intention of causing serious injury." In passing judgment, Magistrate Wills gave Reid two weeks to pay the fine and costs.

Lightning Thought Cause of Barn Fire at Smithfield

Trenton—(Special)— Lightning is believed to have started a blaze which destroyed a $4,000 barn on the farm of H. C. Alexander, Smithfield. The loss was partly covered by insurance.

A garage and hen house were badly damaged and the farmhouse was threatened when sparks caught on the roof. Trenton Fire Department was called and Fire Chief Harry Fillon stated that the firemen concentrated their efforts on saving the outbuildings as the barn was beyond saving when the fire engine arrived.

A birthday party for Mrs. Alexander was in progress when the fire was first noticed. Mrs. Alexander reports that her son who is home from Sudbury and a number of neighbors who were present for the occasion had just presented her with a new refrigerator when the flames were seen bursting through the roof of the barn. Praising the efforts of neighbors and Trenton Fire Department, Mrs. Alexander said, "If it had not been for the assistance of Trenton firemen, the house would have been lost also."

Several spray outfits from nearby farms were rushed to the scene of the fire, and Fire Chief Fillon stated that the spray tanks supplied the fire truck with water to put out the fire.

The barn was filled with this season's entire hay crop said Mr. Alexander, and a quantity of grain and a wagon were also lost in the blaze. There was no stock in the barn when the fire broke out.

MARSH HILL

Marsh Hill—Several ladies attended a Tupper Ware demonstration at the home of Mrs. Charles Ross, Thursday night.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Finkle and Mrs. Frank Finkle attended the wedding of their nephew, Mr. James Palmer and Miss Malda Woodley in Christ Church, Belleville Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Campbell were guests on Sunday of Mrs. George Foster of Moira.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Finkle and girls were dinner guests, Sunday, of Mr. and Mrs. Boulter Johnston of Harold.

On Monday night the men of Marsh Hill Church removed the seats from the church as new pews are expected in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. Berson Mitts and family were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Coulter, of Tweed.

SUGAR WAS A PRIZED ITEM

These New York women are shown reaching for a five-pound bag of sugar that was among the last this grocer had in his store. Sugar, among other items, was running from 15 per cent to 50 per cent higher in volume buying in New York as fears of wartime shortages mounted. Canadian stores report little or no higher-than-usual demand for consumer goods. — Central Press Canadian.

Never Underestimate The Power of a Bee

Montreal, July 26 — (CP)— A queen bee has successfully challenged a huge four-engined constellation aircraft in sunny Holland.

The battle, reported by Capt. Bill Powell who flew the big plane from Holland to Montreal, started when the bee was attracted by the warm, sun-baked concrete of the Dutch runway.

She setted on the wing, Powell said, and immediately thousands of bees following the queen settled there too. Before long the swarm rolled across the wing into the cabin.

The plane was grounded—no one would go near the determined bees.

Finally a maintenance man, who claimed to be an amateur bee-keeper, appeared with a stick and basket and gently wiped the queen into the basket and walked away. In a few minutes the obedient followers flew after her.

-WEDDINGS

CAMKEN—BAIN

A pretty candlelight wedding was solemnized in Springbrook United Church on Saturday, July 1, at 12 o'clock, when Ruth Ann, daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bain, of Bonarlaw, became the bride of Kenneth Frank Camken, son of Mr. Frank Camken, of Belleville, and the late Mrs. Camken. The Rev. H. E. Beare, pastor of the church, officiated at the double-ring ceremony, before a lovely background of ferns and peonies.

Mrs. Florence McKeown rendered the wedding music, and Miss Carmen Sine, soloist, sang before the ceremony "O Promise Me", and during the signing of the register ,"I Love You Truly."

"The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an exquisite gown of white eyelet nylon over white satin, featuring a molded bodice buttoned down the back, nylon yoke with neckline outlined with pearls, long, tight-fitting sleeves ending in lily points over the hands the full skirt fell gracefully into a full length train. Her full length veil of embroidered silk, tulle illusion fell from a pearl encrusted halo, and she carried a cascade bouquet of red roses.

Miss Alma Vartanian, of New York, was maid of honor, wearing a pale blue satin gown featuring net panels and jacket. Her shoulder length veil fell from a matching cap of blue satin. She wore matching gloves and carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses, white carnations and blue delphiniums.

The two bridesmaids, Miss Mary McInroy and Miss Frances Schrieder, both of Belleville, wore similar gowns of organdy, the former in pink and the latter in mauve, with matching picture hats, and gloves. They carried similar cascade bouquets to that of the maid of honor.

Mr. James Strong, of Ottawa, was groomsman, Mr. John Connell of Belleville, and Mr. Kenneth Bain, Jr., of Toronto, brother of the bride, were ushers.

Following the ceremony, the reception was held in Springbrook Orange Hall, where the bride's mother, gowned in navy sheer with white accessories, and wearing a corsage of white gardenias and carnations, assisted by the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Ralph Bowerman, of Toronto, who wore pale blue taffeta with white accessories and corsage of white carnations and blue delphiniums, received with the bridal party.

For the wedding trip to New York City, the bride chose a pale blue ensemble with white and navy accessories and shoulder corsage of white, baby orchids. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Camken will reside in Belleville.

Guests from a distance included: Mr. and Mrs. William Vogan, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Ketcheson, Miss Betty Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Wilson, Mr. Ralph Bowerman, all of Toronto; Mr. Fred Miles, Capreol, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bangay, Brighton; and Mr. Harold Runnalls, Kingston, Ontario.

Those who entertained the bride, prior to her marriage, were, Mrs. Dorothy Bremner, and Mrs. Ed. Schrieder, both of Belleville, and Mrs. Hazel Mumby, of Springbrook, Ont.

BLATHERWICK—PHILLIPS

Bridge Street United Church was the scene on Tuesday, July 25, at 4 p.m., of a pretty, but quiet wedding when the Rev. Donald C. Amos united in marriage, Nellie Allietha, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Phillips, of Madoc, to Thomas William Blatherwick, son of Mrs. Thomas Blatherwick, of Belleville, and the late Mr. Blatherwick.

The bride was gowned in a becoming powder blue dress, and hat, with white shoes and gloves, and corsage of pink roses.

Miss Winnifred Hopkins of Belleville, attended the bride, gowned in dusty rose, with white accessories and corsage of matching roses.

Mr. James Elliott, of Belleville, attended the bridegroom.

Following the reception which was held at Golden Acres, Belleville, the happy couple left for New York City, the bride travelling in navy blue sheer with white accessories. They will reside in Belleville upon their return.

The bride, prior to her marriage was the guest of honor at three lovely showers: a linen, held by Miss Winnie Hopkins at the home of Mrs. Gordon Crake, Bleecker Ave.; a cup and saucer shower, held by Mrs. Clinton Brown and Mrs. Ronald Graham at the home of Mrs. Phillips, Foster Ave., and a miscellaneous shower by the ladies of Remington, Ont., held at the home of Mrs. Fred Holmes, Remington.

The bride was also the recipient of a beautiful coffee table and table lamp from the foreman and employees of the Corbin Lock Company.

SINE—COULTER

Lilies and pastel tinted Summer flowers formed a lovely background in Holloway Street United Church, on Monday, July 24, at 2 p.m., when Alberta June, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Grant Coulter, of Belleville, was united in marriage to Reginald Garth Sine, son of Mrs. Reginald C. Sine, of Belleville, and the late Mr. R. C. Sine. The Rev. Lloyd Shorten, of Toronto, officiated.

Mr. Harold McNish, organist of the church, provided the wedding music, and Mr. Frank Tummon, soloist, sang before the ceremony, "The Lord's Prayer", and during the signing of the register, "I'll Walk Beside You".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in her floor-length gown of white embossed organdy, featuring a molded bodice, Peter Pan collar, long sleeves coming to points over the hands, full skirt falling into a short train. Her fingertip veil fell from a smartly shaped poke with pearl trim, and she carried a shower bouquet of Johanna Hill roses, intermingled with maline, stephanotis and white lace.

Miss Marjorie Branscomb, of Brighton, and Miss Rita Christie, of Foxboro, were bridesmaids, gowned alike in floor length gowns of pale yellow taffeta, fashioned with bouffant skirts, molded bodices, Peter Pan collars with matching yellow mitts, and yellow net picture hats, featuring open crowns edged with folds of transparent braid. Both carried baskets of yellow roses with cascades of mauve sweetpeas.

—and when it comes to USED TRUCKS, come to TRUDEAU'S and get TRUE VALUE — they cost less, too.

Little Patti Tummon, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl, demure in her floor length frock of pale green, hand-embroidered organdy. She carried on old fashioned nosegay of yellow roses and mauve sweetpeas.

Mr. Robert Cooke, of Windsor, was groomsman and Mr. Raymond Coulter, Belleville, brother of the bride, and Mr. Gerald Heagle, of Stirling, were ushers.

The reception was held in the church parlors, where the bride's mother, wearing a street length two-piece navy silk ensemble with white accessories and corsage of Rubin lilies, assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who wore a street length gown of brown figured silk with brown accessories, and corsage of roses, received the guests.

Later, the young couple left for a wedding trip to the east coast and Maine, the bride travelling in a white linen suit, with navy accessories and corsage of Rubin lilies. They will reside in Belleville, upon their return.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was entertained by Miss Margaret Hillis, The Misses Phyllis Beatty and Sandra Gilmour were co-hostesses in her honor at the home of Mrs. Dorland Houston.

A gift from the teachers of Pine Street School was presented at a tea at the home of Mrs. E. Fairman.

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Spencer, of Foxboro, also entertained for the bride and bridegroom.

Mrs. J. Salmon Honored by Friends On Birthday

Latta.— A birthday party was held on Thursday afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock, at Plainfield, to celebrate Mrs. Jack Salmon's birthday. There was a good representation and she received a lovely gift from each one present and also from a few who were unable to be there.

After visiting for a while, Mrs. Salmon opened each present and read each birthday card, graciously thanking all for the pretty and useful gifts. She enjoyed her party very much.

All sang 'Happy Birthday" and "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow". Refreshments were served and Mrs. Salmon cut the birthday cake and served tea. A number had tea cups read by two ladies and enjoyed a social afternoon.

The next birthdays which occur on August 26, and 28, will be held together.

MUST ATTEND SUNDAY SCHOOL

Bloomington, Ind., July 26 — Milton Raney, 53, yesterday traded a six-month drunken driving sentence for six months of Sunday school. Mayor Thomas L. Lemon rescinded the jail sentence when a Salvation Army worker pleaded that Raney's wife is ill and would have been left without support. Lemon ordered Raney to attend Salvation Army Sunday School sessions for six months.

WOOLER

Fine Program Marks Opening Community Centre

Wooler—All roads led to Wooler on Thursday evening when 800 people gathered on the Fairgrounds for the opening of the Murray Township Community Centre.

Mr. Charles Brown, who was chairman of the evening's program, gave a brief outline of this community project from the beginning last spring until the successful completion, much of the necessary work having been done voluntarily by interested citizens. A total of $2,198.50 had been donated and collected by the canvassers.

The R.C.A.F. Drum and Bugle Band delighted the large audience with half an hour of music, after which addresses were given by Hon. W. A. Goodfellow, Minister of Welfare; Dr. Fred Robertson, M.P. of Cobourg; Mr. John Callahan of Toronto and Warden Bruce Jandrew. Mr. Jandrew officially declared the ball ground opened and the floodlights were turned on.

Mr. P. J. Wessels, now 86 years of age, is the oldest man in the community who played on a ball team in his younger days. He was asked to pitch the first ball on the new diamond, while Dr. Robertson batted and Hon. W. A. Goodfellow acted as catcher. Warden Jandrew was on first base and Mr. John Callahan on second.

The evening closed with a Trent Valley League game between Frankford and Wooler, the score being 12-4 in favor of Wooler.

'Shy and Bashful' Youth Wants to Back Out of Lessons

Chicago, July 26 (AP) — A "shy and bashful" young man claims that dancing teachers with the wiles of Cleopatra and the lure of Lorelei induced him to sign up for 500 hours of dancing lessons.

He wants to back out.

Alfred Merki, 23, sued yesterday to have voided $2,782 in promissory notes which he signed for instruction at a dance studio. He says he has 50 lessons— paid for in cash—behind him.

Three Homicides Of Five Unsolved

Toronto, July 26 (CP) —Three of the five homicides that shocked and horrified this city in the space of five days nearly a year ago remain unsolved.

From July 28 to Aug. 3 last year, five persons were killed. Two of the cases were quickly solved and two men were sent to penitentiary for manslaughter.

But police still are searching for the bandit who shot down Arthur Layng when he attempted to interfere with the holdup of a groceteria July 30. They also are confronted with the mysterious killing of Robert Mackay who was found lying in a ditch shot through the head and his wife, Gloria, who was found shot to death a day later in a vacant lot half-way across the city.

Rearmament's Aim to Prevent Aggression

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

The United States' sudden shift from a program emphasizing economic well-being to a tremendously-costly rearmament project, coupled with a similar move among her Atlantic Pact allies in western Europe, puts an entirely new complexion on life for the democracies—and it isn't a rosy one.

That's not predicting another global war. On the contrary, this rearmament is calculated to forestall any possible aggression. It is recognition of the increasingly-obvious fact that military weakness among the democracies now would be an invitation to attack.

Rape of Korea Warning

The rape of Korea has been fresh warning of Moscow's project of wearing us down economically and militarily by isolated assaults. It's the old divide-and-conquer scheme, and numerous similar red attacks appear in the offing.

As a matter of fact, communism may have cut its own throat by the Korean aggression. Had it not been for Korea, the U.S. and the western European members of the Atlantic Pact would have pushed steadily along with their economic welfare programs, and this would have been done at the expense of wholesale rearmament.

Now the search for security has suddenly shifted from the ideal of balanced budgets to air-tight military strength capable of meeting any eventuality.

Until recently the western allies had figured that it would take Russia three or four years to reach economic and military preparedness. Now they suddenly find that this estimate was far too optimistic.

The London Times comments on the situation:

"The time may be nearer than had been thought when the Soviet government may feel itself free to go ahead with expansion and war, confident of being able to cope with any military reactions of which the western powers are capable."

N. Koreans in Japan Asked to Destroy U.S. Military Bases

Tokyo, July 26 — (AP) — The Korean communist radio is urging Koreans in Japan to destroy United States military bases—by suicide tactics if necessary.

A broadcast from Pyongyang, North Korean capital, last night also asked Koreans in Japan to obstruct the flow of American supplies from Japan to South Korea.

Addressed to "our 65,000 compatriots in Japan," the broadcast as heard here said:

"Launch immediately on suicide squad activities . . . cooperate with Japanese workers and obstruct the transportation of military supplies . . . destroy military bases. Overthrow the reactionary cabinet of Japan. Your motherland strongly appeals to you."

LONDON TO REPLACE TRAMS

London, July 26 — (CP) — At a cost of £9,000,000, ($27,000,000) what remains of London's ancient tramways system is to be scrapped and replaced by a fleet of streamlined buses.

More than 830 double-decker trams are still on the streets. The system's 2,400 tram drivers are being trained to handle the new electric and motor-driven vehicles.

U.S. SAID TO BE READY

Washington, July 26—(AP)— The United States today was reported ready to authorize a strengthening of police forces in Western Germany to bolster internal security. Informed American officials said, however, the U.S remains firmly opposed to the idea of creating a big, centralized federal police force.

First Published Text Book On Atomic Defence of Cities Is Issued in Great Britain

London, July 26 (Reuters) — The government has issued the first published text book in atomic defence of cities. Britons were told protection against the deadly results of radioactivity is a practical proposition.

The book issued as a manual of basic training for civil defence said casualties from an atomic bomb among an unprepared population would be "formidable."

Garden shelters used in the last war would be useful for personal protection, the book said. The shelters usually were made of earth piled over a steel arch. Brick and concrete would be better than wood for protection and thick masonry could remove danger of radioactivity completely.

It warned that any unprotected person within a half mile of the centre of an atomic explosion would die. Those three-quarters of a mile away would have a 50-50 chance of survival.

One atom bomb exploded in the air above a city would ruin 30,000 houses in a one-mile radius, badly damage 35,000 houses to a further radius of 1 1-2 miles and slightly damage 50,000 to 100,000 houses within the same 1 1-2 miles outer radius.

The book recommended that individuals carry a "dosimeter" —a fountain pen sized gadget with which a person could measure the effect of radiation on himself.

Steel Market 'Whirlpool Of Uncertainty'

New York, July 26—(AP)—The Iron Age, metal-working trade weekly, describes the steel market today as "a whirlpool of frenzy and uncertainty" resulting from what it called slow-motion proding by the administration for "painless" controls.

"There are plenty of takers for anything that looks like steel, and price consciousness is fading fast," the publication reports.

Saying that the manufacturer "has not been provided with rules governing the procurement battle," the Iron Age says that "this has turned the race for steel into a mad scramble, with no holds barred."

Steel people face a dilemma, the trade weekly says, adding:

"What is a military order? Which civilian orders are essential and which are non-essential? Who should get more steel and who should get less? The steel market will keep whirling until these definitions are spelled out, clearly and concisely."

Military orders were reported slow in coming. But the Iron Age said a sizeable military build-up is definitely on the way.

Steel production this week was listed at 99.5 per cent of rated capacity, with some mills still handicapped by vacations.

HUSBAND REMANDED

Toronto, July 26 (CP) —Michael Josefacki, 31, yesterday pleaded guilty to charges of stabbing his wife and was remanded for sentence until Friday. Police testified he stabbed his wife during an argument after accusing her of being unfaithful to him. They added there was no evidence of any misconduct by his wife.

Birthday Mail Of GBS Smallest For Long Time

London, July 26—(Reuters) — George Bernard Shaw, who is 94 today, may finally have succeeded in persuading his "public" to ignore his birthday.

Well-wishers have long been in the habit of sending birthday greetings and correspondence to the little village of Ayot, St. Lawrence, near London, where Shaw lives.

This year, however, he is said to have received the smallest birthday mail for a long time. But it can't be interpreted as a decline of interest in G. B. S. whose pungent comments on world affairs, people and events still radiate from St. Ayot.

Another veteran British author, Hilaire Belloc, celebrates his birthday tomorrow. Belloc is younger than Shaw by 14 years.

An invitation to celebrate Belloc's birthday was recently sent to Shaw, who answered: "Tell Hilaire he may want to live to be 100, but he won't when he is 94."

You'll Prove an Expert Jam Maker
The First Time you try this Easy, 5-Point, Short-Boil Way!

The modern, short-boil way of making jam with CERTO is so quick, easy and sure it's hard to believe . . . until you try it!

It's the natural way, too, because CERTO is fruit pectin (the natural substance in fruit that causes it to "jell") in concentrated form. These 5 points, typical of CERTO recipes, explain how CERTO simplifies jam making.

Point 1 ONE MINUTE BOIL
With CERTO you don't have to "boil down" your fruit to make it set. You boil hard ONE MINUTE only. That cuts down by two-thirds the time needed for making jam the old, long-boil way!

Point 2 2 lbs. FULLY RIPE FRUIT
You use RIPE fruit at the peak of flavor and color (Long-boil recipes call for under-ripe fruit.) The one-minute boil does not dull this lovely natural color or spoil the ripe fruit taste. So your jam keeps the taste and color of fresh fruit.

Point 3 3 lbs. of SUGAR
A pound of jam made with CERTO contains no more sugar than a pound made the old long-boil way.

Point 4 4 ozs. of CERTO
You add a half-bottle (4 ozs.) of CERTO to ensure the correct ratio of pectin to fruit and sugar for a perfect set. That ends guesswork, CERTO helps all fruits to jell perfectly.

Point 5 5 lbs. of JAM
There's no "boiling down" with CERTO, so you average a 50% greater yield from the same amount of fruit. You get about 5 lbs. of jam where long-boil recipes would only yield about 3 lbs!

USE THIS RECIPE BOOKLET

Follow the Recipes Exactly

Under the label of every CERTO bottle is a book of tested recipes . . . one for each fruit because different fruits need different handling. RESULTS ARE SURE if you follow the simple directions EXACTLY. . Get CERTO at your grocer's.

Quebec Hockey Interests Ask For New Deal

(By The Canadian Press)

The Quebec Senior Hockey League doesn't like the idea of waiting another year before setting up a super-senior status for the richer leagues of Canada.

Representatives of the seven teams, meeting in Montreal last night, decided to oppose the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's decision to shelve the major series project.

They said they will ask that the C.A.H.A. reconsider its decision.

The major series would include teams from the Q.S.H.L., Ontario Hockey Association, and western Canada Senior League. They would play off for a separate cup, leaving the Allan Cup for other senior teams.

St. Catharines Tee Pees of the Ontario Hockey Association junior A league have signed a long-term working agreement with Buffalo Bisons of the American League. It takes effect immediately. For three years the Tee Pees were hooked up with Boston Bruins.

They really take their cricket seriously in Trinidad. The island's capital went wild yesterday at news that the West Indian team had won a cricket test match from Britain.

The government announced it will proclaim a holiday tomorrow to celebrate.

The West Indians took a 2-1 lead in the series of four matches when they defeated England by 10 wickets yesterday.

Ronald G. Cook, Canadian-born sportscaster, is the new president of the United States Hockey League. Cook, whose home is in Moose Jaw, succeeds Carl Voss resigned recently to become chief referee for the National Hockey League. The announcement of Cook's appointment was made in Omaha.

Down in Ogden, Utah a hole-in-one is commonplace today.

El Mote conducted a hole-in-one contest on a 90-yard hole. Ernie Schneiter, professional at the Municipal El Mote Club, won all the prizes by dropping two consecutive shots into the cup. He used a wedge.

The Cleveland Indians aren't—taking any more chances. General Manager Hank Greenberg has ordered his players to wear protective cap liners when at bat. The order followed an injury suffered by Indian centrefielder Lary Doby who was struck on the head by a pitched ball Monday night. Doby's condition is not serious.

Bernie Hanover won the $10,000 Dean Hanover trot for two-year-olds last night on the Grand Circuit program at Roosevelt Raceway in Westbury, N.Y., defeating Watcha by a length. Mahlon Hanover, the 3-to-5 favorite, placed third. The winner was timed in 2:10 4-5.

Horses from New York State dominated the harness program at Thorncliffe Raceway in Toronto yesterday, capturing three of the featured dashes on the eight-card race.

Selka's Boy, owned by M. R. Schuyler of Naples, won the fifth at 6-to-1. Scotland Hy, owned by Harold McQueer of Hammond, won the sixth, paying $38.50. Then Holly Hall, owned by Dr. A. S. Miller of East Aurora, won the seventh, paying $9.50.

Winnipeg Scottish last night earned the right to meet Regina Nationals in the inter-provincial soccer playoffs for the Dominion championship. They defeated Port Arthur Brent Park 4-0 at Winnipeg to take the best-of-three series in straight games.

Guelph Leafs Score Win Over Waterloo

(By The Canadian Press)

Jeff Shelton's a hero in Guelph today.

He held the first-place Tigers to six hits last night and gave the hometown Guelph Maple Leafs, still in the intercounty baseball loop cellar, a 4-3 win. And he drove in the winning run.

It was the second straight win for Guelph and the third consecutive loss for the Tigers.

In the other intercounty games, Kitchener Legionnaires blasted Brantford Red Sox 13-0 and Stratford Nationals rallied for three runs in the final inning to edge St. Thomas Legion 9-8.

Waterloo got all six of their hits off Shelton in the sixth inning and made them count for all their runs. Guelph jumped Mike Kvasnak for three unearned runs in the first inning on two walks, two errors and a double by Oscar Judd.

In Kitchener, the Legionnaires bashed Roy Kirkgasser, the Brantford loser, and Alf Gavey for 14 hits and were helped by seven Brantford errors in piling up their 13 runs. Irv Ler drove in four runs with two triples and Gabby Hormann hit three for four for the fifth-place Kitchener crew. John Lipka held the Sox to four hits.

At St. Thomas, Stratford trailed 8-6 going into the ninth. But two hits, a walk, a wild pitch and an error sent home three runs.

Two Detroit Fans Die at Ball Game

Detroit, July 26 — (AP) —Two Detroit Tiger fans died of heart attacks as the Tigers played Boston Red Sox last night.

Edward W. Page, 70, a spectator at Briggs Stadium, collapsed and died late in the game.

Pep is Cocky, Figures He Can Take Sadler

Washington, July 26 — (AP)— Smooth-operating Willie Pep, the major domo of the featherweight division, says he thinks he can lick former champ Sandy Saddler if the two meet for a third time.

Pep made the observation in his dressing room after polishing off Bobby Bell of Youngstown, O., in a 10-round decision at Griffith Stadium last nght.

Negotiations were to continue today in New York to line up a "rubber" bout between the two 126-pounders for a Sept. 6 outing at Yankee Stadium, estimated to gross $300,000.

The Pep-Saddler classic hinges on the demands of Lou Viscusi, Pep's manager. It was learned he has asked a $100,000 guarantee for the champ and a privilege of 40 per cent of the gate.

Saddler won the first bout with Pep on a knockout, Oct. 29, 1948. Four months later Pep recaptured the title on a decision.

Brockville Nips Smiths Falls By 5-3 Score

Brockville, July 26 — (CP) — The fast-climbing Brockville Memos moved up another notch in the Central Ontario Baseball League Tuesday night as they downed the Smiths Falls Royals 5-3 behind their ace left hander, Jimmie Proctor.

Proctor gave up ten safeties while fanning six and walking none. Dean Rothrock, the Smiths Falls moundsman, was touched for nine hits while striking out seven and passing four.

What, Again? Louis Will . . . Fight Charles

Detroit, July 26 — (AP) — Joe Louis, former heavyweight champion, confided to friends here last night he hopes to arrange a title bout with Ezzard Charles in September.

Louis said, however, that it depended on how his negotiations turned out with the United States Revenue Bureau in Washington on an income-tax adjustment.

It was reported last week that Louis is trying to make a deal with the government to accept his purse fro mthe proposed Ezzard Charles bout in full settlement of an income-tax claim.

Friends said Louis plans to take mineral baths at West Baden, Ind., to get his weight down. He now weighs between 220 and 225 pounds and would have to take off 10 or 15 pounds to get into fighting trim.

Canadian Henley Opens With Record Entry

Port Dalhousie, Ont., July 26—(CP) — Top oarsmen and promising youngsters on their way up match strokes today as the 68th annual Canadian Henley opens with an entry list believed the largest on record.

More than 600 scullers, from high school crews to the best in North America, will see action before the competition ends Saturday. There were 400-odd entries last year.

Heading the list is Jack Kelly, Jr., of Philadelphia, who won the Diamond Skulls in 1947 and 1949 and easily carried off the open singles title at the United States National Rowing championships last week.

Kelly's emerald-green cap won't be seen on the Old Welland Canal's 1 1-2-mile course until Saturday, when he represents the Philadelphia Vesper Boating Club in the senior pairs and returns to take all three challengers in the championship singles.

Even without Kelly there will be plenty of first-class rowing talent at Port Dalhousie today.

There's Jack Guest, Jr., the 17-year-old Canadian schoolboy champion from Toronto who scored an upset victory in the senior singles at the U.S. championships in Chicago.

Lots of Opposition

He makes his first appearance in the quarter-mile dash.

Guest, dark-haired son of a former Canadian Diamond Skulls winner, will have lots of opposition in his heat, facing Bob Angyal, veteran New York fireman, and 18-year-old Bob Williams of Hamilton who finished second behind Kelly in last week's .U.S championships.

Guest passed up that race on his father's advice. He had won the senior singles the day before.

Angyal will take on another brilliant Hamilton youngster — Tom Smith, a 19-year-old protege of Bobby Pearce. Smith whipped Angyal for the first time in 12 years last week in his favorite event — the 145-pound singles.

The battle for the club championship, won last year for the first time by the St. Catharines Rowing Club, will be fought out by a number of organizations from both sides of the border.

The Dominion Bank, firm in its faith that the future of Canada rests with the people, reprints without comment the following item which appears in a recent issue of The Trade Paper of the Newspaper Publishers of North America—"Editor and Publisher."

"The youth of America has been depicted as a generation of devil-may-care, hell-bent-for-election, inconsiderate, unappreciative, bunch of scatter-brains. We haven't subscribed to that school of thought, but every now and then the reported escapades of some bunch of youngsters has made us wonder. If you happened to read the May 25 issue of the Sharon (Pa.) Herald you would have had a pleasant jolt, as we did. There, was an ad signed: "With trust in the future Class of 1950, Sharon High School." The ad was entirely unsolicited—it was apparently the kids' own idea. And the copy will be an eye opener for those who happen to look at teen-agers with a jaundiced and skeptical eye.

Under the headline "Thank You, Taxpayers," copy said: "After twelve years of free public education, we the class of 1950 now take our place with the thousands of other men and women who have received an education at the expense of the taxpayers.

"To you, the supporters of the School District, we, the graduating class of the High School, wish by means of this notice to express our appreciation for this education. Through the years from the primary grades to our four high school years we have gained knowledge of our nation and the world.

"We have learned the fundamentals of citizenship and democracy, and we have been prepared to join you next year in the ranks of functioning citizens and taxpayers. To those of us who may strive for higher education you have given us the groundwork for this continued learning.

"Thus, through your tax-dollars you, citizens, have given the priceless gift of education for better living to two hundred and forty-eight more future citizens.

"You have given us the expert teaching that has put our Schools on the top level of the country's public school systems, the administration that has always worked for our betterment, and the Board of Education that has voluntarily assumed our welfare as a public trust. You could give us no greater gift than the gift of education.

"In our appreciation of this gift we shall attempt to utilize its power in becoming better citizens, and we shall try to stand worthily beside you in continuing your good efforts in behalf of the children who will come after us. . . ."

With kids like that coming out of our schools it augurs well for the good of the nation. We'll bet it made the taxpayers sit up and take notice of the up-and-coming generation.

This is a North American story. It could have been written with equal sincerity by Canadian students. Our splendid educational system has taught honesty, thrift . . . the fundamentals of citizenship and democracy. Canada has given us "... no greater gift than the gift of education."

MOGARD MARRIES

There was a quiet wedding held in the famous Caxton Hall, London, England, the other day and had you been present you would have recognized at least one of the actors in a leading role. He was handsome Don Mogard, Canadian heavyweight, well-known in these parts and who was a sparring partner for Lee Savold, who recently sent the British champ Bruce Woodcock to bye-bye. The bride was pretty, twenty-three-year-old Barbara Adolphe of Croydon, England.

Mogard got his early training at the Mountain View Air Station under the tutelage of the then Corporal Vic Bagnato, now one of Toronto's outstanding fight promoters. Vic took Mogard with him after leaving the service and furthered his training until he turned professional. The big good-natured fighter went to New York where he built up an enviable reputation and was named in one of the supporting bouts of the first Louis - Walcott fight. Later he went to England with Savold, and from recent reports expects to make Britain his home. He was featured on the card that saw Savold take the title from Woodcock, and won his bout via the decision route.

A BASS JACKPOT!

Muscote Bay is 88 pounds of bass short today. Dennie Anger and Sid Hewitt, of Hamilton, lay in wait Monday and Tuesday until school was out and must have captured the entire class, teacher and all. They caught 22 beauties the largest of which weighed four pounds thirteen ounces (must have been the Ole Prof. himself) down to the kindergarten kids which weighed perhaps an ounce or two under four pounds. It was the best haul of bass these optics have gazed upon since wigwamming on the banks of the Moira.

Give four-year-old Junior a new electric train, a year's supply of lollipops, and cart blanche in an ice cream factory and you might get some idea of how the two Hamiltonians felt when they brought their prodigious catch to the city yesterday afternoon. They flopped the big fellas on the road near this newspaper office and in less time than you could say "Wobbler, Wobbler," they had an audience of generous proportions.

They proudly displayed the home-made gadgets with which they lured the big fellas to the ice box. There they were, chunks of broom-handle painted red-and-white with a trio of hooks protruding from one end. "Why that big palooka straightened out all three of them," excitedly exclaimed one of the grown-up boys. Another thingamagig was also proudly displayed which resembled part of a sardine can plus paint, hooks and a fin or so (Phooey on your four-dollar advertised hook-em gimmicks). The anglers are staying at Luke's Camp near the Mountain View Air Station.

BATAWA AND KINGSTON TONIGHT

The Batawa Shoemen, at the moment deadlocked in fourth place in the Central Ontario Baseball League standing with Brockville Memos hope to hold down the clean-up spot alone after tonight's tussle with the Kingston Disneys at Exhibition Park. That, of course, depends on what happens in the Memos - Napanee game being staged at twilighting in the Gibbardville Park. It could be that the Shoemen might slump back into fifth slot if they drop the decision to Disneys and Napanee takes the Brockville crew into camp. However, having won their last two starts the Shoemen are confident of the outcome of tonight's joust, but they had better be on their horses, for this Kingston team can develop a streak of toughness at times, and this might be one of them. Game at 8.30.

SEZ HE!

Fred Atkins, the hardy and haughty Australian wrestler, claims he will trounce Yukon Eric, the Alaska lumberjack, so thoroughly and overwhelmingly when they meet again in the feature mat event at the Memorial Arena on Friday night, that the northerner will hie himself to the backwoods where he came from and never appear in the rings of the big mat centres again.

That is a large boast, even for the ever-bragging Mr. Atkins. Despite the fact that Flinty Fred did get an official nod over Yukon here last week, it was a verdict that was severely questioned by the press, fans and Yukon Eric himself. Consequently, Atkins will have to do immeasurably better on Friday night to make his boast hold good.

Instead of which, Eric might well reverse the ruling on his rough and arrogant opponent. In any case, a rousing match appears to be in the offing and it is unlikely Eric will stand for such a dubious verdict again.

Musial Modest, Just Goes Along Hitting The Ball

(By JACK HAND)

Brooklyn, July 26. (AP)—"I just go along, day to day, relaxed. Trying to hit that ball."

Stan Musial of St. Louis talked about his 29-game batting streak through last night's game with Brooklyn. How he tried to keep it off his mind. Letting every game take care of itself.

"Lots of days I only get the one hit," he said. "I don't know how many times I've almost been stopped. Honestly, I don't think much about it.

"I've been hitting the ball better since my leg has improved. I twisted it a week or 10 days ago. I was hitting to left more because of the leg. Didn't get a full swing. Now I think I'm all right again."

Since Musial last went hitless June 25 against Boston's Vern Bickford, he has hit .393 with 46 hits sprayed over 29 games. During the streak he hit 13 doubles, six homers and drove in 26 runs.

Tommy Holmes of Boston holds the modern National League record of hitting safely in 37 consecutive games in 1945. Of course, Joe Dimaggio has the major league high string of 56, set in 1941.

Stan likes it better in the outfield, his regular position, after a spell at first base.

"I'm back where I played when I first came up," said Musial, "back in left field. I like it out there although you get a chance to throw more in right."

Musial, like his boss, Eddie Dyer, thinks the National League is going to be a tight race right down to the wire.

"We seem to play our worst against Brooklyn," said Musial, "and they get lots of runs against us. It used to be just the opposite."

Dyer says he was worried about Musial's leg injury. That's why he took him out of games already won or lost. He also returned him to first base for a few games, figuring it would be less strain on the leg.

"Maybe I shouldn't have played him all the time," said Eddie, "but you know Stan. He wanted to stay in there. And we needed him."

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Leafs Divide Twin Bill With Chiefs

(By The Canadian Press)

The "rabbit" baseball was given a rest in the International League last night.

Seven games were played but only four homers were hit. The pitchers combined for one two-hitter, three three-hitters and one four-hitter. The eight clubs averaged only 7½ hits a game.

The best hurling was at Baltimore, where the Orioles and Rochester Red Wings divided a doubleheader. Tommy Fine stopped the league-leaders with three hits in the opener, 5-0, but Rochester bounced back to capture the nightcap, 8-2, behind Johnny Ylhas' two-hitter.

Jersey City and Buffalo also split a doubleheader, the Little Giants winning the opener, 7-1, but the Bisons coming back with four runs in the ninth to take the afterpiece, 9-6.

Springfield coasted behind Bob Moisan's three-hitter for a 4-0 victory over Montreal. Moisan, who evened his record at 7-7, walked five and struck out five.

Toronto and Syracuse also divided a doubleheader. Bud Byerly pitched Syracuse to a 4-2 victory in the opener. Steve Ridzik and Jack Brittin of Toronto combined for a four-hit, 4-0 triumph in the second game.

Wallace Wins Over Kitchener Light Heavy

St. Catharines, July 26—(CP)—Gordon Wallace of Brantford, Canadian Amateur Middleweight Champion, Tuesday night won a unanimous decision over Bill Misslebrook, Kitchener, light-heavyweight, in a five-round catch-weight bout.

Wallace won a split verdict in Hamilton last week over Misselbrook.

Other results of the card:

Andy Hefel, Kitchener, decisioned Ron McGillivray, Welland.

Matt Kiss, Kitchener, decisioned Bern Murphy, St. Catharines.

Copper Ludlow, St. Catharines, decisioned Jimmy Tokarza, Brantford.

Pete Klassen, St. Catharines, won by technical knockout over Jerry Boillard, Brantford, at 1:13 of the third round.

Don Norton, St. Catharines, knocked out Harvey McLean, Merritton, at 1:14 of the second round.

Rampaging Tribe on Warpath Distinct Threat to Leaders Of Jumbled Amer. Loop Race

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Cleveland's rampaging Indians, looking more menacing every day seem the 'dark horse' in the jumbled American League pennant race.

No club in the league — and that includes the pace-setting Detroit Tigers and runner-up New York Yankees—has looked better than Lou Boudreau's men. They have rung up 21 triumphs in their last 16 games.

Three weeks ago the Indians trailed the Tigers by seven full games. Now they are only 2 1-2 games out. Thanks to a 7-6 triumph over Philadelphia last night while both Tigers and Yankees were losing, the Indians find themselves in the best position they've been in all year.

They still are in third place, one length back of the Yankees and three in front of the Boston Red Sox. But they are in good shape to make a whale of a battle out of it the rest of the way. They own three top-flight pitchers in Bob Lemon, Bob Feller and Early Wynn. And, in rookies Al Rosen and Luke Easter, they possess two of the top sluggers in the game.

Cleveland's biggest asset is the schedule. Not only is the Tribe facing a long home stand, but the end of the season will find Indians playing at home in 12 of the last 14 games. If they remain anywhere near the top of the next few weeks, they will be mighty hard to stop.

Fellar Winner

Feller was the winner yesterday although he needed help from Lemon in the ninth. It was Bob's 10th triumph of the year. He got a big lift from Easter, who smashed his 18th and 19th homers off loser Alex Kellner.

The Red Sox won a 7-6 nip-and-tuck affair from Detroit, scoring three runs in the eighth off relief pitcher Hal White to overcome a 6-4 deficit.

Stubby Overmire pitched the St. Louis Browns to a 4-3 victory over the Yankees. The little lefthander, who holds two of the three Brownie wins over New York, had a three-hit shutout until the ninth, including a two-run homer by Johnny Mize, gave the Yankees three runs. Overmire batted in what proved to be the winning runs with a two-run single off Vic Raschi in the fifth.

Fine relief pitching by Joe Haynes and strong stockwork by Sam Mele and Gil Coan helped Washington triumph over the Chicago White Sox, 7-4.

Philadelphia Phillies moved back to the top of the National League by handing the Chicago Cubs two shutout defeats, 7-0 and 1-0.

The Cubs now have suffered through three straight shutout losses.

The Phils double win put them a half game in front of the St. Louis Cardinals who whipped the Brooklyn Dodgers 9-5. The Boston Braves moved into the third spot 2 1-2 games off the pace, by thrashing Pittsburgh Pirates, 7-2.

A five-run eighth inning and another tally in the ninth gave the Giants a 7-6 triumph over Cincinnati.

Paced by Del Ennis' 18th home run with two mates aboard, the Phils were an easy victor in the opener. They had to wait until two were out in the last of the ninth to win the second game. Richie Ashburn took care of that, lashing a single to centre to score Ralph Caballero from second.

Del Rice's three run homer highlighted a four-run eighth inning which enabled the Cards to overcome a 5-3 Dodger lead. It marked the first St. Louis win in Ebbets Field this year.

The Cards' Stan Musial cracked a home run, double and single to extend his consecutive hitting streak through 29 games. The modern National League mark of 37 is held by Boston's Tommy Holmes. Joe DiMaggio of the '41 Yankees set the major league high of 56.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Most of the bridge rules of today are descended from the whist rules of the past. As the game progressed into auction and contract, several modifications of the original basics were found desirable.

For a long time was popular in auction the rule: Lead highest of the suit your partner has bid. The less experienced still do so. But not the better players of the present time.

Nowadays the best players apply the same rule for the lead of partner's suit as they do for a blind lead; with three or less cards, lead the highest; with four or more, lead the fourth best.

If this explodes into bits one of your pet traditions, take time out to feel sorry for yourself. But after you have had a good cry over it, dry your tears and become reconciled to the modern way.

After all, you are growing up in this game of bridge. It is time you knew some of its facts. And one of these facts is that when you have four or more of the suit partner has bid, lead fourth best.

South is declarer at four hearts when you hold this hand:

♥J 7 4 2
♣K 9 6 4

Decide the suit you will lead. With three or less cards, lead the highest. With four or more, lead the fourth best. Do this whether you are making a blind lead or the lead of a suit partner has bid.

In this deal suppose your partner in east had bid a suit. Which card in his suit would you lead? It depends on the number of cards you hold in the suit your partner has bid.

If east had bid spades your lead would be nine of spades. If east had bid diamonds your lead would be the jack of diamonds. If east had bid clubs your lead would be the club four.

There is a very good reason for leading fourth best of the suit partner has bid. It tells him how many cards of this suit are held by declarer. Partner should be told what someone else may hold.

EXECUTION

In the state of Utah execution is carried out either by hanging or shooting.

AT THE CAPITOL — Vaughn Monroe and Ella Raines are starring in the Republic Trucolor picture, "Singing Guns," which will be at the Capitol Theatre Thursday through Saturday. Based on Max Brand's famous novel, "Singing Guns" is a fast-paced, action-packed outdoor film. On the same program, "Square Dancing Katy," starring Vera Vogue, Jimmie Davis and his Sunshine Band, and Phil Brito.

Movie Column

By HUBBARD KEAVY

Hollywood, July 26 (AP) — "There is a bar—naturally," said the chef, "and then hors d'oeuvres. . ."

When the gourmets of Hollywood go out to entertain with food, and want to do it properly and impressively, then leave the menu to Chef Robert Kreis. Tomorrow night in the private dining room of one of the Brown Derbies, where Chef Robert is the head kitchen man, a visiting millionaire is entertaining for 20. There will be a bar, "naturally," and the same menu Chef Robert ran up fo Clark Gable's party last week.

Leave it to Robert

Gable and many others and the unnamed millionaire have full confidence in Robert because they know he will prepare something very edible. The Gable meal started with dugeness crab meat en cocette (baked in little dishes) and next was onion soup au sherry.

Then, the piece de resistance, coq au vin—a three pound rooster cooked in a sauce of burgundy and brandy. It is most unusual to fix white meat in red wine. Each guest gets half a rooster, along with carrots, onions, celery and potatoes Parisienne, which have been cooked in the sauce. After that, fresh-chilled asparagus vinegarette. For dessert: Strawberries Romanoff — which consists of berrie brandy, Kirschwasser and curacao poured over vanilla ice cream.

Happy Frenchman

Kreis, a very happy and well-fed Frenchman, has been catering to the eating habits of Hollywood for more than 20 years. He knows what everyone in town likes. When Jimmy Durante comes in, Robert knows he will ask for one of two dishes: centre cut of finnan haddie served in a chafing dish with milk and butter or English roast beef, four slices cut paper thin.

Slo-Mo-Shun Is Ready For World Title

Detroit, July 26 (AP) — The world's fastest speedboat, Slo-Mo-Shun IV, will pass up the Detroit Memorial Regatta on the Detroit River Saturday.

Owner Stanley Sayres of Seattle announced, "if we are selected on the U.S. team, the Harmsworth will be our next race."

By winning the Gold Cup last Saturday, Slo-Mo-Shun is believed assured of a berth on the Harmsworth Trophy competition Sept. 1-2.

Meantime, the Union of International Motorboating put an official sanction on the world record established June 26 at Lake Washington, Seattle, by Slo-Mo-Shun. The boat covered a measured mile at 160.323 miles an hour. Recognition was cabled from Brussels yesterday.

Sayres' mark replaces one of 141.74 m.p.h. set in 1939 at Lake Coniston, England, by the late Sir Malcolm Campbell in his Bluebird II.

Ask Tamblyn's

DEFACED BRICK WORK: "We have just moved to a house with badly marked brick walls. It appears the children of the former owner did their homework on the brick. How can we remove the marks?"

If the bricks are just marked with chalk you should be able to clean them by scrubbing them with a soap and water solution and a scrubbing brush. For marks caused by smoke try this same method. If this fails use a 10 per cent. solution of muriatic acid and water, being most careful not to let any of this solution touch the mortar joints. The bricks should be washed down again with water.

SIGHTSEEING TOURS: "We expect to be in Toronto later this summer and want to see all the interesting places in the city. Are there any sightseeing tours of the city? How much would it cost?"

The Gray Coach Lines have two different tours — a one-hour trip which costs $1.25 and a two-hour trip for $2.00. The bus leaves from Front and Yonge streets. If you call ADelaide 4221 when you arrive in Toronto they will be able to give you all information about the tours.

Pt. Anne Edges Ramsay Paints In 4-2 Thriller

(By B. U.)

The Commercial Softball League A section became as tight as a sixth generation Scotchman at a thrift rally in Aberdeen last night as the Point Anne Cementmen nosed out Ramsay Paints 4-2 in a nine inning thriller at Alemite Field. The win put the Pointers into a third place tie with the Paintmen and virtually clinched a playoff berth.

It was a pitcher's battle throughout with veteran Pat Maracle having a wee bit of an edge. He struck out thirteen, walked two, and gave up a measly five hits for two runs. He had a three hitter going into the eighth, two of them by Jack Scanlon, when second baseman Moore and third baseman Cross unloaded bases-empty home runs for the first score of the game.

The Cementmen limited to five safeties until the eighth came to life with a vengeance to score all their runs. Jack Hunter led off with a bunt getting safely to first by an eyelash. Doug Sword doubled, and then Gerald Horwood batting for Finlan, popped out to the shortstop. Perry Everett dumped a bunt down in front of the plate with Jack Hunter sliding in under the play with the Pointers' first run.

Keith Baldwin then singled to score Sword, and Jim Hunter, pinch hitting for Whalen, choked a double into left field to plate Everett and Baldwin and that was the ball game. Logue went out pitcher to first and Brannigan struck out to retire the side.

Down in Order

Ramsays went down in order in the ninth as Point Anne copped what many think was one of the key games in the A race this season.

Jack Reid went all the way for Ramsays. He was nursing a five hit scoreless game going into the fatal eighth. All told he struck out seven, walked one, and gave up ten hits for four runs.

Everett and Logue with two singles in four trips led the winners while Jack Scanlan collected two of the Paintmen's five hits in four tries.

Lineups:

Ramsay Paints: Cross 3b; Scanlan ss; Baldwin rf; Wannamaker cf; Empey 1b; Hollond lf; Moore 2b; Bellis c; J. Reid p.

Point Anne: Jack Hunter lf; D. Sword 3b; J. Finlan rf, replaced by G. Horwood in 8th 2b; acle p. Everett cf. K. Baldwin ss; B. Whalen replaced by Jim Hunter in 8th, rf; J. Logue 1b; Brannigan c; Maracle p.

Score by innings:

Ramsay P.	000 000 020—2	5	1
Pt. Anne	000 000 04x—4	10	0

Umpires: Plate, Ethier; bases, Young. Time 1.03.

Brampton Takes Weston Lions

Toronto, July 26 —(CP) — Brampton Excelsiors took over second place in the Ontario Lacrosse Association Senior circuit Tuesday night by setting back Weston Lions 14-9.

Excelsiors built up a 5-2 lead in the first quarter and hung on for the rest of the way.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT
(For Hugh Fullerton Jr.)

New York, July 26 (AP) —Alrick Man, Jr. first gasped "you're fooling," and then, after a moment's painful reflection, muttered "it's simply unbelievable."

Man is the non-playing captain of the United States Davis Cup tennis team. He had just received a nasty shock. News that Herbie Flam, a California youth, had given Ted Schroeder an unmerciful pasting in the final of the clay court championships at Chicago.

Only a few minutes before, discussing prospects for the team which will defend the cup — doubtless against Australia again —toward the end of August, Man had expressed his fullest confidence that Schroeder would be ready for the big test.

Upset Hurts

And then the bombshell. . .

"Of course," Man finally said, "Flam's game is better adapted to clay than Ted's is. Ted has always been at his best on the faster grass courts. But, still, that doesn't explain only five games from Flam in three sets."

Indeed it doesn't. The U.S. Davis Cup forces are in their most precarious position since they were defeated by the Australians in 1939. If the U.S. keeps the cup this time it really will be a wonder.

Tall Scrambling

Last year Man's choice of a team was extremely simple. There was Pancho Gonzales to win two singles matches and Schroeder to win the other two, and it didn't matter at all that Bill Talbert and Gardnar Mulloy were beaten in the doubles by Billy Sidwell and John Bromwich.

But look what the last 11 months have done. Gonzales is a professional. Schroeder, it now seems plain, finds it difficult as he nears the 30-year mark to whip himself into championship form.

The Gentle Heart

By Kay Hamilton

"He still is. A few extra rolls of fat, but just that much more good nature seems to go with it, so nobody minds. And just as excitable as ever. Some of the kids at the school were afraid of him the first week or so, but they soon caught on."

"And ran him ragged, I suppose?"

"Nobody in the world could do that. He thought it was a good sign when their high spirits came out. 'Temperament!' he used to say. 'It shows they have temperament. Now. if they can learn to channel it into their work'."

"Well, if I don't channel mine into doing that drawing, I won't be ready for you day after tomorrow," Natalie suddenly exclaimed, and went back to her studio on the run.

Brent hung around for a few more minutes, then took a reluctant farewell. He seemed so unwilling to go that Jenny called after him, "We'll expect you tonight, Brent. Don't forget," and was rewarded by his flashing smile.

The money question came up again that evening as the girls were dressing for dinner. Jenny and Natalie usually changed from their working clothes about five in the afternoon. Bathed and refreshed, looking their best, they always enjoyed their evenings more that way. Diane, if she felt like it, was apt to change several times a day.

Jenny was brushing her hair, frowning at her reflection in the mirror with concentration, when she heard Natalie's voice in the next room—Di's room.

"It was nice of Brent to offer you some work, wasn't it?" she began. "But, of course, that will only last a week or so. You really ought to begin thinking about a job, Di."

Diane flared in answer. "Don't nag at me. I just came home. Besides, why do you pick on me? Jenny doesn't work."

Jenny's hand paused, and she caught her breath, listening unconsciously. Natalie's reply was angry. "What nonsense. Doesn't work! Jenny works harder than any of us. Do you think that keeping this big house clean, doing the cooking and the washing and the shopping and managing isn't work? Because if you do, suppose you try it!"

Diane quavered, "Nat, what's got into you? I didn't mean it that way. I only meant—"

"I know. That she doesn't put money into the household kitty every week. But why should she? What she does is worth more than the money either one of us ever put in."

"But she—but she likes to keep house," Diane began.

"That doesn't make it any less work. I'm glad she does like it. I'd not want her to do it if she didn't. But she does her full share. What I want to know is whether you're prepared to do the same, Di?" Natalie's voice had quieted, and Diane's answer, when it came, was lost to Jenny. She sat, holding the brush in one hand, the other lax on her lap, while her brows drew together in active distress. Oh dear, she thought, I hope there won't be any trouble between them. There never had been before, and it would be horrid if anything unpleasant should start because of money.

Yet money was so essential. She thought back over the two years since her father's death, remembering the struggle they had for the first year. The estate was not yet settled. There was no money at all except what Natalie could earn. And since she was a free lance, they were never sure from month to month what they would have to spend. The little sum of money which their mother had left them was soon gone, and it was only their grim determination to hold onto the house which had seen them through that time when it seemed as if their sole chance at survival was to sell it.

"But where would we go?" Jenny had argued then, sensibly. "We would have to have a place to live—a place large enough for three grown people. And Nat has to have a room to work in. We would spend everything we got for this place on buying another that would be smaller and less satisfactory."

Nat had upheld her, and Diane, at the time, had been comparatively uninterested. It was just them that Fred was starting to woo her seriously, and her interests were elsewhere. So they had stayed in the old home, and when necessary repairs had had to be made, Jenny had sold their car for what she could get. They walked now, or took the bus, but the house was sturdy again, a comforting and familiar shelter to them.

Jenny finished her dressing slowly and went down to the kitchen to get dinner, still in a thoughtful frame of mind.

The money their father had left them did not amount to much when divided into three portions, yet Jenny's was more than enough to supply her clothes, pay her share of the taxes, and purchase those little extras so dear to any woman.

She knew that Natalie made her income go as far as possible; French thrift and joy in a good bargain was inherent in both the girls. It was only Diane to whom the sum was woefully inadequate. It went so quickly when spent for lacy underthings at three times the price the other two paid, or for expensive permanents and manicures. Her bill for nylons alone Jenny suspected was enough to dress her or Natalie for half a year. Yet neither of them had ever objected. It was only now, when Diane's return would pinch their domestic economy that they realized how irresponsible she was in money matters.

When dinner was on the table, however, she was glad to see that neither of her sisters seemed upset They were friendly and voluble, and she came to the conclusion that the interview she had overheard unintentionally had ended on a co-operative note.

Gary came while Jenny was still doing the dishes. She heard the welcome in Natalie's voice, heard their chattering fade as they went from the hall into the living room.

A sudden flare of happiness swept through her. Gary and Natalie, Brent and herself. Unconsciously she paired them. If only Diane and Fred were together again, everything would be well wth her world. She did not know just what she could do to bring this about, but the resolve was strong within her. Somehow, in some way, she would manage it.

Brent arrived with another man in tow. A tall man, too thin for his height, with a weary look on his shallow, cynical face. "This is Jack Tyson," Brent introduced him. "He came over to chin with me a while in my slum, and when I couldn't get rid of him, I decided to bring him along. I didn't think you would mind."

Tyson bowed slightly. "Always the flatterer," he murmured.

"Are you the Tyson who has bought the MacIntyre place?" Diane demanded. Fred was in the real estate business, and the MacIntyre sale had been a big feather in his cap.

"The same. At your service, Princess," Tyson smiled.

Jenny was startled, trying to remember just what she had heard about the new owner of the MacIntyre estate. It was on the outskirts of Green Ridge, with a good acreage and a small, but very deluxe, house on which the former owner had spent an astonishing amount of money

Natalie, her active mind pouncing on an item which she suddenly recalled, said, "You're the Mr. Tyson who is in the publishing business, aren't you?"

"I am. Which is how I happened to know Brent; which is how I happened to get invited to accompany him."

"He would put it in that way," Brent growled. "You can't believe a word he says, girls, and I'm warning you now."

"The big bad wolf in person?" Natalie remarked smiling.

"Let's say the poor, broken-down, reformed wolf," Tyson corrected her.

REDS MASS FOR ATTEMPTED KNOCKOUT BLOW

Churchill Warns of Nation's Weakness

Thinks A-Power Would Prevent Any Third War

Notes Estimated Strength Russian, British Equipment

London, July 27 — (CP) — Winston Churchill, Britain's wartime prime minister, said today that Britain has no equipment in use at present which can withstand the Soviet armored avalanches which must be expected if wide-scale war should break out.

The Conservative leader delivered his warning in the House of Commons.

Churchill was defeated by a single vote in an attempt to force a secret session for a debate on defence. His motion was beaten by 296 to 295.

American Air Power

Presence of Foreign Secretary Bevin, who arrived just in time for the voting, made the victory possible. He was in the house for the first time since he underwent an operation May 13.

Churchill had two speeches prepared—the one he began to deliver after the House rejected his motion for a secret session, and another containing confidential information.

Churchill said that because of American atomic superiority, he believes "a third world war is not imminent and I cherish the hope that it will be averted."

The Conservative leader said planes from present United States bases in England could atom bomb "Russian cities and key points" in a third world war.

But he said Russia could sweep to the English Channel and "bring us under air bombardment, apart from the atomic bomb, far worse than we have ever endured."

The Conservative leader compared Britain's 6,000-tank strength with the figure of 40,000 Russian tanks which had been estimated by the chairman of the war services committee of the United States House of Representatives.

Importance of Tanks

Churchill said that even more important than reserves or general stocks of tanks was the number organized in formation.

"In Korea we have seen how formidable even a few score of tanks might be, and how tough the heavy Russian tanks are."

Gravely, Britain's former war leader added:

"I cannot think this threat of the enormous mass of Soviet armor is any way mastered. Nor, for that matter, is there anything in use and service at the present time which could cope with this array of armored avalanches we must expect on the outbreak of war—should war come."

Western Allies' Strength

Referring to French statesman Paul Reynaud's statement that the Western Allies had a total of 12 divisions, Churchill said:

"On this assumption Western Union would have 12 divisions against more than 80."

Of these 12 divisions less than two were armored, against anything from 25 to 30 armored

United Nations Help Comes In Darkest Hour

Washington, July 27.— (AP)— Announcement that Britain is sending, and other United Nations countries may send, ground troops to Korea comes in one of the darkest hours of United States military history.

What American military men want now are more combat-ready troops—quickly, urgently. The next two or three weeks can be highly critical.

U.S. and South Korean troops fighting the Red invaders of the Republic of Korea haven't their backs to the wall yet—but the room is getting alarmingly smaller. In the strategy of trading space for time, they are running low on both commodities.

The British government's announcement that it is sending to Korea a regular army combat group, including artillery and armor, reached Washington as U.S. Defence officials were growing increasingly concerned about help from United Nations members.

Reinforcements from the United States are on the way but some U.S. officials make it plain this can't be enough. More fighting manpower is needed not only to bolster the battered American troops but to allow soldiers exhausted by weeks of combat to rest.

Defence leaders prefer that any units contributed to the United Nations campaign in Korea be in organizations of not less than 1,000 men, trained equipped and supplied for initial fighting.

The London announcement did not specify the size of the combat group to be sent, but it apparently would be substantially more than the 1,000-man minimum. London News dispatches speculated that it might range from a battalion to a brigade, from 1,000 to 5,000 men.

There was other help in the offing, including the announcements of two commonwealth countries, Australia and New Zealand, that they will send land forces. Turkey has offered 4,500 trained combat troops.

It is the combat-wise veteran units that could be of special value in Korea if they could be landed there soon.

BOOSTS TIRE PRICES

Hamilton, July 27 (CP) — In line with other firms, the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company has announced increase of five to 7 1-2 cents in the price of tires and a boost of up to 10 percent in tubes. Scarcity of raw materials was blamed for the increase.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS:

Weather synopsis:— Scattered showers and thundershowers were reported during the night in most sections of Ontario except the extreme southwestern part.

Showers are expected again today in central sections mainly late this afternoon and this evening. In other parts of the province skies will be mostly sunny.

COMMONWEALTH DIVISION LIKELY FOR KOREAN WAR

U.K., Australia, N.Z. Reported in Agreement

Sydney, Australia, July 27 — (CP)—A British commonwealth division comprising one brigade each from Britain, Australia and New Zealand, is expected to be the outcome of this week's decisions by the three countries to send troops to Korea, Reuters news agency said tday.

Reuters said it had learned of such a Commonwealth move from authoritative sources in Melbourne.

(The average size of a three-battalion British infantry brigade in the Second World War was about 3,000 men.)

The report of a Commonwealth Korean division came as Supply Minister O. H. Beale warned that Australia must mobilize her industry for all-out war—even as the country began recruiting a force to fight in Korea.

Auckland, N.Z. — (CP) —Six officers and 250 other ranks today enlisted in New Zealand's force for Korea.

One man said he would "rather fight the communists in Korea than battle with them in Auckland."

Blow Struck For Chivalry Results in Fine

Doncaster, England, July 27 (Reuters)—A blow struck in chivalry earned a magistrate's commendation for John Rose, 28, of Doncaster—and cost him £3.

Blonde movie cashier Joan Wright appealed to Rose when a man began annoying her in the street.

Rose hit him—just once, but the man was in hospital for a week.

Yesterday Magistrate Mrs. E. L. D. Callender commended Rose's chivalry but told him: "You will have to restrain your strength in future if you go to the help of a young lady in distress."

He was ordered to pay court costs.

Said the blonde: "I think it is absolutely disgusting that this young man should have to pay for the privilege of coming to my rescue."

HIGH PRODUCER

Kitchener, July 27 —(CP) — Seiling Royal Wing, a nine-year-old cow owned by Albert Seiling of Elmira, Ont., is the first Holstein in Canada to twice produce more than 1,200 pounds of butterfat in a year. The Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada, announcing the record, said the cow produced 28,714 pounds of milk on thrice daily milking for 365 consecutive days. It contained 1,215 pounds of fat, an average of 4.23 percent.

PLASMA AGAIN SAVES LIVES AT FRONT

Vatican Radio Says 12,000 R.C. Priests Killed, Jailed Or Exiled by Red Satellites

Vatican City, July 27—(AP)— Approximately 12,000 Roman Catholic priests have been killed or made prisoners or exiled by the communist regimes of Russian Satellites during the last five years, the Vatican radio said today.

The radio broadcast its charges in all languages, including those of iron curtain countries.

The Vatican broadcast listed the number of priests slain, jailed, exiled and impeded in their ministries in each of several European countries.

In the Ukraine alone, since 1945, more than 3,600 priests have been killed and 1,000 churches and chapels closed or razed, the radio said.

The following figures were given for other countries:

Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania—1,000 priests killed or jailed.

Poland—1,000 priests deported (usually to Siberia).

Czechoslovakia — 300 secular priests jailed; thenumber of regular priests who met the same fate unknown.

Hungary—about 1,000 religious (priests and nuns) jailed; 538 put to death or deported; another 580 religious persons removed from their ministries.

Bulgaria—120 priests arrested or exiled.

Yugoslavia—1,954 priests put to death, arrested or deported while another 400 sought refuge aboard.

Fire Destroys Rubber Stock, Communists Thought Cause

Singapore, July 27, (CP)—At least one woman worker died today in a fire which razed Singapore's largest rubber factory. Police said the blaze was set by communists.

Rescue workers dug through the rubble of the huge Aikhoe plant, which employed almost 1,000 persons, in search of more victims believed trapped in the fire.

Nearly $900,000 worth of raw rubber was estimated to have been destroyed. The factory was insured for $2,300,000. It employed almost 1,000 persons .

Deputy police commissioner R. C. B. Wiltshire said, "We have every reason to believe the fire was set by communist arsonists."

He said the blaze looked like part of an ambitious communist plot to destroy Singapore's economy and sabotage Anglo-American stockpiling.

Some workmen's houses were burned.

The fire was started by the second arson attempt in 24 hours at the factory. Last night a watchman thwarted the first try.

Police said terrorists had made nine efforts to fire Singapore rubber depots in the last five days.

Washington, (AP)—The economic co-operation administration has bought enough rubber from Marshall Plan countries to produce 7,000,000 automobile tires.

E.C.A. said the rubber has gone into the United States stockpile for use, if needed, in making equipment for airplanes, army trucks, jeeps and other items.

SCHOOL WINS FIRST PRIZE

Toronto, July 27 — (AP) —A rural school in Durham-Northumberland area — S.S. No. 10 1-2 in Hamilton township — has been awarded first prize in the annual school development competition, the Ontario Agriculture Department announced Wednesday.

Grocer Proves Public Can Be Hoodwinked

Washington, July 27 (AP)— —Max Rosenthal, grocer, isn't sure just what he proved yesterday, but—

He stacked sugar outside his store and put up a sign reading "special five pounds sugar, 98 cents."

Lines, formed, he said, and he sold about 800 pounds in four hours.

Grocers across the street continued selling sugar at five pounds for 59 cents and had no rush.

Grinned Rosenthal. "I just wanted to prove that the price doesn't mean a thing."

Children's Aid Seeks Board Rate Increase

Kingston, July 27 — (CP) — The Children's Aid Society here is seeking an increase in its board rates for wards from Kingston and outside municipalities.

Magistrate James B. Garvin will rule Aug. 4 on whether the society can charge 10 cents a day more for each ward from Toronto, Kingston, Leeds and Grenville, Lennox and Addington, Trenton, Hastings county, St. Thomas and Brantford.

The same day he will consider an application for a similar increase covering wards from Prince Edward county, Renfrew, Lanark county, Welland, and Frontenac county.

Right Food May Boost Chances Of Curing Cancer With X-Rays

London, July 27—(AP)— The right kind of food may boost the chances of curing human cancers with X-rays.

Just what kind of food might do this isn't known yet, but possibly it could be lots of such proteins as meat, eggs and milk.

Clues that food could be important were reported today to the Sixth International Congress of Radiology by Dr. L. A. Lamerton and Dr. L. A. Elson of the Royal Cancer Hospital and Chester Beatty Institute of London.

X-rays, radium and surgery are the three proven things that often cure cancer when the disease is caught early.

X-rays work by killing the cancer cells or preventing them from dividing into two new cancer cells.

Lamerton and Elson are studying ways of making X-rays more effective.

They implanted one kind of fast-growing cancer into rats. It usually kills rats in 17 to 20 days. Six days after the implant the rats were given X-ray treatments.

Some were given foods rich in proteins, others food poor in proteins. More than half the rats eating the rich protein food were cured of cancer, the scientists said.

Only a few of those eating the poor-protein food were cured.

MACKENZIE KING MAKES LAST EXIT FROM OTTAWA

Thousands Pay Tribute To Late Prime Minister

Ottawa, July 27 (CP)—Mackenzie King has made his final exit from the Ottawa scene.

He left it yesterday amid the pomp of a state funeral, to muffled black-draped drums. Fifty thousand persons crowded the processional streets to pay tribute to the man who was their prime minister for more than 21 years.

In St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church the regular pew of the 75-year-old bachelor statesman was empty. Rev. A. Ian Burnett, minister of St. Andrew's and Mr. King's close friend, described him as "the greatest Canadian of our time," a man "wedded to a few great basic principles of righteousness and truth."

"God's guidance was a real thing in his life and God's presence a light and joy that could make bright the very darkest hour," he said.

Then, after the congregation of relatives, close friends and federal and provincial dignitaries sang one of Mr. King's favorits hymns My Own Dear Land"—the funeral procession reformed outside.

Colorful Scene

Led by four R.C.M.P. on black horses and flanked by 32 honorary pallbearers including Prime Minister St. Laurent, the casket was taken in a hearse to Union Station and placed aboard a special train for Toronto where burial was to take place today.

For two days since his death Saturday at his summer home at Kingsmere in the Gatineau Hills, the body of the man five times elected prime minister lay in state in a flower-decked bier in the Hall of Fame on Parliament Hill. More than 32,000 persons filed past.

Yesterday at 2 p.m. the big brass doors of parliament were closed. In the hall the flowers were shifted, the four-man guard of honor left, an attendant polished the mahogany casket and it was moved to the centre of the hall. Sunlight streamed in the gothic windows.

Then it was wheeled to the doors and shouldered by eight Mounties. The carillon in the Peace Tower played a hymn as the casket was put in a hearse.

The streets were lined four and five deep. People were massed at every window and at rooftop vantage points to watch the funeral procession.

The Governor-General, Lady Alexander and a few hundred others invited to the funeral were already in the church. When the funeral service ended they went out a side door and went to the station.

Touching Tributes Mark Route Of Mackenzie King Funeral Train

Aboard Mackenzie King Funeral Train, July 27 (CP) — A farmer came through his fields and stood near the tracks. When the train went by he took off his straw hat and stood there in his blue overalls, alone in the field, his head bowed a little bit.

A few miles along there was a big red brick house with some people outside and a car or two. If the Mackenzie King funeral train hadn't being going through, they wouldn't have been there.

The train didn't stop from Ottawa to Toronto but the people must have known when it was due and came to see it. There wasn't much to see—just a train with 15 cars—but they came because of what it was and what it stood for.

In Smiths Falls, the station was thick with people in the early evening. They watched the train go by which was all they could do to say goodbye to Mr. King.

Every once in a while there would be a car or two and a few people standing there, watching the train go by.

In the train, 15 or 16 cabinet ministers met and talked—maybe of Mr. King, or maybe of Korea.

Other coaches carried the near relatives and government officials and reporters all talking quietly.

In Toronto, Mr. King would receive the teeming tribute that great cities can pay. In Ottawa it was that way—thousands in the streets and filing past his bier in silent mourning. It would have touched Mr. King tremendously.

But as much as anything he would have been touched by a little scene in a quiet field —a farmer and his young son standing in the summer night, the man's hand on the boy's shoulder, watching the train go by, knowing what it was.

MacArthur Makes Quick Inspection of Warfront

Tokyo, July 28 — (Friday) — (AP) — North Korean troops and armor massed by night Thursday for an attempted knockout blow in the centre of United States defence lines.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters in a release early today said there was a lull along the whole battlefront but that enemy pressure continued in such a way as to indicate the communists are regrouping and remassing for a new assault.

MacArthur returned to Tokyo Thursday from a swift inspection tour of the Korean warfront. He expressed confidence of ultimate victory but said he foresees a long and difficult struggle ahead.

Headquarters said "aggressive patrols" in the southwest sector had pushed back a Korean communist column two miles to the vicinity of Hadong, 70 miles northwest of Pusan.

Two Holes Plugged

Two other holes were plugged on the approaches to Pusan — major American supply port. Other patrols moved into the highway town of Hamyang 78 miles northwest of Pusan and made contact with an enemy regiment in Namwon, about 22 miles southwest of Hamyang, headquarters said.

From the front an Associated Press correspondent, william R. Moore, reported three large communist columns are concentrating east of Yongdong in front of the U.S. 1st cavalry division.

A spokesman at General MacArthur's headquarters in Tokyo said two of the invading forces' three best divisions—the 2nd and 3rd—are massed in that sector.

Swarms of Allied and mustang fighters flew over the area, spewing rockets into Red lines and pouring fire into the advancing troops.

There was little fresh official news from the southwestern region of Korea where the communists this week swept south to the coast against little or no opposition.

Claim Towns Captured

However, the Pyongyang (North Korean) radio broadcast a claim that the North Koreans Monday captured Yosu, southern port, and Sunchon, in their thrust along the coast toward Pusan. Sunchon is about 86 miles by air west of Pusan and 21 miles northwest of Yosu.

Between the planes and South Koreans using Bazookas, six enemy tanks were knocked out in hot action, which may be the prelude to what appears to be the biggest battle of the Korean war.

A curtain of U.S. artillery fire met the attacking Reds, who aimed their attack at vital supply lines on the road to Pusan, U.S. supply port of the southeast coast 90 miles from Yongdong.

Gen. MacArthur was near the front as the battle went into its first stages.

"That we will have new heartaches and new setbacks is inherent in the situation," he said. "But I was never more confident of victory—ultimate victory—in my life than I am now."

Three North Korean columns, backed by a Red manpower reservoir of two divisions, pushed toward the new defence positions taken by the U.S. 1st Cavalry division near Yongdong. That city is a key point on the highway and rail lines running to the front from the main Allied supply Port of Pusan, 95 air miles southeast.

American artillery hurled murderous fire at the advancing Reds. U.S. Jets and Australian fighters raked the columns with rockets and machine-guns.

With the battle setting the central front aflame again, MacArthur made his second flying visit of the war to Korea.

Red Pushes Stalled

Except for the fresh Red eruption on the central front, North Korean pushes were stalled or blunted along the 200-mile front. This arc protects the United Nations beachhead that has been whittled down to a perimeter of 70 to 95 miles outward from Pusan on the Peninsula's southeastern tip.

American and South Korean troops, aided by the close-support of fighter planes, were reported to have recaptured Hadong, 70 miles west Pusan. Hadong was the deepest eastward penetration of the Red scythe sweep down the Yellow sea coast and across southwestern Korea.

At the other acute Red pressure point—near Hamchang 35 miles north and east of Yongdong—South Korean forces were reported shoving the communists back north of the town. They also got close air support.

The Yongdong, Hadong and Hamchang actions were first reported in field dispatches. MacArthur's headquarters summary early Thursday afternoon apparently was behind the front reports.

Clear weather gave Allied air power another day of free-for-all hunting—mostly along the front. U.S. and Australian fighters and American light bombers shot up tanks, trucks and troop concentrations.

TAPE RECORDER USED

Brantford, Ont., July 27, (CP) —For the first time in the history of court proceedings in Brantford, a tape recording machine was used to transcribe evidence in Juvenile court Wednesday.

The regular court reporter was on holidays and court officials resorted to the use of the machine.

3,000 POUNDS SCRAP METAL STOLEN

Scrap metal is still in good demand according to a representative of the Port Hope Construction Company which has been doing work in the city.

Yesterday an official of the construction firm reported to police that approximately 3,000 pounds of scrap iron had been stolen from the corner of Victoria and MacDonald where the firm had an office while doing work in the area. Police have not been successful in locating the metal.

BELLEVILLE BOY POSTED ON THE SIOUX

Although 80 per cent of the personnel serving on the Canadian destroyers Cayuga, Sioux, and Athabaska are from the western provinces, there is still a large representation of men from Ontario. The navy's policy is to station men from the Western Provinces on the West Coast and men from the Eastern Provinces on the Atlantic coast unless a special desire to serve elsewhere is expressed and that accounts for the high percentage of Western Canada men on the three Pacific based destroyers.

Among the 108 Ontario men with the fleet is Ord. Seaman W. E. Preston, son of Mrs. Florence M. Preston, 123 Front Street. He is posted to the Sioux.

Traffic Officers Making Drive Against Offenders

Acting on directions from the Ontario Highways Department, Provincial Police traffic officers at Belleville are going all out in their drive to reduce speeding and to rid the highways of vehicles which cannot come up to mechanical standards.

This action was indicated in county magistrate's court today when no less than 56 cases were listed on the morning court docket.

Seven of the charges were for careless driving, while there were a number of speeding charges. The majority of the charges, however, were for operating vehicles whose mechanical condition, such as brakes and lights, failed to come up to the standard.

"We have received definite instructions from Toronto to reduce speed on the highways," stated traffic officer Cpl. R. Morden. He said the vast majority of the charges on the weekly court docket were of a preventive nature, such as speeding and for operation of vehicles which were in an unsafe condition.

Lad Makes Good Try at Explanation

A bashed-in fender on father's car is a trifle hard to explain sometimes by junior after he has been out with the family jalopy, but a Thurlow township lad at least made a try at it while in the city yesterday.

The youth reported to the police station that while his car had been parked along Front Street an unknown motorist had dented the fender. Police officers looked at the damage and suspected it had not been done by another car.

A bit of close questioning and the lad admitted the damage had not been done in the city. It seems the car had come into contact with a tree.

Spent Night on Island Were Feared Drowned

Lavigne, Ont., July 27 (CP) — An Ohio man and his three sons, thought lost or drowned on stormy Lake Nipissing Wednesday night, returned here this morning unharmed.

A search party spent three hours Wednesday night scouring small islands dotting the lake.

W. D. Connelly, Warren, Ohio, and his three sons, James, 17, William 12, and David 11 brought their small boat into Lavigne today.

They had spent the night on a small island about 15 miles from here, Connelly said.

Muscote Bay Yields Nice Catch of Bass

The fisherman's dream come true shown above is concrete evidence that the big ones did not get away. The happy nimrods who took the 22 bass haul from Muscote Bay in two days are Sid Hewitt, left, and Danny Anger, right, of Hamilton, who are spending their vacation at Luke's Camp at Mountain View. That's Mr. Luke in the middle. Down front enjoying the fun is Larry Luke, son of the proprietor. The catch, one of the largest and heaviest taken this year, averaged four pounds per fish.

Rev. Don C. Amos and Mrs. Amos Honored by Tributes and Gifts By Bridge St. Church Congregation

A profusion of hydrangea and shasta daisies tastefully arranged on the platform in the Sunday School auditorium of Bridge St. United Church created a delightful and inviting background setting for enjoyable evening on Tuesday when the members and adherents of Bridge St. Church, as well as many friends from Tabernacle United Church, and the community, gathered to say farewell and extend good wishes to Rev. D. C. Amos, Mrs. Amos and their family. Mr. Amos is concluding his pastorate of over five years with Bridge Street Church.

After a holiday period through the month of August, Mr. Amos will assume his new duties and responsibilities at Northlea United Church, Leaside, Toronto, to which charge he was called several months ago. He will be charged not only with giving spiritual leadership to a new congregation which has grown up within the last two years at Northlea, but with the further responsibility of supervision of the erection of a new church building to accommodate the rapidly increasing membership, which has outgrown the hall in which services have been held, and which provides for over 400 people. Added to this Mr. Amos will be responsible for supervising the erection of a suitable residence for himself and family and the families of the ministers and their families who, sometime in the future, will become Mr. Amos' successors.

The basement of the church was filled to capacity. Mr. C. W. Burr was chairman for the splendid program which preceded the presentations. After the singing of "Blest be the Tie that Binds" and prayer by Mr. Amos. Mr. J. D. Bankier led in community singing. Miss Nancy David gave two readings, "A Soldier's Prayer," and "I'll take Five Dollars Now." Mr. Leo Riggs favored with several piano instrumentals, which were much appreciated. Miss Helen Cooke rendered, "The Lord is My Shepherd," and "Where'er You Are," the latter being dedicated to Mr. Amos.

"Vera Chera's Sunshine Talk" and "A Rejected Candidate" were read by Miss Helen Sulman, stirring the audience to laughter, many times. Miss Loretta McDougall pleasingly rendered "A Little Prayer I Live", and "Deep River", and Mr. Bankier delighted the audience with "Joe, the Gypsy", "Friends of Yesterday" and the closing number, "Spring Will Return to You". Presiding at the piano were Mr. Leo Riggs and Mr. and Mrs. Allan.

Besides Mr. and Mrs. Amos and Paul, who were called to the platform, were also those of the program committee: Mr. W. H. Finkle, Mr. H. W. Ackerman, Mr. C. L. Hyde, Mrs. J. E. Marsh, Miss Mabel Russel, Mrs. Morley, Mr. Arthur Clare and Mr. W. J. Morrison.

Presentation Made

Mr. Finkle read the illuminated address, which had been written by Mr. Bruce Blatherwick and Mr. Ackerman made the presentation to Mr. Amos of a purse of money, Mr. Hyde presented Mrs. Amos with an occasional chair, while Mrs. Marsh made the presentation of a bouquet of roses.

Mr. Arthur Clare, on behalf of the Sunday School, also made a presentation, as well as one from the Y.P.U., made by Miss Russel. Mrs. Morley also represented the Sunday School.

Mr. W. J. Morrison, superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf, spoke briefly of the good work done by Mr. and Mrs. Amos during their sojourn in the city. Before closing, he called Mrs. Clifford Holmes to the platform, and presented a gift to her and her husband, who are soon leaving the city for Prescott, where Mr. Holmes has been appointed inspector of public schools.

Mr. Burr thanked those who had helped to make the evening a time to be remembered as marked by the spirit of kindliness and goodwill.

Expressions of Regret

Expressions of regret at not being able to be present were received from Mr. J. G. Galloway, who also sent good wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Amos and their family, Mr. T. K. Franklin, who is on holidays, Mr. Alec Gordon, who is holidaying at Glen Falls, N.Y., sent a telegram expressing his regrets, at not being able to be present.

The ladies of Bridge Street served refreshments and during the social hour, Rev. F. R. Harback, Tabernacle United Church, who had interrupted his vacation to attend, gave a brief address in which he told of the many helpful ways in which Mr. and Mrs. Amos had served their congregation.

In his reply Mr. Amos stated that the kindnesses extended to himself and Mrs. Amos and their family during their stay in Belleville had been a real benediction, and had made it easier for him to be a minister of the gospel, and to render effective service. He said "There is no work to which a man can give his life that pays such rewarding dividends due to one's opportunity to meet people in all walks of life and under all sorts of circumstances and offer help."

It Pays to Observe Traffic Act Rules

Observance of the highway traffic regulations is a good way to keep out of trouble.

This was found out yesterday by a 14-year-old driver of a north end grocery delivery truck.

The lad was making deliveries on East Moira and had pulled out from the left curb when his fender caught the fender of another vehicle proceeding in the same direction.

Police investigation revealed the lad had no driver's permit. He had been charged for operating without a permit while the father-owner of the truck has been charged with permitting a person to drive who has no permit.

Two Cars Locked in Collision Pushed Off Track by Locomotive

Two Trenton owned autos were badly damaged Wednesday evening on the northern outskirts of the town when unable to move as they locked bumpers on the railroad track they were struck by the engine of a passing CNR freight. No one was hurt in the accident.

Vernon Hanley, Quinte Street, Trenton, and Douglas MacDonald, Dominion Street, were driving in opposite directions on North Sidney Street when their cars locked bumpers on the railroad track.

They struggled vainly to disengage the autos as an approaching local freight bore down on them. They jumped away just as the slow moving freight struck the autos. One car was shoved about 60 feet down the track while the other was pushed into the ditch near the crossing. Frames of both cars were badly twisted.

Provincial Constable Ivan Tinkess investigated the accident.

Sale of Lafferty Property Brings End to a Business 40 Years Old

Sale of the Lafferty garage property on Pinnacle Street, and the adjoining LaPalm property to an undisclosed buyer, has been announced.

Arrangements for the purchase of the two local properties were made by a Toronto purchasing broker who declined to name the client for whom they were acting.

Extent of the two properties on the east side of Pinnacle Street almost directly opposite the Memorial Arena is about 130 feet along Pinnacle with a depth of 173 feet. It is understood the purchaser is negotiating for a rear entrance to the property from Church Street.

With the sale of the property to a new owner a business which has been in continuous operation for nearly 40 years will be ended. It was back in 1911 that John Lafferty purchased the livery stable business on his present garage site which he operated until about 1925.

Then, with the change of the times and the livery business on the decline, Mr. Lafferty went into the garage business which he has carried on since. He had been dealer with the same gasoline firm for the past 22 years. Under terms of the sale Mr. Lafferty will vacate the property early in August.

The LaPalm property at one time was also operated as a livery stable. Mr. Howard LaPalm, proprietor of LaPalm's Transport, took the property over nearly 20 years ago. He will build on a new site on the highway but will remain at his present stand for six months.

New Corn Sells At 60 Cts. Dozen

New corn made its first appearance on the local market today. Early morning prices dropped fast to a 60c per dozen level. No great volume was offered.

Also a new offering were golden yellow cherries. A new brand, these were shown by one man for $1.00 for six quarts. Montmorencys remained steady at the weekend price. Blueberries also remained solid, at $2.25 for six quarts.

Red currants were 20c per quart, raspberries of the red variety were 40c per quart. One woman sold 76 boxes in a hurry when she offered them at two boxes for 75c, or 35c each in dozen lots. Blue raspberries were 5c cheaper. Total volume of raspberries was down from the Tuesday market.

Potatoes did not move after the weekend dip to 75c per peck.

CHILD BURNED TO DEATH

Noelville, Ont., July 27—(CP) —Hubert Duval, 2, was burned to death Wednesday when fire destroyed a barn filled with hay on his father's farm about 50 miles southwest of North Bay. It was believed the $8,000 fire was started by one of the lad's two brothers, with whom he was playing.

Calves 100; good and choice handyweight calves 31.00-33.00; culls and strongweight bobs 27.00-29.00.

Hogs 600; good and choice hogs 20.00-25.50; good sows 16.00-18.00.

Lambs and sheep: Market not established.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 27 (CP) — Industrial and base metal stocks climbed strongly on the Toronto stock exchange today. Refining oils led a wide list of leading industrials strongly ahead following two days of narrow and easier price movements. Base metals continued in moderate demand after a strong gain yesterday.

Papers, utilities and steels were strong and advances were increasing as the session continued. Food slipped slightly. Textiles brightened from recent easiness following announcement of price increase by Dominion textile.

Buying interest stretched into a second successive day in base metals. Leaders climbed well ahead yesterday and continued rising but at a slower pace.

A handful of junior gold producers were in demand in early dealings but mild selling in mid-session reduced the gains.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, July 27 (CP) — Cattle prices were weak at previous declines at the Ontario stockyards today. Receipts: Cattle 130; calves, 10; hogs, 150; sheep and lambs, 30. Left from yesterday were 1,300 cattle, mostly plain killers and stockers.

A few weighty steers sold at $27-$30 with common to medium steers and heifers $18-$27. Medium to good cows were $18.50-$22.50. Stockers ran from $21-$25.50. With a few better quality at $27.

A few calves sold up to $30 for choice vealers.

Hogs sold at $30.75 for grade A with sows at $22 dressed.

Lambs were $30 for good ewes and wethers. Bucks brought $29.

Watchman Dies, Was Mysteriously Injured in Plant

Windsor, Ont., July 27 (CP)— Injuries received in a mysterious beating early Wednesday proved fatal to Angello Favozzo, night watchman at the Windsor textiles plant here. Favozzo died in hospital here.

A post mortem examination will be conducted today to determine the exact casue of death.

Favozzo was found unconscious on the floor of the boiler room at the textile plant. He had cuts about the shoulders and face and head injuries. The boiler room door was locked from the inside, and the condition of the room indicated that a struggle had taken place.

Faculty Dean Says Much of Money Spent on Education is Wasted

Montreal (CP)—Much of the money spent on education in North America is wasted says H. N. Fieldhouse, Dean of the Arts and Science Faculty at McGill University.

"Society expects schools and universities to do the work once done in the home—to teach children everything from manners to happy marriage," he said in an interview here.

"This is supposed to be the continent of self reliance, yet more and more people are asking for courses that are advice on how to solve personal problems.

"So many people now want university education that even high schools have been continually lowering their standards.

"Universities are being asked to put on courses that teach people merely tricks of the trade and to dignify these courses by granting a degree. The desire is often for a degree that is merely a label of approval, a social tag."

Dean Fieldhouse likened what is happening to universities to what happened to the middle ages church. People expected too much from it and turned against it when it failed to satisfy all their needs. They forgot the commonsense and understanding the church showed despite its faults. This, he said, may well happen in North America.

MR. EHRENBURG HAS NO ANSWER

Ilya Ehrenburg, Russia's top foreign correspondent, is shown as he addressed a crowd organized by the British peace committee. Ehrenburg told his listeners that the Russians were too busy building cities and tending their gardens to think about war. He had no answer to questions on Russia's part in the Korean war. —Central Press Canadian.

THINKS A-POWER

Soviet divisions, he said.

"The Russians know their own strength and it is certain they also know with great precision the the Allies' weakness and conditions," Churchill added.

If the facts he had stated could not be contradicted by the government, the preparations of Western Union countries to defend themselves certainly stood on a far lower level than those of the South Koreans.

Churchill asked: How many fighter and bomber aircraft have the Russians in full commission on the western front? Would 4,000, 5,000 or 6,000 be too large an estimate?

He added:

"If Russian armies reach or approach the coast of France and hold the airfields there from which we were attacked by the Germans 10 years ago, they could, I fear, outnumber us in the air by a far larger number of machines than Hitler ever had."

Churchill blamed at least a part of Britain's peril on post-war shipments of jet airplane engines from this county "to places like Russia, Egypt and the Argentine." He added:

"We are more defenceless than we have ever been and I find this a terrible thought. We must never despair. We must never give in."

On the brighter side, Churchill expressed the opinion that the United States still has a "measureless superiority" over the rest of the world in atom bomb stocks.

"I adhere to my feeling that so far very few have been produced by Russia," he said. "The extraordinary efforts which they are making to obtain even small quantities of uranium seem to justify the hopeful view.

"If this be true, there can be no doubt that the United States posses superiority in so vast a measure that Russian aggression is still subject to effective and even, perhaps, decisive deterrent."

SAFE PASTIMES

There are many ways in which school children on summer vacation are exposed to danger. Not the least of these is the threat of injury from automobiles on the street.

While playgrounds opened in the city recently have eliminated much of the danger of injury or death to school children, there are some youngsters who do not and will not attend these grounds. These are the boys and girls who get themselves and others into trouble.

An illustration of what might happen and nearly did happen was given to us one night recently. Three young boys, none of them looking to be more than ten years old, were joking and laughing about one of their more recent escapades. "Show him where I nicked you with the .22," one said. With that the second lad lifted his shirt, and there, on his side was a red welt from the bullet.

The shocking part of the episode was that the boys considered the bullet burn a fine joke. When the third lad, the oldest of the trio, protested "you might have killed him," the other two went into paroxysms of laughter. The story was that one lad had been standing beside a tree at which the second boy was shooting. Had the aim been better, there was every chance that a death might have resulted.

Unsupervised activities during the summer months can lead to tragedy in too easy a fashion. It is the responsibility of parents to help the city provide safer pastimes for the children by controlling them better. A child is the most precious possession in the world — no one can afford the loss.

GENERAL EVANGELINE BOOTH

General Evangeline Booth has passed after a life of dedication to the great cause of humanity and faith. Her father was the world-known General William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army. In her later years she became head of the organization which has borne its message to the far ends of the earth. She directed in her three score years of service her boundless effort to the service of God and humanity, says the Ottawa Citizen.

General Booth received homage from kings and emperors and presidents during her long lifetime. But her heart was always with the poor and the sick, whether in Canada or Nazi Germany or in the ugly alleys of a London slum. She had a way of bending the admiration of the mighty to her own ends, and they were the ends of humanity. She upbraided Hitler in 1936 and made him rescind an order restricting activities of the Salvation Army in Germany. She was the first Occidental woman to receive an audience with Emperor Hirohito of Japan, and used his influence to extend the Army's good works among the needy of Tokyo and Nagasaki.

Canada knew her well. She headed the Salvation Army in Canada for nine years at the turn of the century, carrying on an aggressive war against social evil wherever she found it. During the Klondike gold rush of 1898, Miss Booth led a Salvation Army mission and nursing brigade into the confused and brutal camps of the prospectors, sharing their hardships and dangers.

General Booth discovered early in her career that the road of the evangelical worker is steep and rocky. From the time when, as a 13-year-old child, she stood on a kitchen chair in London's tough Limehouse district to preach the Gospel, until she retired as head of the international organization in 1939, her life and works were fraught with conflict.

She won the right to hold religious meetings on the streets after carrying an appeal to the judicial committee of the Privy Council.

An insight into this remarkable woman's character is found in a statement made on her 76th birthday: "My only regret is that I haven't two lives to give to God and humanity."

What she has accomplished in one lifetime will remain in the memory of the Salvation Army and the world as an outstanding achievement.

JUST FOLKS

TO TIE STRAIGHTENERS

Here's to the lady who straightens my tie
And ventures to dust off
my coat!
Too often, too careless, of such things am I,
As all who behold me can note.
Be she Florence or Betty or Mabel or Mae,
I am happy and willing to stand
As she straightens my tie or flicks ashes away,
For I welcome the touch of her hand.

I know I am heedless whenever I dress
And need come devotional care.
So I'll ever be grateful to Ella
or Bess,
Who tidies the tie that
I wear.

I love the white hands that reach up to my throat,
Wherever I happen to be.
I smile as they're fixing my tie or my coat,
For I know they're devoted to me.

I'm a lonely old fellow in need of the care
Which woman on man must bestow,
And that ladies will notice the things that I wear
Is certainly flatt'ring to know.
So here's to them all who have cast upon me
A twinkling, but critical eye,
And have stepped up, wherever
I happened to be,
To straighten my coat and my tie.

30 YEARS AGO

July 27th., 1920.

Mr. Frank Garrett of North Bay was one of the old boys present at the reunion, who has been absent from the old home town for many years and he met many old timers who gave him a hearty welcome.

Sergt. Frank J. Naphan, the genial police officer, chaperoned the reunion parades at midnight and after. At one time he lost his helmet, but never lost his temper and the captured headpiece was recovered without any casualties.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edwards of Brockville were here for the reunion and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Austin.

Capt. William Robinson of Chicago was welcomed by many old friends at the reunion.

The baseball match between the Old Timers from a distance and Old Timers at home was an interesting event on the program of the Old Boys' Reunion. The result was victory for the Old Timers from a distance, the score being 19-7. The following were the players: Old Timers home for the reunion, Mark Dulmage, J. Holland, J. Ballantyne, John Gibson, W. Oliphant, J. Wonnacott, J. E. Bulger, A. J. Parker and Hampton; Old Timers at home: W. Thompson, A. R. Symons, J. E. Parks, R. Mackie, R. H. Ketcheson, Phil Harrison, George Moxam, M. Lynch and A. Jones. Col. Lazier acted as umpire for a part of the game and George Dulmage took over for the balance of the game. The game afforded great amusement.

July 27th., 1910.

The Belleville Old Boys' Reunion for 1910 is now a thing of the past. Most of the old boys and girls have returned to their homes many a great distance from the old home town but many a long year will roll by ere either visitors of Bellevillians forget the wholehearted welcome, the gay festivities and the happy reunions of the past few days. And so we say good bye to the friends of other days; may fortune shine upon them in their homes wherever they may dwell and may they all be back to see us again at some future time.

All the officials of the reunion did excellent work and the citizens in general did themselves proud.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

This story is told of the bearded Duke of Devonshire, uncle of the one-time Governor-General of Canada. He was driving in a gig over his vast estates when he came upon a tough looking poacher, with his lurcher dog, on a lonely path.

The duke pulled up and demanded to know if the man was aware he was trespassing.

"Whose land is it?" enquired the poacher.

"Mine," said the duke.

"Where did you get it?"

"From my father, of course."

"Where did he get it?"

"From his father, dammit!"

"And where did he get it?"

"Look here: it is inherited from our original ancestor, who fought for it!" asserted the duke indignantly.

"Fair enough," agreed the poacher, starting to take off his coat. "Then I'll fight you for it!"

It is reported the duke went sktch, sktch, and drove on.

Twenty-five years ago, this was considered a very amusing tale. But events in the past quarter-century have deflated much of the humor out of it. Inheritance taxes, excess profits taxes and common income taxes, which were unheard of in the day of the poacher and the duke now make the inheritance of great fortunes well nigh impossible. But what is more, they make the amassing of them extremely difficult, and the possession of them hazardous to the health and character.

The history of politics across the centuries might be said to consist of the struggle of men to get possession of wealth and power, and then to stabilize society around them so as to be able to hang onto them.

The story of the duke and the poacher might signalize the end of one political era and the start of another.

JET PILOTS KILLED

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

TO THE DEFENSE

Moose Jaw, Sask.—As a longtime admirer of the seagull, species of which we have encountered everywhere on this western leg of our trans-Canada crawl. I feel I must rise to the defense of some maligned gulls in Florida.

Friends of mine (and friends of seagulls, too) have sent me a copy of an editorial from the Fort Lauderdale (Florida) Daily News, obviously written by a man who either knows nothing about gulls or has something against this noble bird, perhaps through one of those unpredictable accidents involving gulls.

Anyway, it seems that for many years down in St. Augustine, Florida, seagulls have been depending for their food on the scraps and waste thrown overboard from the shrimping fleet.

Recently some new and more productive shrimp fishing grounds were located off Key West. The shrimp fleet deserted St. Augustine for these new grounds and the sea gulls left behind (it says here) haven't been able to adjust themselves to the new situation.

They are said to be standing around the shore at St. Augustine looking fretfully out to sea and going hungry.

Why should this prompt an editorial? you ask. Because the Florida writer sees in it the evils of a "welfare state."

If you give people or seagulls something for nothing, the editorial claims, they lose their ability to look after themselves. Give them security (as gulls following a shrimping fleet, or citizens on a government allowance) and they become bums, the editorial says.

"The gulls are starving by the hundreds," it claims, "because their welfare state suddenly disappeared and with it went their ability to fend for themselves."

On Their Own

Now, of course, I don't give a hoot about the political issues involved here, but I sure am hot under the collar about this guy using my birds to make his dubious point.

As anybody who has lived on a seashore knows, the gull is anything but an idle bum, or charity case, living off society and paying nothing for it.

Nobody wanted the scraps and waste thrown overboard from the shrimp boats. If Joe Gull hadn't been around to clean up the mess it would have been right up on St. Augustine's pretty white beaches. A harbor without the seagull would be like a town without a garbage collector.

Furthermore, as any student of sea gulls knows, the big, white bird is probably the most aggressive, imaginative, go-gettingest free enterpriser in the feathered world and would certainly resent being described as "living at the scrap table of false security."

Consider those cleverest of gulls who fly out from New York to do a little business with the Queen Elizabeth. I recall standing on the top deck of the big ship earlier this year as she entered the channel of buoys that lead into the towers of Manhattan and seeing the first of the New Yorker gulls flying out, brief cases under their wings, to get their bundles from Britain.

How these birds know when the big ship will arrive, frequently a mystery to even the Cunard Line, is a constant source of wonder to seafaring men. In a small way those energetic gulls who serviced the St. Augustine shrimp boats were just as resourceful.

I should hastily add, too, that the mere sight of gulls put them in a class deserving of special privileges. Charity cases, indeed! Forsooth, we owe the gull a regular bounty for the pretty picture he makes dipping on the horizon. Only a man stranded in Moose Jaw knows just what that can mean in gladdening the heart.

Just Passing

Needless to say, I have no opportunity at the moment for using my vast scientific ornithological experience on the particular problem in St. Augustine's.

It does occur to me, however, that what this editorial writer assumes to be hungry gulls may be only tourist gulls. Gulls are inveterate wanderers and sightseers. Some gulls with distinguishing features, such as a missing leg, have been recorded as visiting summer resorts for many years in a row.

It may well be, then, that the St. Augustine gulls are just passing through, wait a day or two for the shrimping fleet, and then regretfully move on. One gull looks pretty much the same as another to an editorial writer. So the birds he describes as standing in rows "their dark eyes turned prayerfully out to sea", may in reality be just transients understandably disappointed to find that the old cafeteria service has disappeared.

In any event, the gull never lived who couldn't find a meal by sheer cunning. The editorial writer himself reports that the people of St. Augustine are "trying desperately to save the gulls" by a city-wide effort to round up table scraps and unused popcorn from movies.

Chances are that a bird who can figure out an ocean liner's schedule won't have much difficulty anticipating such a fine, civic seagull picnic.

Why, say, long after that editorial writer has retired on his welfare-state old age pension the St. Augustine seagulls will still be looking after themselves in the same way.

Mackenzie's Column:

U.N. Powers' Co-Operation Of Great Value

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

The huge United States rearmament program, involving as it does such great sacrifices by all her citizens, naturally has made a lot of folk speculate whether the U.S., after all, is carrying more than its fair weight of the burden for international defence against communism.

That thought hasn't been inspired by selfishness. It's due to the belief that this defence is a partnership affair in which each democracy, big or little, must do its proportionate share. We stand or fall together.

Of course, the U.S. doesn't wish to evade the leadership which her strength and resources impose upon her. Furthermore, she expects to contribute in material things in proportion to her means. She recognizes, too, that many countries still are struggling to recover from the ravages of the last war.

Ground Troops Offered

However, the early reaction of some of the democratic bloc to the assault on South Korea was to say the least, cautious and non-committal.

That was disappointing and puzzling to many Americans. Therefore it is with just so much more appreciation that we now see a reversal of this attitude and a heartening display of co-operation.

More members of the United Nations are offering ground troops and other military aid to help meet the Korean crisis.

State Secretary Dean Acheson declared these offers are of the greatest political importance.

Such a warm response has a great psychological effect, not only in the democratic camp but in Moscow. It is an expression of solidarity and of determination. It sets the flag of the United Nations to tugging at its halyard.

However, that's far from being the whole story. The council of the Atlantic pact powers, meeting in London, has decided to go all out in organizing the defences of Western Europe against possible attack.

Tribal Custom Wins Freedom For Aborigines

Brisbane, Australia, July 27—(Reuters)— Tribal custom took precedence over statute law when two Australian Aborigines were acquitted of murder charges.

Hundreds of miles of country never before traversed by white men were crossed by police to bring the two to justice.

An Aborigine policeman named Harry was stabbed to death March 15, was subsequently two natives named Williams and Conrad were charged with his murder.

In court policeman Harry was said to have "earned" death by breaking a tribal taboo. He had broken Williams' weapons and thrown him to the ground, something—said a mission superintendent—that must never be done.

Breaking the taboo entitled Williams to attack Harry, he said.

The judge ruled that in view of the opinions voiced by those versed in tribal law, no good purpose could be served by continuing the prosecution.

WHY SO SENSITIVE TO COLD?

In a preceding talk about the woman in her thirties or forties who nods or dozes off at odd and perhaps embarrassing moments I commented on her "chilly" obsession. She complains of the cold or a perceptible draft even when every one else in the room is comfortable or maybe too warm. She wears a fur coat in or out of season, like a cat, though mainly because she feels comfortable with her coat on, not just to make other women envious.

No matter how much sleep she gets every night, the woman with slow metabolism, smoldering vital fire, sub-oxidation is dull or drowsy most of the time, disinclined to go places and do things, that is, unless she can just sit and look on without taking any part in the doings herself.

Besides being so sensitive to cold and so fond of overheated rooms and excessive clothing, the woman in her thirties or forties with low metabolism or sub-oxidation and a marked disinclination to do any work or take any exercise or play any game that involves physical activity gradually accumulates a handicap of flabby slacker flesh.

What she needs is, first, correction of the wrong diet she has followed for many years, along the lines of the basic health diet described in The 7 Keys to Vite (for the booklet send 25 cts. and stamped self addressed envelope); and second, two miles of oxygen on the hoof, three times a day.

Yes, yes, I know. Prescribing a six-mile walk as a daily stint for a woman whose favorite recreation is sitting—in the car, at the theatre, at the card party, in the soda fountain or cocktail joint, in the grandstand — may seem too strenuous, but I do not mean that the woman leading such a sedentary existence can or should take such a large dose of oxygen at first. If she begins with only a mile a day for the first week or ten days, then 1½ a day for another week, 2 miles a day the third week and so no, she will recover enough vite to do her six miles a day and more with great enjoyment and benefit.

One more or less universal deficiency in the everyday American diet is the lack of iodine in food or drinking water. In the vite booklet I tell how to get enough iodine. Man needs but little iodine every day, but must have it or else. I am speaking, of course of nutritional iodine, not medicinal and despite the half-baked utterances of some doctors who do not understand this difference, there is no evidence that anybody ever suffers any ill effect from an adequate daily ration of iodine.

I recommend particularly to women in their thirties or forties, with sub-oxidation, abnormal sensitiveness to cold or chilliness and a tendency to nod or doze at times when it may be embarrassing, a suitable daily ration of iodine, not for a few weeks or months but for life—for after all, good nutrition is as desirable when you are ninety as it is when you are thirty. The iodin ratio (I spell it that way to emphasize that it is nutritional) gradually raises body temperature to the normal, dispels the oversensitiveness to cold and overcomes the weakness of the knees of which many of these victims of malnutrition complain.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

What! No Sweet Flag?

Please tell me where I can buy sweet flag. This herb has another name which I do not know. Druggists do not seem to know what it is. (Mrs. A. S.)

Answer—Other names for it are calamus, sweet root, sweet myrtle, grass myrtle and sweet cinnamon. It has no remedial value. Used in perfumery.

Both Twins Fertile

Is it true that one of two twins is sterile? (J. A. R.)

Answer—No. Lost somewhere in my files are some dozens of reports received from twin sisters who have borne children. So the notion that one of twins is likely to be sterile is one for the birds.

Practical Recipes

We believe we could be of service to the public if we had all of your practical recipes—which people are asking for continually. (Pharmacy)

Answer — Send twenty-five cents and stamped self-addressed envelope for The Medicine Cupboard.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THEY CUT OFF THE LIGHT

A carpenter put in his appearance at our house some months ago and began to put up the screens. I happened to be sitting at my desk when the three screens were put on the windows of that room, and I was amazed to notice a perceptible darkening of the room. It takes an experience such as that to awaken one to the realization that the thousands of little strands of wire over the window eliminate a very measurable amount of light from a room.

Being a preacher, I was impressed by a practical teaching which grew out of this circumstance and could not refrain from moralizing a bit about it. There are a million little things in the lives of everyone of us which are shutting out light from our minds and souls. We have all allowed little habits of laziness, bitterness, and irritability to create situations in our lives which shut out the light. There are many people who have fallen into the habit of taking little short-cuts — white lies, shrewd practices, dissimulation of all kinds, and these invariably shut out the light.

Like the slender wires, woven into a screen, these things at last overcast the soul and shut off the light.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

APPRECIATION AND GRATITUDE

I have written in this space many times about appreciation and gratitude, but I think that we all should bear both of them in mind, for they are among the essentials to personal peace and happiness.

In my office hangs a fine picture of the late Robert (Bob) Ripley, and on it he has written the following: "To George Matthew Adams, who gave me my first job, to whom I am eternally grateful. Bob Ripley—'Believe It Or Not.'" This photograph was given to me some twenty years later than the incident mentioned, but never did he forget his appreciation of that early act. The picture is one of my prized possessions, because it represents the biggest payment he could have made me.

Early in my career I used to walk long distances to work in order to save the carfare, and whenever I would pass a hotel I would step in and drop a note to my mother, thanking her for all her kindnesses and sacrifices for me. Then I would go to my room extremely happy for I would be thinking of the time she would read those notes and her heart would warm with joy and satisfaction over my never forgetting to thank her and to tell her how much I loved her. Now she has long gone, but her memory is as green as the grass of Springtime.

There is a lack of appreciation and gratitude in many a home, and many a mother's and father's heart often aches because of it. How simple never to let that ache appear! It is a part of the nature of most people to be appreciative and to render gratitude when due, but they often forget. That forgetting may darken the day for one we love—and it is such an easy thing to avoid such a happening. Many a friend has been lost because of failure to give appreciation.

The happiest two words in the language are perhaps these two—Thank you! They are utility words that spring from the heart. And they shine out from a life like pet stars in the sky!

World Jamboree at Valley Forge Enjoyed by Local Boy Scouts

Trenton—(Special)—Paul Davis nd LeRoy Wannamaker who returned a few days ago after atending the World Scout Jamboree t Valley Forge, Pennsylvania, gree that they really enjoyed the rip and will remember it for the est of their lives. Unfortunately, ohn McConnell, the other Trenon Scout who attended the jamoree was out of town, when the Ontario Intelligencer called the oys to arrange for an interview.

"Getting to meet some of the ellows from other countries and alking to them about their diffrent systems of scouting," was he highlight of the trip as far as Kings' Scout Paul Davis was conerned. For First Class Scout eRoy Wannamaker, the most outtanding event was a "spectacular ire works display," when over 0,000 guests along with the 47,000 couts from all over the world ssembled to watch the display nd hear an address by General isenhower.

President Truman officially pened the jamboree on June 30 nd the boys report that the uarter-mile square open air audiorium was packed solid with couts who gathered to hear the resident's address.

The boys said that the President nd General Eisenhower discussd the Korean war and paid triute to the scout movement as a raining ground for democratic itizenship—an organization which s doing a great deal to stamp out ommunism by stressing the value of individual freedom and fair play.

Camped at Historic Valley Forge

The international scout gathering camped at historic Valley Forge national park, where George Washington survived the privations of a harsh winter and persistent British attacks during the first months of the American Revolutionary War.

The boys brought back several snap shots and souvenir photographs of the 330 acre park which show there are plenty of reminders to the present generation that it was "the spirit of 76" that gave birth to the United States.

At the entrance to the five square mile area of "rolling hills and parklands" is a large stone memorial arch which "looks just like pictures of the Arch of Triumph in Paris," said Paul Davis.

The Trenton boys were billeted with the other 250 Canadian scouts in the international section which included scouts from England, France, Holland, Cuba, Venezuela, Hawaii, Western Germany and Japan. No Iron Curtain countries were represented.

Ontario had the largest representation of any province in Canada, with 118 scouts in attendance. The camp was divided into 34 camping sections and there were over 8,000 tents," said LeRoy Wannamaker.

Flag Raising Ceremony

The first morning after pitching camp, there was a flag raising ceremony. Paul Davis described how the flags from the various countries represented were raised following the playing of the American National Anthem and the hoisting of the Stars and Stripes. Twenty-six flags were soon flying side by side, including the flag of Japan. This marked the first time a Japanese flag had been raised on American soil since before the recent war.

A tour of Philadelphia was another feature of the trip. While in the city of Brotherly Love, the boys visited Betsy Ross House; Independence Hall where they saw the famous Liberty Bell, and several other historical sites in the first capital of the United States.

Both Paul and LeRoy found that American scouts were very anxious to obtain some of their Canadian money. Instead of paying the normal ten per cent exchange for United States funds, the boys collected a premium. "Swapping scout badges" was another favorite pastime.

Americans Envied "Our Uniforms"

Both boys said that Canadian scouts had it all over other scouts when it came to uniforms and marching in parades. "The Americans really looked up to us for our uniforms," said Paul Davis and "we were much smarter marching.

Other scouts placed a very high bargaining value on Canadian scout uniforms and equipment according to Paul and LeRoy who added, "they offered so much stuff for our uniforms that we were lucky to come back with any part of our own outfits at all."

Repairs to Start On Stretch of Stirling Road

Trenton (Special) — Repairs will be started immediately on the mile and one half stretch of Stirling highway from the subway to the town limits.

Mayor Couch made this statement this morning, following his return from a meeting with Highways Minister George Doucett in Toronto yesterday. A delegation of representatives from Trenton, Murray township and Batawa discussed the problem of responsibility for fixing this part of the highway which is badly in need of repair.

Mr. Couch said that legislature was not likely to pass a special act to take over the road from Trenton. At present, the province cannot take posesssion of a road directly from an incorporated town. The alternatives said Mr. Couch are to become part of the county "in which case we could gain assistance or turn over the road to Murray township and they in turn could hand it over to the province.' '

"In the best interests of all concerned, the town of Trenton will start repairing the road at once," said Mayor Couch. "We will use a granular base and the province will pay one third of the cost.

Sunday Traffic On Trent Canal Starts August 6th

Trenton—Bridges and lift locks on the Trent Canal will be open for water traffic on Sunday starting Aug. 6 to Sunday, September 3. This announcement was made Wednesday by Senator W. A. Fraser.

Largest Single Pay Of GM in Oshawa Is $1,790,000

Oshawa, July 27—(CP)—This city is bulging with purchasing power as employees of General Motors Company of Canada, Ltd., receive their annual fortnight's vacation pay— the largest single pay in Oshawa's history at $1,790,000.

Some 8,700 employees are on vacation. Similar vacation payrolls in nine Oshawa plants holidaying at the same time have swelled this total. Most of the workers are spending their vacations out of town and many merchants are closing shop for the same two-week period.

MASTERPIECE ACQUIRED

London, July 27 (CP) — A painting "Marine Parade and Old Chain Pier, Brighton," by the British master John Constable, has been acquired by the nation for £15,000 ($45,000). In 1837 it brought $135.

Purchase of the masterpiece from the collection of Dr. H. A. C. Gregory, was disclosed by Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The painting, described as a first-class example of Constable at his best," is roughly four by six feet.

84 VOTED FOR SETTLEMENT

Windsor, Ont., July 27 (CP)—Settlement proposals for the 20-day-old strike of 50 office employees at the Windsor Salt and Chemical Plant of Canadian Industries Limited were approved at a membership meeting Wednesday night of Local 240, United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.)

The employees voted about 90 percent in favor of the settlement, a union spokesman said. The union negotiating committee had recommended the proposals.

Haliburton Man Killed in Crash Of Plane in U.S.

Warren, Pa., July 27 (AP) — A Canadian machine shop owner was killed and a Warren man seriously injured Wednesday night when their light plane crashed into a hill near the eastern outskirts of this western Pennsylvania town.

Coroner Ed C. Lowrey said Henry Miller, 47, of Haliburton, Ont., died about two hours after the crash.

Marshall Mathis, 51, a ground school instructor at the Warren airport and a veteran flyer, is in serious condition. He suffered fractures of both ankles, multiple lacerations and shock.

Lowrey said Mathis was piloting the ship and told rescuers the last he remembered was "when the engine went out."

The official said the plane apparently was heading for an open field "and could have negotiated an emergency landing if it had just gone a little farther."

Miller, survived by his wife and three children, had been visiting Mathis, a close personal friend.

WOUNDED BY PELLETS

Guelph, Ont., July 27 (CP)—Wounded in the neck and shoulders by shotgun pellets said to have been fired by an irate farmer, James Jotham, 14, is improving in hospital here today.

Robert Griffin, 60, district farmer, was remanded one week on $1,000 bail yesterday on a charge of wounding.

He Knew What He Wanted — Got it

St. Thomas, July 27 (CP) — New York Central Railway's crack New York to Chicago diesel-drawn passenger express which makes a regular stop at St. Thomas, made a second unscheduled stop here.

A St. Thomas man— name undisclosed — was returning from New York. He was riding in one of the rear coaches of the long train. When it stopped at St. Thomas he looked out and saw he would have a long walk down the platform to get to the exit. He had a lot of baggage.

So he refused to get off.

This posed a problem for railway officials for a little while. The train was going on to Detroit.

After a hurried consultation between conductor and engineer the mighty diesel engine started to pull away from the station. Just as the last coaches were abreast of the exit the train stopped—an unscheduled stop. And the St. Thomas man was allowed to get off with his baggage.

Low Neckline Starts Nice Row in Rome

Rome, July 27—(AP)—Italy's over-worked Ministry of Interior got another hot problem today: How low can a nice Roman lady's neckline go and still be nice?

Three Italian deputies, incensed over what they thought was too much exposure by a woman in a restaurant, now are in a court action brought by the lady. Two of them have asked the interior ministry for a ruling to bolster their case.

The lawmakers, one of them a woman, objected to the low neckline and bare back of Mrs. Edith Toussan and loudly demanded that she don a jacket. The discussion got so loud police had to be called, but no one was arrested.

Signora Toussan has decided to fight for the rights of women to keep in the current mode and to keep cool on hot summer days. She has charged the deputies with "attempted violence, injury and menace."

Today Scalfaro and Sampietro filed a question in the Chamber of Deputies demanding of Interior Minister Mario Scelba what measures are being taken to stop "a mode that offends the morals and dignity of citizens."

TEARS AND SMILES AS SQUADRON LEAVES

Farewell scenes, reminiscent of World War II, were enacted at Dorval Airport, Montreal, when members of the Thunderbird Squadron of the R.C.A.F. transport division took off for Tacoma, Washington, en route to Japan. Tears were plentiful, but smiles were evident, too. — Central Press Canadian.

New Life in Canada For Italian Mother

Winnipeg—(CP)—Mrs. Concetta Iafolla, a slight, white-haired immigrant from Rome, says that since she arrived in Canada this month she has felt like a bride at a wedding feast.

Centre of affection and attention from her children, whom she had not seen for decades, Mrs. Iafolla has been constantly confronted with tables laden with food and drink.

"I feel I'm getting married again at 82," said Mrs. Iafolla, referring to the Italian custom of staging an elaborate feast at weddings.

Mrs. Iafolla left Italy to join the six of her seven children who live in Canada and the United States.

"I came to see my children; then I can die in peace," she said. "I feel now I can live to be 110 years old."

Staying With Son

She is staying at the home of her son Dave, who left Italy 30 years ago.

"I'm still a little boy to her," chuckled Dave.

Four of Mrs. Iafolla's children live in Calgary, which is her next stop. They are sons Achilles and Ascanio and two daughters, Mrs. Andre Di Paolo and Mrs. Joe Buccinni. Another daughter lives in New York.

Most of the time Mrs. Iafolla sits at home serenely watching the comings and going of her children and grandchildren.

But, when Dave played a recording of tenor Beniamino Gigli singing the heart rending "Mamma" it was too much for the old lady.

She broke into tears and embraced the children. But after a while she was smiling again.

"Everything is good," she said. I'm starting a new life at 82."

Mrs. Grant Coulter Honors Daughter With Trousseau Tea

A charming trousseau tea was held recently at the home of Mrs. R. Grant Coulter in honor of her daughter June, prior to her marriage to Mr. Garth Sine, on Monday last.

Mrs. Sine received with Mrs. Coulter and her daughter. During the afternoon 70 guests were welcomed. The home was tastefully decorated with roses.

Mrs. A. C. Tummon, of Selby Mrs. Robert Graham, of Wellington; Mrs. J. Patterson, of Corbyville, and Mrs. Russel Christie, of Foxboro, poured during the tea hour.

The embroidered linen cloth pale pink tapers, and pastel-pink roses, made a pretty setting for the tea table.

Those assisting were Miss Dorothy Tummon, Miss Eleanor Tummon, of Selby; Miss Helen Tummon, Miss Phyllis Beatty, of Holloway; Mrs. Frank Tummon, of Foxboro; Miss Marjorie Branscombe, of Brighton; Mrs. J. M. Wood, Mrs. Dobbs, Mrs. M. Hick and Mrs. A. Campbell, all of Belleville.

TORPEDO KILLS 30

Tokyo, June 27. (AP)—A live torpedo lying on the bottom of the sea was caught in the nets of a Japanese fishing boat today. As it was hauled aboard it exploded, killing 30 fishermen and injuring ten.

Bullfighter Look In Hats for Fall

Paris, July 27—(AP)—Women will have a bullfighter look next fall if they follow the hat styles presented today by leading French modistes Tegroux and Orcel.

Bicornes made of plush or beaver felt are favored by both designers. Some are replicas of the "Montera" worn by matadors in the Spanish bull-ring. Others are simply pillbox, cushion or brimless-porkpie shapes pinched out at each side into a bicorne effect.

One handsome affair had the bicorne brim in black Persian lamb and the crown in crimson velvet.

Tricornes are also popular. Legroux shows them with plain round crowns and tremendously wide brims slashed and folded back to form the tricorne.

Chechia hats—which look like shallow cossack caps worn straight and yanked down a little to one side— are shown by Legroux in off-white plush, nettle and emerald green teddybear felt and even white ermine fur.

Toques with tremendously high crowns squashed, folded or draped down to a moderate size are also produced by Legroux. She has turbans as well, made in felt, and squat cloche styles entirely of shell-pink or white breast feathers tipped with rhinestones.

CASE RECOVERED

Detroit, July 27. (AP)—A brief case belonging to the Royal Navy—lost Tuesday on a Detroit street has been recovered. A truck driver spotted it and turned it in, police reported yesterday. It had fallen from the trunk of the car of three British Naval commanders.

Women's Institute

Plainfield—The July meeting of Plainfield Women's Institute met in the evening at the home of Mrs. Wesley Bradshaw with an attendance of 21 adults and two children. Community singing was led by Mrs. Ralph Wilder. Roll call was well answered with "Uses of Stale Bread."

Several "thank you" cards were read; blocks for a quilt were handed in, and Mrs. Bertrand kindly offered to set them together with Mrs. Harry Harrison donating the lining. This quilt is to be quilted later for the Manitoba Flood Relief.

Financial report of the receipts of ball game treats were given by Mrs. Kerr. Mrs. Clayton Hall thanked Mrs. Anderson for her gift of two books to the library. A discussion regarding a boat trip to the 1000 Islands was held.

Mrs. Garnet Denyes, convener for Health gave her topic on "Eat Right to Feel Right". Mrs. Salmon gave "What We Eat" and "Are We Well Nourished". "Thirteen Ways of Stretching the Food Dollar" was given by Mrs. Grant Kerr. "Helpful Eating" was Mrs. Harrison's topic.

A poem "Health" was read by Mrs. R. Wilder. "Work, Play and Sleep" was read by Mrs. Denyes.

A vote of thanks was tendered the hostess by Mrs. Salmon.

A demonstration on shell work was given by Mrs. Harry Harrison, which was interesting.

Meeting closed with collection of $1.24.

Frozen Favorites

The first ice cream to be recorded was made in Italy in 1600 A.D. but probably it was made and enjoyed long before that date.

The early significance of the word "cream" meant custard and thus we have the desserts, Bavarian cream, Spanish cream, tapioca cream and ice cream.

The original ice creams were frozen custard with various fruits, spices, wine and nuts added. In the last fifty years ice cream has come to mean sweetened flavored cream. The method of commercial freezing has so improved that the cones, so dear to the heart of every child, are filled with a light, very smooth, rich mixture.

Easily Made

Home-made ice cream was a special treat even a few years ago as it required long turning of the freezer by hand. Modern refrigerators, now common in Canadian homes, allow the making of a great variety of creams, sherbets and mousses in the home. Best of all they require very little time or effort in preparation.

Desserts, frozen in the mechanical refrigerator, do not have the light consistency that is characteristic of the churned ice creams and ices but vigorous beating, at intervals during freezing, will give them excellent quality.

Honey and corn syrup, when used as the sweetening, will help prevent a grain texture. A small amount of gelatine, dissolved in the cream or fruit juice, also aids in keeping the texture smooth.

The following recipes are suggested by the home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture.

Frozen Fruit Pudding

1 egg white
1-4 cup liquid honey
1-2 pint whipping cream
1 cup diced fruit (fresh or canned)

Beat egg white and honey to a stiff meringue. Whip cream and fold in, then fold in fruit. Pour into freezing tray of a mechanical refrigerator and freeze until firm. Yield: six servings.

Butterscotch Parfait

2-3 cup brown sugar
4 tablespoons butter
1-2 cup water
4 egg yolks
Pinch of salt
1 teaspoon rum flavoring
2 cups whipping cream
1-3 cup chopped nuts

Combine brown sugar and butter in a heavy frying pan. Stir until sugar is melted then simmer 2 minutes. Add water gradually while stirring constantly and continue stirring until syrup is smooth. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Gradually pour syrup over egg yolks. Then cook, stirring constantly, in the top of a double boiler until thickened, about 5 minutes. Beat until smooth with a rotary egg beater. Cool thoroughly and add salt and flavouring. Whip cream and fold in the butterscotch mixture. Add nuts. Turn into freezing tray of a mechanical refrigerator with control set at lowest temperature. Stir twice during first hour of freezing. Yield: six servings (3 cups).

Biscuit Glace

1-2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons hot water
2 egg yolks
1-2 pint whipping cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
Dried macaroon crumbs

Dissolve sugar in hot water. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Gradually add syrup, blending well, add 1-2 cup of the cream. Place in top of a double boiler and cook until thickened, about 5 minutes. Pour into mixing bowl and beat until cool. Add vanilla. Fold in remaining cream, whipped until stiff. Sprinkle bottom of freezing tray with macaroon crumbs. Cover with ice cream mixture and sprinkle remaining crumbs on the top. Cover tightly and freeze until firm. Yield: four servings.

Mrs. E. Moore, Former Resident, Honored By Many Friends

Ivanhoe.—Mrs. Edward Moore, of Santa Clara, California, who has spent the past two weeks visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Haggerty, has returned to her home.

Prior to her departure, a farewell party was given in her honor, when a large number of friends and relatives gathered in Ivanhoe Town Hall on Friday evening.

Mr. Elmer Wood acted as chairman for the short musical program. A humorous reading was given by Miss Margaret Wright.

In the chairman's remarks he said, since Betty had gone to California three years ago she had married and her many friends here welcomed this opportunity of meeting with her once again.

Mrs. Norris Thomlinson read an address mentioning the warm regard in which Betty is held in her old "home town" and expressing on behalf of the community best wishes for a long and happy married life.

The presentation of a lovely silver tea service was made by Mrs. William French.

Mrs. Moore expressed her thanks and appreciation and told something of her new home and surrounding country in the Santa Clara Valley.

All joined in singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow".

After refreshments were served, an enjoyable time was spent in square and round dancing with Mrs. Reg. Haggerty at the piano, guitar, Mr. Morris Chapelle and violin, J. Beaudrie.

Personals

Miss Colleen Haggerty, of Western Hospital, Toronto, spent the weekend at her home here.

Miss Nancy Wright of Bloomfield, is visiting Mrs. John Wright and Miss Margaret Wright.

Miss Annie and Bessie Fleming and David, spent the weekend in Belleville, the guests of Mrs. C. B. Hamm.

Miss Gladys Rollins, of Toronto, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Joseph Rollins.

Miss Shirley Fleming, of Peterborough Civic Hospital, spent Friday at her home here.

Mrs. E. Chambers of Foxboro, visited her mother, Mrs. Henry Wallace, on Saturday.

Recent visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Haggerty were Mr. Haggerty's sister, Mrs. R. Murray, of Vancouver, and nieces, Mrs. J. Augustine, of Vancouver and Mrs. J. Coates of Prince Edward Island.

BONARLAW

Bonarlaw — During the past week, Mr. Jesse Barlow has received word of the death of both a sister and a brother. On July 19th, Mrs. Cassie Beatty, widow of the late James Beatty and on Sunday last Robert Barlow, both of Toronto. They were buried in the family plot at Havelock.

Weekend visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Neale of Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Langley and family, of Peterborough, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Neale; Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Brown and Mr. and Mrs. Glynn Eastwood, of Greenwood, visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Baker, and others in the vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Peake of Toronto paid a short visit to Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Barlow on Saturday.

Skirts Getting Shorter

Autumn Fashion Showings Boost Britain's Export Sales

London, July 26—(Reuters) — Export sales at the autumn fashion showings are better than last year.

Overseas buyers like the short skirts—some are as much as 17 inches off the ground — and the Scottish angora coats and many other new high-fashion fabrics from Scotland.

But they do not seem to like such 1912 touches as tweeds trimmed with braid. And some aspects of the 1920 look, including the sacque coat, are not going down too well.

Muffs—survival of even earlier years—have found favor. Peter Russell has suits in velour or velvet, with matching muffs, lined with the same silk as is used for the blouses worn with the suits.

Buyers also like Peter Russell's tailored jersey dresses in both silk and wool, to be worn under tweed or fur coats.

The same house shows tall hats with close brims, and some of these are also going overseas.

The Queen's dressmaker, Norman Hartnell, who makes a speciality of shimmery, gossamer-like materials, is showing dresses in tulle embroidered in passmenterie, in what may best be described as Siamese-cat colors—ranging from pale cream through biscuit to deepest brown.

Another popular model, from Mattli, is a gold-meshed dinner dress. Heavyweight Scottish angora coats from Ronald Patterson are another favorite.

Unique Parisian Hats

Paris—(AP)—You have to wear your gloves — preferably well stuffed—on top of your hat nowadays to be a la mode in Paris.

French hat designers are showing this unique trimming on the new fall hats now being paraded here.

A hat show given yesterday by topflight designer Paulette featured derby-shaped caps with "clenched fists" rising from the crown.

Other highlights of the show were Monk's hoods, helmets of feathers surmounted by wings and halo hats worn back to front.

The hoods seem just the thing for an icy winter day. They fit over contrast-colored skullcaps and snuggle around the neck before merging into brief shoulder capes. Paulette makes them in shaved plush, velvet or wool jersey.

Paulette shows a neat line in veils. She uses cobweb-fine gold mesh sprinkled with rhinestones for "mask" veils and fine black tulle spattered with sequins for veils draped with curtains into fullness at each side of the face.

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about Food ... What's Cooking ?

Not only bananas but pears should be picked green.

When green pears are wrapped in tight containers they give off vapors which speed up the ripening process and develop a better flavor than tree-ripened pears.

If you buy boxed pears for eating raw, keep them in the wrapping paper at room temperature until they turn yellow and the meat feels slightly soft. If you buy them for cooking purposes, you should use them when they are not quite ripe and still somewhat firm.

In July, bright yellow Bartletts come into season. Although there are 800 known varieties of pears, the Bartlett is the most popular because of its sweet almost creamy flavor and exceedingly smooth texture.

A fruit as bland as pears should be served with a rich sauce. Cold stewed pears with vanilla ice cream and blueberry, chocolate or red currant sauce are all superb combinations for summer fruit desserts.

Fresh red currants are now in season in most sections of the country. If they are unavailable in your neighborhood, you may substitute red currant jelly whipped until smooth and somewhat soft. Canned Bartlett pears may be substituted for fresh pears in this recipe.

Pear Coupe with Red Currant Sauce . . .

Wash, remove stems and peel 6 firm Bartlett pears. Cut pears in half lengthwise. Cut out cores with a sharp small knife.

In a saucepan combine peelings, cores, 2 cups water, 1 cup sugar and 1 slice of lemon. Stir well. Bring to a boil. Boil 10 minutes.

Strain syrup. Add pears to syrup. Return to a slow flame. Cook, covered, until pears are tender, 10-20 minutes depending on size of fruit. Remove from fire. Cool.

To make currant sauce: Combine 2 cups fresh red currants with 1-3 cup water in a heavy saucepan. Simmer until currants are tender 5-8 minutes. Force currants through sieve. In a dish mix 1-2 cup sugar with 1 tablespoon flour and a pinch of salt. Combine currant juice and sugar mixture. Simmer over a low flame about 5 minutes or until thick. Chill.

Place drained pears on serving dishes. Top with a large scoop of vanilla ice cream. Pour red currant sauce over ice cream.

Mrs. W. Tufts Presents Pioneer Grandmother At Women's Institute

The Ivanhoe branch of the Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Geo. Cooke for their July meeting. The meeting was opened in the usual manner by the president, Mrs. French.

The roll call was answered by members showing "Some Article Which Came From a Foreign Country". Correspondence was read and business dealt with.

Mrs. Sills, convener for Historical Research and Current Events took charge of the remainder of program.

Mrs. Sills gave the motto, which consisted of two poems—"A prayer for a little house" and "What is home?". This thought was carried out by Mrs. Foster Wilson, singing "My Mother's Prayer", with her own guitar accompaniment.

Mrs. W. Tufts was guest speaker, she introduced Mrs. Garbutt, Miss Sulman and little Donna Ray, who helped her with the skit "Pioneer Grandmother". Mrs. Tufts took the part of the pioneer grandmother, Miss Sulman, was her granddaughter. Both were dressed in costumes of that day, and gave an interesting talk on the happenings of that period.

Mrs. Garbutt portrayed a modern grandmother, having little Donna Ray as her granddaughter. Mrs. Garbutt gave a poem on "Granny", stating the mother of today is not a grandmother, she grows up with her children. Donna then sang "Chattanooga Shoe Shine Boy" and recited "Life Gets Tedious, Don't it".

The grandmothers were asked to stand and each one was presented with a bouquet of flowers there being 17 grandmothers present.

Mrs. Alex McInroy was presented with a lovely cup and saucer as she was the grandmother with the most great grandchildren.

Miss Sulman gave two humorous readings which were enjoyed by all.

This meeting was largely attended with 17 members and 23 visitors present.

Refreshments were served while a social half hour was spent.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

Only pride keeps her from being a pickpocket wife"

Apropos of what I wrote a few weeks ago on the subject of wives who have to raid their husbands' pockets for spending money, one reader, whose husband apparently has far more money than he needs, writes me the following letter:

"While I haven't reached the low point of picking my husband's pockets, in the 20 years I have been married I have often thought of ending my misery. My husband has close to his first million saved. Yes, I said 'first million saved.' And what it's being saved for is the children and grandchildren. The children can have anything they ask for; according to him, they are young and need it. They are all married and moderately well fixed.

"I am all of 45, and he forgets when I was 25. He says I'm married and don't need clothes. I have never received a single piece of jewelry or furs from him, but my two daughters-in-law have the finest fur coats and jackets money can buy, bought for them by my husband.

"I have been hurt so badly by my husband over the money situation that I am becoming bitter, and even feel bitter toward my children. He is making parasites out of them. Our friends are mostly business associates of his, so I can't go off to work, because if they knew my husband was so stingy and mean, their association would end. These other men are wonderful to their wives. Every Mother's Day, anniversary or other special occasion they get the most gorgeous and expensive gifts. It's not so much what they spend on their wives as the feeling they are thought of and loved.

"I have to go out with them often, me in my $8.95 dress, they in theirs, costing anywhere from $125 on up. You try to feel good and happy under such circumstances. My husband tells me I look better in my $8.95 than they do in their expensive clothes. My answer to that is, it's his bank balance that looks better to him! He also tells me that these men have two or three million dollars apiece.

"I do my own washing, cleaning and cooking. I have one luxury, a girl who comes in once a week to do the heavy work. You tell me what to do. More talk with him is out. I will end up in a mental institution if I keep on this way. I want some peace before it's too late."

Such a story seems almost incredible. Usually, a successful man feels his wife's appearance and his mode of living to be outward and visible signs of his success. It is a matter of pride with him to be able to show his friends and neighbors that he has done so well. Unless he goes around bragging about what he does for his sons' wives, the first thing he knows, people will be thinking it is his sons that have the money instead of him; perhaps they are even saying that among themselves right now. Admittedly, it takes a smart man to make a million dollars, but if he were as smart as he should be, he would see all this himself.

I suggest that this wife put the whole thing up to her sons, and see if they can't talk some reason into her husband. If they are such poor specimens themselves that they don't want to do this, then if I were his wife, I would tell my husband that if he does not feel able to give me things, I would go out and earn the money for them myself, whether he liked it or not. After all, what difference would it make if his friends looked down on him because his wife went to work, and his business was adversely affected? He's got that first million tucked away, hasn't he?

GOOD MANNERS

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Dear Sirs" used now . . . not "Gentlemen"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. For business letters are the salutations "Dear Sirs" and "Gentlemen" equivalent and interchangeable? If not, when should "Dear Sirs" be used, and when should "Gentlemen" be used?

2. Should "Messrs." always precede the name of a corporation or firm? For example, "Messrs. Hahne and Co." or "Messrs. Standard Oil Company"? If not, what is proper in regard to the use of "Messrs."?

Joseph R.

1. In strictly formal business correspondence Dear Sirs: is correct. The use of Gentlemen as a salutation is seldom used now.

2. In the heading use only the name of the firm or corporation . . . not preceded by "Messrs." For example:

Hahne and Company,
(Address)
Dear Sirs:

"Messrs." is used socially when, for example, one is addressing an envelope to two or more unmarried brothers living at the same address:

The Messrs. Martin or
The Messrs. Thomas and John Martin

To thank for gifts brought to Golden Wedding Dinner

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My parents are to celebrate their Golden Wedding anniversary at a dinner and reception we are giving for them in a hall that is rented for this kind of occasion. We understand that the guests are planning to bring the gifts with them. If so, must my parents open the gifts there, or may they wait to open the presents until they get home?—M. J.

If the guests bring their presents with them, you should plan some definite time during the evening for the gala present-opening. The guests would, I am sure, expect this important feature of the festivity. . .they would be disappointed not to have their presents opened on the spot, and receive your parents' word of appreciation. The time before dinner probably would not be a convenient time for this, since it would hold up the dinner. But afterward, with more leisure, your mother, the "Bride", might open the presents, assisted by your father, the "Golden Wedding Bridegroom", thank the giver as she opens the present, and say enthusiastic and appreciative things about the present.

At the end of the opening-of-the-presents it would be charming for your mother to say a few general words of thanks to the guests: "My bridegroom and I thank you most heartily for your goodness to us on this happy, happy occasion . . . thank you for coming, thank you for your wonderful gifts, thank you for your wonderful friendship! And please promise to come to our Sixtieth Wedding Anniversary!"

To enter first. . . .guest or hostess?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am always uncertain on this occasion: when I enter my house with a guest, should I go first or step aside to allow her to precede me?—Hostess.

If your guest has been to your house before and therefore knows the way, you would let her enter first. But when it is necessary for you to show the way, you would enter first, saying, "Please excuse me for going first. . .I'd better lead the way."

Arms Aid Bill Awaits Signature Of Pres. Truman

Washington, July 27 (AP) — The new $1,222,500,000 foreign arms aid bill aimed at speeding anti-communist defence preparations around the world was ready yesterday for President Truman's signature.

The measure authorizes a second year of American military assistance to friendly powers. It is to be followed soon by a new and probably larger, request to Congress for more money for the same purpose. Some of Truman's advisers have recommended an additional $5,000,000,000 to meet the Korean crisis.

Meantime, officials reported these developments in the effort to speed the flow of arms to North Atlantic treaty countries and others receiving American backing:

1. Between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000 in orders have been placed this month without waiting for enactment of the second-year program.

2. New depots may soon be opened and double work shifts ordered to shorten the weeks required for taking tanks, planes and other second world war weapons and equipment out of storage.

After a slow start in getting the vast arms enterprise moving, an estimated 75,000 tons already has been shipped abroad.

Just what Truman will ask as the next instalment hinges on the current meeting in London of the North Atlantic Council deputies.

US Corporal Escapes Fate of Comrades When Shot by Reds

An Advance Airbase in Korea July 27 (AP) — A tall young tank corporal said North Koreans forced him and two other bound American prisoners to lie face down under a tree and then machine-gunned them.

"I was the only one to escape alive," said the corporal, 21, of the Bronx, N.Y. "A flight of our fighter planes frightened them off before they found out I wasn't dead."

New Provincial Express Highway Urged in E. Ontario

Cornwall, July 27 —(CP) — Cornwall and suburban planning board officials have sent a letter to Highways' Minister Doucett urging immediate construction of a new provincial express highway in eastern Ontario. The action was requested in view of the increasing number of fatalities, five in the past month, on traffic crowded No. 2 Highway here.

Motorist Crawls Out Car Window Before Explosion

Brampton, Ont., July 27 — (CP)— Seconds before flames reached the gasoline tank of an overturned automobile, G. H. Heyn, 47, of St. Catharines and Alton, Ont., yesterday crawled through a car door window to safety.

Heyn, an Ontario Hydro inspector, said a front tire on his car blew out, sending the vehicle into a ditch where it struck a culvert and overturned. He suffered shock and leg burns.

West German Laws Sparingly Vetoed by Allied Commission

Bonn, July 26—(Reuters)—The allied high commission has disapproved only seven out of 855 laws submitted to it since the West German government was established last autumn.

The majority of these laws, which a special legal body of the high commission has the power to veto within 21 days, were passed by "laender" or state governments, eighty-six federal laws and regulations were submitted to the Bonn governments, but none were finally disapproved.

An official statement issued by allied high commission describes thus as "a most sparing use of powers."

Three Laws Disapproved

Three federal laws, however, were provisionally disapproved this spring. Two of them, the civil service law and the income tax law, were vetoed within a week and led many West German politicians and newspapers, including the Chancellor, Dr. Konrad Adenauer, to talk of a serious situation and an allied-German crisis.

Germans pointed to the occupation statute, which says that the allies should not disapprove legislation unless they believe it to be inconsistent with the basic law, land constitutions, or occupation powers directives, "or unless it constitutes a grave threat to the basic purposes of the occupation."

According to the allies, the civil service law was disapproved because "it did not take into account principles to give all qualified citizens access to the civil service, to exclude civil servants from political activity, and to provide for uniform enforcement of the law."

The income tax law was disapproved until the German government gave assurances they would take steps "to balance the federal budget, to reduce excessive expenditure in high income groups so as to channel savings into investment, and to take measures against tax evasion."

The third law, regulating petrol prices, was officially "temporarily suspended" in May. The suspension was lifted a month later after the Germans had given assurances that the law would not be applied so as to limit free competition in petroleum imports from abroad.

Of the 769 state laws, seven were finally and three provisionally disapproved. Disapproval resulted from allied misgivings which in most cases could not, as with the federal laws, be removed after mutual discussion.

DIES SAVING HUSBAND

Telephone Poles Mar B.C. Beauty

Vancouver —(CP)— British Columbia's scenic beauty takes a beating from poorly-placed telegraph poles.

That's the observation of sunbronzed Eric Cooke, 40-year-old Englishman who has cycled some 20,000 miles in Canada and the United States since he left England four years ago.

Cooke originally set out for New Zealand but he says he fell in love with Canada. He decided to make a photographic tour of the Dominion.

Picture snapping jaunts in Canadian wilds have caused the five foot three-inch cyclist his share of grief. Once in the Rockies he wandered in rugged grizzly bear country for 15 hours before reaching civilization by following a creek.

Besides himself, Cooke pedals a 60-pound kit, including a tent and sleeping bag, on his cross-country hops. He's had to buy five new tires for the rear wheel of his bike since he left his home in England.

HIGH STEEL OUTPUT

Washington, July 27. (AP)—The United States steel industry hit a record production pace in May—almost a month before the Korean crisis—the Bureau of Labor statistics reported today. Paced by a rising demand for durable goods, the industry produced 8,500,000 tons of raw steel, the Labor Department agency said. Employment in steel works and rolling mills reached 606,500, highest in 12 months.

Gaiety Theatre Home of Glamor Is Finally Closed in London

London, July 26 —(Reuters)— London's Gaiety Theatre, birthplace of musical comedy in Britain and centre of the capital's gayest entertainment for three generations, is to be pulled down to make way for government offices.

The historic house in which the choruses of "Gaiety Girls" won fame—some of whom later married into the British peerage—will be replaced by a modern building for the headquarters of the Indian High Commissioner in London.

Lupino Lane, member of Britain's oldest stage family, disclosed, almost tearfully, that he had surrendered his greatest ambition by selling the beloved but derelict landmark of London's entertainment world.

Like Kick in Stomach

"I feel just as though someone had kicked me in the stomach," the comedian sighed as he told how his five year effort to reopen the Gaiety as a musical comedy theatre had failed.

Lane bought the Gaiety in 1945 for about $560,000 after it had lain disused throughout the war. He spent over $70,000 in rebuilding, repairs and taxes. Today he sold it for "round about" $532,000.

"I was on the verge of bankruptcy, so there was nothing I could do but sell, for the sake of my family," Lane said. "I would even have sold it for a lower figure if it meant seeing it as a theatre.'

The Gaiety, opened in 1868, was the birthplace of musical comedy in Britain. It was the first London theatre to stage matinee performances and the first to use electricity for outside advertisement. Great stage figures like Henry Irving and Sarah Bernhardt were billed there but, from 1886, it was turned over to burlesque and the chorus of "Gaiety Girls" won it world fame. Many women became famous on its stage and married well—some into the peerage.

Smashed By Bombs

At the beginning of this century the theatre moved from its original building to the present Gaiety, only a few yards away. Between the two world wars it maintained its reputation, but in February, 1939, it had to close down when its renters refused to make structural alterations demanded by the authorities.

German bombs shattered it to a shell.

In 1945, when it had been deserted for six years, Lupino Lane bought it.

After restoring the interior he ran into difficulties.

Unless $280,000 was obtained within six weeks, he said, the Gaiety might be lost to London as a theatre.

All his efforts proved in vain.

DIGS 10-FOOT CRATER

Cuthbert, Ga., July 27. (AP)—A bomb big as an automobile fell accidentally from an air force plane yesterday and dug a 10-foot crater on a farm near here.

Congress Split on Question Of All-Out Mobilization On United States Home Front

CARRIES MEMENTO OF GEN. PATTON

Maj.-Gen. Hobart R. Gay, commanding general of the First Cavalry Division currently counter-attacking on the Taegu road in Korea, is shown with the military swagger stick that once belonged to the late Gen. George Patton. Gay, shown seated on a gunwale of a landing barge, says "It's my good-luck piece." — Central Press Canadian.

Washington, July 27 — (AP)— Congress seemed divided today over whether there should be all-out mobilization of the United States home front — with most members apparently against such a move right now.

On the heels of Bernard M. Baruch's proposal for an immediate "ceiling on everything," some congressmen called for full-scale economic mobilization, complete with consumer rationing and wage-price controls.

Baruch, presidential and congressional adviser in two world wars, criticized President Truman and Congress yesterday, saying they have not moved far enough or fast enough to get the U.S. ready for a finish fight against communism.

He said all-out controls must be clamped on—and the sooner the easier for the American people.

A barrage of questions hurled at Baruch before the Senate Banking Committee made it obvious that most committee members did not think highly of his suggestion.

Other Developments

In other developments:

1. Senator Robert Taft (Rep. Ohio) announced that a committee of Republican senators would begin drafting today proposed amendments to curtail some of the administration's bill for production and credit controls. Taft also forecast a 10-year preparedness program costing at least $100,000,000,000 and renewed his call for heavy taxes as an alternative to controls.

2. The Senate unanimously passed a bill removing all limits on the size of the armed forces until July 31. 1954.

3. A labor-industry-agriculture committee was reported in the making. It would discuss such things as price and wage controls with the National Security Resources Board.

4. Members of the Senate Appropriations Committee pressed Defence Secretary Louis Johnson; Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff; and other military leaders as to whether they couldn't use more than the $10,500,000,000 President Truman has asked for new military equipment.

The military leaders replied that they will be back for more money when they think they can spend it wisely, senators reported.

In the House, representative John Kunkel (Rep. Pa.) introduced a bill proposing a general freeze on prices and wages and a system of rationing that Baruch said must come eventually.

Thirst Drives Bandit Into Arms of Law

Regina, July 27 (CP)—A hungry bandit crept from his hiding place to quench his thirst Wednesday and ended up in the arms of the law. The capture ended Saskatchewan's biggest manhunt and led to recovery of $45,000 stolen from the bank of Toronto at Wolseley, Sask.

RCMP, who have scoured the Qu'Appelle Valley southeast of here since the robbery Saturday, said Archie Dlugopolski, 23, surrendered quietly when their famous dog Pal tracked him to a wheat field.

He was armed with three loaded revolvers, but didn't try to use them.

Another man William Lukashuk, 30-year-old resident of Bourlamaque, Que., was captured two hours after the daring opening hour robbery. He was charged with armed robbery.

John Bull Breakfasts On Partridge Eggs

Nottinghan, England, July 27 (Reuters)—Egg No. 090 is richer than all the rest.

Small, brown, specked and pointed at one end, Nottingham housewives met it this week as part of their unofficial ration of two eggs on each food coupon book.

And the promise of its superior richness came from P. C. Storey, the Nottingham area egg officer.

As for the egg's number, that is how officialdom describes it.

In plain English, it is a partridge egg.

ADDED A PASSENGER

Vancouver, July 27 (CP) — An elevator left the first floor of a downtown hotel here with three passnegers Wednesday and arrived at the ground flour with four. The new arrival was a baby girl—born to a woman rushing to hospital. Both are "doing fine."

ORDERS 1,000 BOX CARS

Montreal, July 27 (CP) —An order for 1,000 50-ton all steel box cars for the Canadian Pacific Railway has been placed with Canadian builders, it was announced Wednesday. Seven hundred of the cars, of the latest design, will be built by National Steel Car Corporation, Hamilton, and the remainder by Eastern Car Company, Trenton, N.S.

French Cyclist Follows Route Taken by Explorer

Three Rivers, Que., July 27 — (CP) — Victor Franco, a sturdy young Frenchman who intends to follow by bicycle the route taken by La Verendrye to the Canadian Rockies, arrived here Wednesday on the first lap of his journey.

(Born in three Rivers, Le Verendrye and his sons were first to travel west and discover the Canadian Rockies.)

Franco arrived in Quebec City Monday and cycled 90 miles to this city, following the shore of the St. Lawrence River. Wearing a beret, the young Frenchman carries 50 pounds of baggage on his eight speed bicycle.

Franco will pedal his way along the approximate route taken by La Verendrye on his westward journey, circling rivers and lakes where the explorer travelled by canoe.

The son of a governor of Three Rivers, La Verendrye, born Pierre Gaultier de Varennes de la Verendrye in 1685, left Montreal in 1731 to look for a water route (the Mackenzie River) that emptied into the Pacific Ocean.

He spent 12 years in the west but never got farther than the Rockies which he was credited with discovering. During the 12 years, he and his four sons scoured a vast area between Lake Superior, Winnipeg and the Rockies. The explorer returned to Quebec and was planning another trip west when he died in 1749.

Aussies Recruit Ground Troops For Korea

Sydney, Australia, July 27 — (CP) —Australia today began recruiting a force to fight in Korea.

Josiah Francis, army and navy minister, said about 100 applied in Sydney during the first few hours. He said most of them want to go into action immediately.

A high army officer said he thinks the force required will be recruited within a few days.

Australian law does not permit regular Australian soldiers or militia to serve outside Australia unless they volunteer.

Francis said the Australian force probably will comprise a division, but added that this will depend on Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies, who arrives today in the United States to confer with President Truman.

Since New Zealand already has announced she will provide an artillery unit, Francis said, Australia's contribution probably will consist mainly of infantrymen.

Britain also will send a group of her regular army, including armor. Qualified London sources have indicated the British force will be of battalion or brigade strength— from 1,000 to 4,000 men.

Dispatch from Canberra said most of the Australian force will be Second World War veterans so the force can be sent to the front as soon as possible.

Francis said more Australian naval units probably will be sent to Korea also.

ROCKET RANGE

A rocket range is under construction in central Australia which will enable rockets to be fired horizontally 3,000 miles.

OFF TO KOREA

Greater Support of U. Nations' Policies to be Asked by CCF

By DAVE STOCKAND
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Vancouver, July 27—(CP)—The C.C.F. National Council has decided to call for greater Canadian support of United Nations forces in Korea, full support of U.N. policy generally, and international control of the atomic bomb.

How rank-and-file delegates attending the party's biennial national convention here will react remains to be seen. Emergency resolutions were drafted by the council in closed session. Probably [illegible] will not be debated until Friday.

Reconvening of parliament "at the earliest possible moment" is asked in the Korean resolution because "grave decisions should not be taken by the government without consulting parliament."

"The burden of [illegible] military action to halt aggression in Korea should not be left to one nation alone," it added.

Shocking Betrayal

Internally, the Liberal government was accused of a "shocking betrayal," and of riding to victory on hollow promises.

This was one of a dozen resolutions endorsed as delegates from every province but Newfoundland began general sessions.

One nine-point resolution gave an outline of C.C.F. proposals for "lasting prosperity." It includes national economic planning and control of major investment; expansion of public ownership to reduce "irresponsible" control by private monopolies; a "bold" program of public development; and the expansion of international trade.

Reaction of left-wing forces in the party to the Korean resolution remains uncertain. Last year, at the British Columbia party's convention, one group split on the Atlantic Pact, backed by the National C.C.F.

A three-point demand is made in the atom-bomb resolution: International control of atomic energy; establishment of effective sanctions against violations; destruction of present stocks along with a ban on manufacture.

But it adds:

"We emphasize again that mere conventions outlawing the use of the atomic weapons, with effective control, cannot safeguard the world against the secret developments of atomic bombs."

A call for an all-Canadian route for natural gas pipelines from the Prairies to the Pacific coast, rent controls on all housing until supply meets demand, and a national health program are included in other approved resolutions.

Notice that a C.C.F. government in Canada would not eliminate the profit motive from all business was included in the report of Prof. Frank R. Scott of Montreal, who announced he will retire this week from the position of National chairman.

"We do not oppose the making of a profit in all its forms," he said. "The profit motive, under proper control, now is and will be for a long time a most valuable stimulus to production."

Prof. Scott said prosperity in Canada has damaged C.C.F. strength. This was echoed by David Lewis, who will resign from his National secretary's post.

"It is clear," Mr. Lewis said, "that conditions in this country are temporarily against a rapid advance in Socialist support."

WAR BOMB EXPLODED

Berlin, July 27 — (AP) — British engineers inched a 1,000-pound wartime bomb away from its resting-place near the Russian war memorial yesterday and blew it up. The war memorial was undamaged.

MacArthur Proud To Fight With Commonwealth

By DON WHITEHEAD

A U.S. Air Strip in Korea, July 27. (AP)—General MacArthur today made his second surprise visit to the Korean warfront and expressed complete confidence "in ultimate victory."

Reporters asked his reaction to news that Britain, Australia and New Zealand will send troops to Korea.

"Nothing will please me more than to have British Commonwealth troops here," MacArthur said. "I fought in association with them for many years and I have the highest degree of confidence in them. They cannot be excelled.

"As you know, the Australians are my blood brothers."

MacArthur conferred with his highest-ranking officers on the scene. There was speculation that high-level strategy decisions were reached.

Lt.-Gen. Walton H. Walker, commanding the Eighth U.S. Army, said troop reinforcements were discussed in his 90-minute conference with MacArthur. This gave rise to hopes that badly-needed troops may not be far away.

Polio Rages Unchecked In Virginia Town

Wytheville ,Va., July 27. (AP)—Outbreak of polio, which has killed almost 15 per cent of its victims continued unchecked today in this southwest Virginia town of 5,500 persons. The normal death rate is about four per cent.

Wytheville itself has had 59 cases. Wythe county as a whole, (pop. 23,000 including Wytheville) has had 75 cases, with 11 deaths—an average of almost three cases a day since the epidemic began July 1.

State Health Commissioner L. J. Roper termed the town and adjoining Wythe County an area of "tension".

Four new cases and two more deaths were reported yesterday from the polio-ravaged county, hardest hit spot in the United States this year and scene of the worst outbreak in Virgina's history.

The 15-per-cent death rate brought the most alarm to Dr. Roper. He said it is too early to say how much paralysis may result.

Body of Mackenzie King Rests in Mount Pleasant Beside Father and Mother

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, July 27 (CP) — The body of William Lyon Mackenzie King was lowered into the earth of his native Ontario at 11 a.m., EDT today while tears stood in the eyes of the great and of the little people.

He was buried where he wanted to be buried, beside his father and his mother in Mount Pleasant Cemetery. Overhead a fine young maple tree shed its shade. On the six-mile route through which his remains had come, tens of thousands of people broke the lines that had stood three and four deep for block on block and went their separate ways.

Around the grave, as eight Mounties moved the mahogany casket into a concrete vault that bore his name, the cabinet stood, their heads bowed. Prime Minister St. Laurent stood at their head.

The committal service was brief and simple and touching. The sun beat down through the trees, on the black-garbed ministers and other dignitaries, on the hundreds of people who stood back at a distance and watched, on the 12-foot grey granite cross that bore the name of Mr. King's parents and other relatives.

Three Presbyterian ministers stood in their long black robes. Mr. King's sister, Mrs. H. M. Lay of Barrie, Ont., an elderly woman in black, stood facing them, supported by two nephews.

Mr. King's own minister, Rev. A. I. Burnett of St. Andrew's Church in Ottawa, conducted the service.

With Mr. Burnett was Rt. Rev. F. Scott MacKenzie, moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, who spoke a long but simple prayer for fellowship, for guidance and for faith, and when he came to the Lord's Prayer the words ran down the line of the cabinet ministers and of the others who stood around them.

Cross of Flowers

When the crowds had gone—Mr. St. Laurent and some other cabinet ministers flew back to Montreal, the body lay alone. The bronze-gilt top of the casket was covered by a great cross of flowers.

Toronto, the home of his university days, had turned his funeral into a great national tribute. Its people stood silently along the streets for block after block until there were blocks that weren't packed and none that didn't have its few silent faces.

It was this way for the whole six miles. A city that for years was the heart and home of his political enemies cuold have done little more to surpass its homage and its eulogy.

The procession of long black cars that drove, slowly through the streets passed spots Mr. King had known well, past Osgoode Hall where his lawyer father lectured, past Toronto University where Mr. King studied, through streets he had known down through the years.

There were dozens of cars in the procession. They bore cabinet ministers, provincial premiers, foreign diplomats, service leaders, government officials.

But there was none of the military pomp that thousands saw yesterday in Ottawa.

The great bustling heart of Toronto was unusually silent as the casket was borne out of Union Station.

Men, women and children were lined 10 deep across from the Union Station when the solemn funeral procession started. Crowds lined the whole route.

Woman Missing At Weston

Toronto, July 27 (CP) — Mrs. William R. Richards, 27, who moved here from Ottawa a week ago with her airman-husband, disappeared Tuesday, Chief Constable Bruce Robertson of suburban Weston said today. Her husband, an RCAF corporal, was transferred from Ottawa to No. 1 equipment depot in Weston.

Mrs. Richards, originally from Greensville in the Hamilton area had lunch with her husband in a Weston restaurant Tuesday, returned to a boarding house, and left with $2.50 in her purse. Her husband said he knew of no reason for her disappearance.

She is described as five feet two inches tall, 118 pounds, with dark brown shoulder-length hair piled up in front, snub-nosed, and with a brown birthmark on her right forearm. She was wearing a white eyelet dress, embroidered with yellow leaves, and a black sweater coat.

FANCY BUT PHONY

London's coat of arms has been affixed to millions of letters, notices, proclamations, and debentures in the last 95 years, but it's never been confined legally as the city's own. City Clerk R. H. Cooper discovered the situation and a by-law will be presented to city council to establish it officially. Here it is being nailed to the front entrance of the City Hall. — (CP Photo.)

THE FIRST

And up comes the first response to this column's query regarding various opinions as to which was the better team to represent Belleville in the good old days when the Central Ontario Baseball League was the talk of the province, in baseball circles, that is. Pal Sam Curry who covered a lot of the games in those hectic days, comes up with his selection. You can agree with Sam, or disagree, if it is the latter, send in your selection. Here is Sam's choice: Manager, Walter Gerow; catcher, "Peeny" Mills; pitchers, Jack Williams and Ray Mallen; first base, Harry Mills; second base, Allen Meagher; 3rd base, Johnny "'Crock" Williams; shortstop, Vern Weir; outfield, Stan Hagerman, Wickey Ross and Babe Casey. That was the team that starred for this city in 1923, and as Sam says, he believes it is the squad that turned back the Toronto Hillcrests in a hectic three-game series. "Older fans with memories much better than mine," goes on Sam, "will remember 'Nig' Dwan's great team with Duke Hennessy catching, Cannonball Ed. Scott pitching, Harry Samuels, Toodle Walker, Pete and Roger Irwin and others of Toronto's best of that day."

STILL QUOTING SAM:

"Was it not that same year that 'The Trunks' went on to play Galt Terriers, defeating them in the first game in Galt, losing the second in Belleville and then going to Guelph for the deciding one, where a 7th inning splurge by the Terriers won them the Ontario championship?

"Dates, scores and details escape me and possibly I'm a bit confused but Walter Gerow could put you right on all of these things as I think he could recall every game in which Belleville was ever engaged from 1919 to 1929 and 1930. Possibly he would consent to name his own all-star team and no one could question his choice as he was a great manager, liked by players, fans and the opposition as well."

Oarsmen Face Tough Program At Henley

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Port Dalhousie, Ont., July 27 (CP)—Traffic on the old Welland Canal probably will be at an all-time high today. Canada's 68th annual Henley enters the second day of its four-day regatta with eight finals and 10 heats on the card.

It will be the heaviest movement, at least, on the books of the one-mile-550-yard course — one event every 15 minutes.

"There has never been as tough a program since the Henley started," said Murray of Kington, Ont., secretary of the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen.

Nine of the finals are point-scoring events. The high school fours alone doesn't count toward the aggregate points.

Wednesday only two finals were rowed, along with eight heats. Only a few of the 600 in the entry list dipped blades.

Only one event was close, and that was an upset. Rudy Jezek of Ravenswood Boat Club, New York, underdog in the 145-pound quarter mile sculls final, nipped defending champion Joe Angyal of New York Athletic Club by a scant half length.

Easiest victory wasposted by Jack Guest, Jr., of Toronto Dons Rowing Club. He won eight lengths over his only competitor Jim. McIntosh of St. Catharines Rowing Club.

The 17-year-old Guest, champion schoolboy sculler in Canada and the United States, did the mile in six minutes, 21 seconds—16 seconds off his time last year when he won the event.

Guest Wins

He also won his heat in the open quarter-mile dash, a clear two lengths over Angyal, and he is almost a cinch to take the title today. His time of one minute, 27 seconds, was two seconds faster than the 1-29 posted by Dick McIntyre of Seattle who took the second heat by a length over H. Zink of Belleville, N.J.

Guest, son of the Diamond sculls winner of 20 years ago, is the outstanding sculler in the country and should be ready to make his bid for highest honors in the game in two or three years.

Apart from the Torontonian's victories, the 200-odd fans in the finish-line grandstand had little to be excited about.

St. Catharines Rowing Club, which won the team championship last year for the first time, has two entries in the final junior 145-pound fours and another in the junior 155-pound fours. Only other Canadians who qualified for finals were Otta Poschol of Hamilton Leanders and R. Brand of Ottawa Rowing Club in the junior singles and Derek Riley of Winnipeg in the open quarter mile dash.

Buffalo Westsides, always a strong contender, started off badly, placing only one entry in a final. The club was second behind St. Catharines to qualify in the junior 145-pound fours.

Hamilton Leanders were eliminated in the junior 145-pound and 155-pound fours. Two scullers from the club were last-minute scratches— Bob Williams in the open quarter-mile dash and Tom Smith in the 14-pound quarter mile.

Brockville Rowing Club finished fourth in two events— the junior 145-pound fours and Frank Tucker in the 145-pound quarter mile. The fours had tough luck when the rudder broke in its borrowed shell and the boat committed two fouls.

One-Run Gremlin Again Hexes Batawa as They Blow Lead To Lose to Kingston Leafs 6-5

One bad inning last evening was all that Kingston Disney Leafs needed to hand Batawa Shoemen a 6-5 reverse in a COBL senior game at the Fair Grounds. It was the seventh game of the current campaign which the Shoemen have lost by one run and the loss dropped them out of fourth place in the race.

The Batawans, who appeared to have thrown off their one run loss disease last week, suffered a relapse last night with the cruelest chill being promoted by Joe Levandoski's three run homer in the fourth inning as the Leafs chased starter Noble Willis with a five run rally that proved to be the ball game.

The Batawans, escaping what looked like a Kingston rally in the first inning, staged their own uprising in the bottom half of the first plating three runs on singles by Carson, Solmes, and Bush; a walk to Watson, and a sacrifice by Dick Bridgeman.

The Shoemen added another in the third due to Leaf starter Don Murphy's wildness. He walked Bridgeman with one away, wild pitched him to second, took Watson on a grounder short to first as Bridgeman advanced, and then wild pitched again as Bridgeman scored.

The Leafs started the fourth with Lorne Ferguson singling. Kerluk grounded to first to advance Ferguson. Carnegie went out third to first and Murphy walked. Gilmour doubled in the two runners and took 3rd as Allan got a life on an error to short stop. Levandoski then hammered one out to the track for three runs. Logan took second on an error to Bush, Reardon walked and Ferguson grounded to first to end the inning.

A single by Ferguson and a triple by Kerluk in the seventh off Art Wright gave Kingston their winning run.

With two men on via a walk and a hit batter, and with one away, Murphy gave way to Al Lenard in the fourth who walked Willis to load the bases. Carson then hit into a double play. Bush's single and Ken Peacock's double in the sixth gave Batawa their final tally.

Neither starter was around at the finish. Lenard took credit for the win while Wright was charged with the loss.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT
(For Hugh Fullerton Jr.)

New York, July 27 —(AP) — Television isn't the culprit, says President Ford Frick of the National League. It's that old-timer —radio.

The recent clamor from minor league officials that they are getting their brains beaten out by television of big league baseball contests has caused Frick to make an urgent study of the situation. He absolves television of any blame for the minors' plight.

"Those fellows simply have got television confused with radio," he says. "There isn't enough television of big league games in their territories to hurt them at the box office.

"But radio, that's different. The whole country is absolutely saturated with it. I'm really surprised that the sponsors haven't got wise and complained. I think they will yet.

'Breakfast to Supper

"Why, there are stations out west which begin broadcasting play-by-play of big league games at 10 in the morning, and then, when one game is over, start in almost immediately on a night game.

What of the majors? Had he reached any conclusion as to television's affect on the turnstiles in his own league? An Associated Press survey several days ago showed that 14 of the 16 big league clubs were trailing their home attendance records of 1949.

"Frankly, I haven't been able to reach any decision yet," Frick said. "We're canvassing thousands of set owners in our cities to find whether television is keeping them away from the parks or, on the other hand, is winning us new fans.

"I only hope I will be in a position to make a report by the time of the next big league meetings in the fall.

"Actually, despite your figures which show us to be more than a half-million behind in paid attendance from a year ago, I'm not sure we will be anywhere near that far behind when the season ends. We had an awful lot of bad weather in the spring and have quite a few games to make up. A good doubleheader or two might make a big difference to several of our clubs."

SPORTSMANSHIP IN "CANADA UNLIMITED"

Finest! in Canada Unlimited
O'Keefe's
BREWING COMPANY LIMITED

It was 1938. On the old Welland Canal, four Regina oarsmen trained vigorously for the Canadian Henley Regatta. The odds were all against them for they lacked an experienced coach . . . and had trained on a shallow, man-made Regina Lake during the great Prairie drought.

On the Henley's first day the quartet scored an upset by winning the junior four-oared event. The experts goggled . . . but the best was yet to come. Showing the Regatta's finest burst of speed, in the senior fours the westerners outstroked champion oarsmen from Canada and the U.S., and walked away with the prized Dominion championship.

Canadian sportsmanship and teamwork have scored many firsts in the rowing world. And sportsmanship with teamwork helps you too, in work and play. Together they keep your scope for opportunity in Canada...unlimited.

Argos Captain Joins Ranks Of Eskimos

(By The Canadian Press)

An avalanche of firsts gave mutuel-machine mathematicians a first-class headache yesterday at Fort Erie race track.

Ramillion and Hi-Pal raced to a dead-heat in the first race. Second Act and Lady Isley did likewise in the second. It was the first win this year for all four horses.

Old-timers around the track and in the press box said they never had heard of such a mix-up during the 20-odd years daily doubles have been on Canadian tracks. To the best of their knowledge it hasn't happened in the United States either.

The daily double payoff was delayed for more than an hour.

By a further coincidence the winners of the second race both closed at 8.45 to 1. Due to differences in breakage figured in the pay-off, Second Act paid 8.40 to win; Lady Isley, 8.10.

The double prices on the four winning combinations were: Hi Pal and Second Act $10.35; Hi Pal and Lady Isley $11.55; Ramillion and Lady Isley $29.15; Ramillion and Second Act $26.85.

Larry Doby, Cleveland Indians outfielder, was discharged from hospital in Brooklyn yesterday. The Negro centre fielder had been under observation since Monday night when he was hit on the head by a pitched ball during an exhibition game with Brooklyn.

Doby is expected to rejoin the Indians today.

Edmonton Eskimos football squad has completed its double-blue tinge, with the arrival in the city of Frankie Morris, veteran lineman and captain of last year's Toronto Argonauts.

Arrival of Morris brings to 11 the number of former Torontonians now in the Eskies' camp. The others are coach Annis Stukus, his brother Bill, Mike King, Doug Pyzer, Don Durno, Bill Briggs Frank Hickey, Harry Bunting, Ken Slumen and Don Loucks.

At last night's workout, manager Al Anderson announced the signing of quarterback Bill Stukus and end Jim Macrae.

It will cost Canada nearly $1,000 per athlete to participate in the winter and summer Olympic games of 1952, A. Sidney Dawes, president of the Canadian Olympic Association, said in Montreal yesterday.

Mr. Dawes, who has just returned from the International Olympic Committee meeting in Copenhagen, said the Canadian Association will start an early campaign to finance the Dominion's entry.

Total expenditures by the Canadians in the 1948 Olympics was $108,000 compared with receipts of $127,000.

Harvey Fleet of London pocketed the major portion of the $1,200 purse for the featured pacing stake at Thorncliffe Raceway in Toronto yesterday when his good mare, Della Axworthy, made a show of her rivals. In the first division, Fleet let the mare go along in high gear and she paid $2.90 for $2.

In the second division, raced a mile and a sixteenth, Della Axworthy was removed from the wagering pool after Royal Linda and Billy Hy were scratched a few minutes before post time. Della Axworthy won handily again.

Flora Lee, owned by Stanley Somerville, of Orangeville, Ont., and driven by Jim Somerville, returned a $38.90 pay-off when she won the third race.

Niagara Falls Invited to Senior Hockey

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 27—(CP)—For the first time in its history, the Ontario Hockey Association has invited a team into one of its leagues.

With a brand-new hockey arena, Niagara Falls sportsmen are considering an offer by O.H.A. business manager George Panter involving a spot in the Senior A loop.

After talking it over yesterday with Panter and representatives of the present senior teams—Toronto, Hamilton, Owen Sound and Kitchener-Waterloo— they asked for time to think about it.

Mayor W. L. Houck, John P. Demetre and Dr. W. A. (Biff) Potter represented the city at the meeting. Ray Mang of Niagara Falls, N.Y., also sat in.

Royal Copeland Prize Package Of Stampeders

Calgary, July 27 (CP)—Sensational performances by United States imports have been credited for much of Calgary Stampeders' success in their Grey Cup victory of 1948 and their runner-up showing last year.

But the Stamps prize bootball package this year appears to be a Canadian.

Halfback Royal Copeland, blond pass-receiver who acquired his front-rank reputation in five seasons with Toronto Argonauts, is labelled Stamps' "Mr. Big" for 1950.

Leo Murphy, cowboys' publicity director, calls Copeland "the best Canadian football star of these times." He is expected to "attract and excite record crowds and add immensely to the Calgary Stampeder football objectives."

After his surprise singing with Shamps this spring, unofficial reports had his salary as high as $10,000.

Both club President Tom Brook and coach Les Lear figure the western conference is going to be tougher to win this year than it was for Stamps the last two seasons.

"The league will be about 30 per cent stronger, says Brook, "but our club will be greatly improved in speed, depth and size."

The Canadian Rugby Union allows each squad seven U.S. imports. Lear already has eight Americans signed and there is talk of three more to come, which will find 11 competing for seven places.

Spaith Back

Already signed are quarterback Keith Spaith, ends Ezzrett (Sugarfoot) Anderson and Woody Strode, guard Riley Matheson, tackles Johnny Aguirre, Earl Audet and Don Avery and half back Chuck Fenenboch.

The first five made up the import brigade last year when the cowboys lost the Grey Cup to Montreal Alouettes.

Spaith, Strode and Aguirre also were with the Stamps when Lear. in his first season as coach, piloted Calgary to the Dominion championship.

Fenenboch is a veteran who last year played for Edmonton Eskimos, his first year in Canada. A short but fleet and sturdy backfield ace, Chuck played professional football for Detroit Lions, Los Angeles Dons and Chicago Rockets.

Avery played with the Dons and Audet, a 250-pound, six-foot-two husky, was a member of the Washington Redskins, later also performing for the Dons.

Lear for more than a week has been rounding his men into shape for their first go Aug. 19—an exhibition game here against Montreal Alouettes.

Addressing 40 hopefuls—with 1,000 railbirds on hand to watch his new team in action—Lear said :

"We'll take every game as they come but we're going to go right through and win the thing."

London Majors Down Guelph By 6-2 Score

(By The Canadian Press)

The hot weather is starting to take its toll of intercounty league pitchers.

With the exception of cagy Tommy White, the pitchers generally took their lumps Wednesday night. White tossed a neat five-hitter as his London Majors downed Guelph Maple Leafs 6-2.

Saddest performance of the night was turned in by three Galt hurlers. The trio—Jim Bagby, Bill Leader, and Elmer Steppes— were touched for 13 hits by Kitchener Legionnaires, including six extra-base clouts.

Kitchener won 9-1. Fearless Freddie Thomas sparked the batting onslaught, smacking a bases-empty homer and a double in three times at bat. Gabby Hormann and Shorty Miller also hit for the circuit, giving Wally Beggs a solid lead to go with his seven-hitter.

Tommy White took no chances of his pitching being inadequate in turning back Guelph. Tommy hit a triple and a single in addition to his five-hitter, and put down embryonic Leaf uprisings in the seventh and ninth innings.

The boys were all hitting for the distance. On top of White's triple, rightfielder Dahlberg clouted a four-master for Majors, and centrefielder McCabe of Leafs hit a three-bagger and single in three trips.

Waterloo and Stratford concentrated more on singles, but they managed to hit nine of them apiece, and that coupled with two doubles and eight errors gave the Tigers a 6-4 victory.

Poorly Played

The game was a pretty shoddily played affair, the winners committing five errors — three by Manny McIntyre—and Nats three. A pair of walks, a sacrifice, and singles by Johnny Fornari and Al Dumouchelle gave Tigers the win in the last of the eighth. Dumouchelle was the winner.

St. Thomas Legion, coming from behind to score three runs in the ninth, defeated Brantford Red Sox 6-4 in Brantford. Sox threatened to tie it up in their half of the ninth, but tight relief pitching by Doc Doherty preserved the Legion win.

Big blows for the winner were Jack Randall's two-run triple in the sixth and Les Irwin's two-run single in the ninth. Bob Whitcher was the loser after replacing Tom Quest in the seventh.

Red Tallevi pitched a brilliant five-hitter for St. Catharines Stags in their 3-1 Niagara District Senior win over Tonawanda Dodgers. Tallevi didn't walk a man and whiffed five.

Those mighty mastadons of the mat, Yukon Eric and Fred Atkins, will meet in a return bout in the wrestling ring at the Memorial Arena on Friday night. Last week, Ferocious Fred scored a decision over the Alaska lumberjack, but there was a host of fans who didn't agree with the referee's verdict. Yukon, too, was strong in his disagreement with the official ruling that both his shoulders were down for the three-count. Eric and many observers felt the arbiter's decision was a hasty one. In any case, the differing fractions will have a chance to settle their squabbling in the best place of all—in the ring itself come Friday night. Yukon Eric will thus have a chance to prove he can beat the Aussie, if he can do so, and Atkins will have a chance to emphasize his previous triumph with another victory, if he can do so. An outstanding semi-final will bring together Seelie Samara, the sensational Negro mat star, and Ski-Hi Lee, the gigantic Ozark hillbilly wrestler.

Meyer's Temper Again Lands Him In Trouble

Philadelphia, July 27 (AP) — Terrible-tempered Russ Meyer, outstanding candidate for baseball's "bad man of the year" award, was in line again today for a fine or suspension, this time because a batter stepped out of the box.

The 26-year-old Meyer, ace righthander of the Philadelphia Phillies a year ago, has had more than his share of troubles this season. First of all, Russ lost six games in a row at the start of the season.

In one of those games, Russ took a throw from first baseman Eddie Waitkus and tagged first base, but the runner was ruled safe. Enraged Meyer stormed at the umpire. He ended in the showers minus $200 and on the suspended list for seven days.

After his poor start, Russ began to find himself. His record stood at 5-10 when he went to the pitching rubber for the Phils last night against Chicago Cubs, his old teammates.

Meyer was down 0-2 when Chicago went to bat in the fifth. Dubiel opened with a double and Russ walked Wayne Terwilliger. Carmen Mauro fouled out, Bob Borkowski smashed the ball off Meyer's glove and Duriel scored.

Hank Sauer stepped to the plate. As Russ began to pitch, Sauer stepped from the batter's box. Seeing Sauer leave the plate, Meyer stopped his motion.

Balk, yelled umpire Lon Warneke.

Meyer told the umpire, in choice Meyerian language, what he thought of the decision and pushed Warneke in doing so.

Warneke told Meyer he was finished pitching for the night. Whether league President Ford Frick will get an official report is not yet known.

It was an odd kind of balk call. Meyer was wrong in his argument but didn't know it at the time. Russ said later he thought that when a batter steps from the box, time is out.

That's right, if the umpire calls time. But Warneke didn't and the ball was in play. If Meyer had completed his pitch and sent the ball over the plate it would have been a strike.

Joe Louis Will Train For Comeback

Chicago, July 27 (AP) — Joe Louis, retired heavyweight boxing champion, was said today to be going to an Indiana training camp to prepare for a title bout with champion Ezzard Charles.

The 36-year-old Brown Bomber, king of the heavyweights for 11 years—longest reign in the heavyweight history — was reported getting ready to return to the ring to get some money to pay back taxes.

During his fistic career Louis earned nearly $4,000,000.

The report that Louis will fight again gained stature yesterday with his departure with adviser Fred Wilson for a West Baden, Ind., training site. Trainer Mannie Seamon also was reported en route to Baden with equipment.

Truman Gibson, the Bomber's manager, has said Louis will fight in September if he can reach an agreement with the government. Joe was in Washington supposedly to find out how much Louis owes the government on 1946 and 1947 income taxes.

The Bomber recently announced he will come out of retirement if the treasury accepts his purse in a proposed match with Charles in full payment.

The date for the Louis-Charles bout is eported to be Sept. 27 and the site New York Stadium.

James Norris, president of the International Boxing Club, said yesterday that Louis has received no instructions or official feelers regarding a possible return to action. He added:

"However, Louis is smart enough to know that if he is going to fight this fall he needs to start training now."

Friends said the former champion will remain at his Indiana camp until Aug. 7 or 8 when he will move to Pompton Lakes, N.J.

It appears certain that any proposed title bout between the former champion and Charles depends on Charles successfully winning his Aug. 15 title fight with Freddie Beshore of Buffalo, N.Y.

Louis planned to take the mineral baths at West Baden, Ind. He now weighs between 220 and 225 and wants to take off 10 or 15 pounds.

Samuel Goldwyn's HeartStirring Romance My Foolish Heart"

"My Foolish Heart" the Samuel Goldwyn production starring Dana Andrews and Susan Hayward, scheduled for presentation at the Belle Thearte, starting Saturday, combines romantic comedy and emotional drama in the story of a wartime love affair and its bitter aftermath.

Andrews is cast as a young man-about-town whose crashes parties and plays the wolf while he waits for the war to take him. His red-haired co-star plays the carefree college girl whose romance with him ends in tragedy. Robert Keith, Kent Smith, newcomer Lois Wheeler, Jessie Royce Landis and 8-year-old Gigi Perreau head the supporting cast.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When partner has not indicated what you should lead you make what is known as a blind lead. When partner has indicated what he would like led, you make what is known as a directed lead.

In a blind lead you decide by rule which suit to lead. Then you lead the highest of three or less; the fourth best of four or more. Do the same with a directed lead.

If partner has bid a suit you have a directed lead; his suit. So, if you have three or less of his suit, lead your highest; if you have four or more of his suit, lead your fourth best.

When you lead your fourth best of his suit, partner deducts your led card from 11. This tells him how many higher cards in his suit are held in the hand of the declarer. It is a help to him.

WEST EAST
♠K 8 6 3 ♠A J 10 5
SOUTH
♠Q 9 4

Your partner in east had bid spades and you hold the spades shown in the west hand. Which spade do you lead? The trey, fourth best from your four cards in the suit partner has bid.

What good does this do your partner? He deducts your three from 11. This tells him there are eight spades higher than the trey in north and east and south; the three hands outside of the leader.

He sees one higher in the north dummy and four higher in his own east hand. Thus does he know that south has three spades all of which are higher than the trey led by the west hand.

He knows that south does not have four spades. How does he know this? Because he sees the deuce in dummy, which is the only card lower than the three. Therefore, south must have exactly three spades.

This is valuable information for partner in deciding how his spades should be played. For partnership sake give partner a break.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was walking along with Shorty Judge, just walking along, and Shorty pulled out his big silver watch with' his initials on it that he just won for selling Morning Glory tooth paste, saying, G wizzickers, it took us exactly 4 minutes to walk this block.

Aw, what of it? I said, and Shorty said, Time is important, that's what of it. If it wasn't for time, what would happen to trains? he said, and I said, Aw how do I know? Maybe they'd run backwerds, so what's the difference? I said.

You'd soon find out the difference if you were waiting for a train and nobody could tell you if you were too late or too erly, because there was no sutch a thing as time, so the trains had to run by guesswerk, Shorty said.

And pritty soon we came to the joolry store and Shorty looked at the square clock in the window with the sine on it saying Official Observatory Time, and Shorty took his watch out again, saying, Holey smokes, that clock is 3 minutes wrong by my silver watch. I beter go in and tell the man and do him a favor, he said.

And we went in the store and the man was looking at the inside of a watch, and Shorty said, Say, mister, I just wanted to tell you your official clock is 3 minutes too fast.

Oh yeh? the man said. Why

mer and your boy scout knife and regulate it for me? he said.

Being sourcastic, and we went out again, Shorty saying, He'll be sorry when he finds out that his engagement rings and cigar lighters have bad reputations just because nobody can trust his official time. He'll be sorry all rite, he said.

And he took out his watch again to see if it needed winding.

Miss Canada IV Makes 130 MPH In Trial Run

Gravenhurst, Ont., July 27 — (CP)—Miss Canada IV was clocked yesterday at 130 m.p.h. in a trial run here and Charlie Volker, her mechanic, said he was "quite happy" with her performance.

Volker who took the boat out for this morning's spin, said that her owner-driver, Harold Wilson, of Ingersoll, Ont., likely will take an official crack at the world's speedboat record here "around the end of the week". He said the craft would make another trial run later today.

Wilson is aiming at the 160-mile-an-hour record set a few weeks ago by Stanley Sayres of Seattle, Wash., in his Slo-Mo-Shun.

FALSE TEETH Rock, Slide or Slip?

FASTEETH, an improved powder to be sprinkled on upper or lower plates, holds false teeth more firmly in place. Do not slide, slip or rock. No gummy, gooey, pasty taste or feeling. FASTEETH is alkaline (non-acid.) Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH at any drug store.

BABY'S HOT LITTLE HEAD

WHEN your Baby's head feels hot to your hand it may be because of simple fever common to some minor baby ailment. If so, Baby's Own Tablets will help reduce this simple fever by clearing harmful wastes out of the system.

Mrs. Francis Carroll, of Midland, has this to say: "My little baby was feverish and hot. I gave her Baby's Own Tablets and by night-time she was up and around again." If baby's fever is not promptly relieved consult your physician.

Baby's Own Tablets are sweet-tasting, easy to take—and have been used with confidence by mothers for over 50 years. No "sleepy" stuff—no dulling effect. Equally good for constipation, teething troubles, upset stomach and other minor ailments. 29¢ at druggists. Get a box today.

The Gentle Heart

By Kay Hamilton

The words bought remembrance to Jenny. She had heard something about him—Mrs. Folsom had said he had very gay parties in his new place. Not for the local people, but for his New York friends. Weekend parties where the guests never seemed to go to bed at all. At least, the neighbors reported that the windows were ablaze until morning.

But she put aside this for the moment. He didn't look particularly dangerous, she had to admit. Rather tired, almost as if he had been ill for a long time. She made up her mind to be cordial to him.

Then Brent sat down beside her and began to talk, and she forgot all about Jack Tyson until much later. When she did glance over at him, she saw that he and Diane were getting along famously together. Di's beauty was obvious, and of course Diane, whenever she had a worshipper at the flame of her bright beauty, was at her lovliest. She was glowing now.

"Girl's, what do you think?" she called across the room. "Jack says I ought to go in for modeling. I was telling him about the work I'm going to do for Brent, and he said I ought to try one of the big agencies in New York."

"She'd be a natural," Tyson inserted. "If she isn't photogenic, I'll eat my socks."

"Not your hat " Natalie inquired.

"I don't wear any. No, seriously, she ought to do well at it. She tells me she used to pose for your father, so she's accustomed to that end of it. It wouldn't be too hard for her to sit still or hold a standing pose. I'd be glad to introduce her to Pruitt."

"Pruitt!" Diane gasped. Pruitt's models were the symbol of feminine allure all over the country. Their lovely faces smiled from nationwide ads; their sleek bodies brought the latest fashions to style-hungry women. "But he's tops!"

"So are you, Princess," he smiled.

"And you really know him?" she demanded.

"As of old," he answered. Jenny thought his face looked suddenly careworn and tired. "As of old," he repeated. Then, rousing, "I tell you what, I'll try to arrange a dinner with him next week some time. In town, of course. You could come in for it,' couldn't you?"

"Certainly." Diane was breathless with pleasure.

"Later, perhaps, I can get him out for a weekend, but I couldn't hope for that so soon. He's sure to be dated up for quite a while."

The conversation drifted to advertising; to publishing; everyone talked at once. Only Gary sat silent, and Jenny realized that this was a strange field to him, and he felt out of his depth. At any other time she would have exerted herself to bring him into the talk, but now she felt distrait herself.

If this thing went through, it would mean that Diane would be able to earn her share of the household expenses. It would be a real worry off her mind and Natalie's. But it would mean, too, that much less chance of a reconciliation with Fred, and for that reason she rather dreaded any success which Diane might have. She wondered just how good for Diane continued association with men like Tyson would be. He flattered easily, which made him more than welcome to Di's circle. And it was that easy flattery that Jenny and Nat wanted to wean her from.

When he roused to take her part in the conversation, she made another real effort to include Gary. But Gary sat silent, withdrawn, his eyes fixed broodily upon the floor. She saw Natalie glance at him once or twice, saw her sister's mouth twitch with annoyance. Or was it worry? She could not decide, but she was sure of one thing: the rapport which had drawn them together on his arrival this evening had been broken.

It happened, she recalled, every time he came over. He and Natalie greeted each other with such real enthusiasm, started their talk together so happily. Then, as the evening wore on there would be a gradual separation until, by the time he went home, they were positively formal with one another. It was something which puzzled her very much. She liked Gary, and she was sure that Natalie liked him. At times she even felt that Natalie's feelings went far beyond mere liking. And yet, every time they met, this same thing happened.

Really bending her efforts to the task now, Jenny set about drawing Gary out of his shell. "Natalie says you are working on a new kind of fluorescent lighting," she said. "Tell me something about it. Is it a new type of bulb?"

"Not exactly," he said, rousing himself to answer her. "It's to be used in industry, and is really only an improvement on what we have now."

"Would it be something Natalie could use in the studio? She has only the old type fixtures and on dark days I thing she strains her eyes, particularly if she's working on a drawing with fine detail."

He glanced once, quickly, toward her sister, and there was such intensity of emotion in his look, that Jenny was startled. She might remain in the dark as to Natalie's feeling for him, but she knew now, without a doubt, that Gary loved Nat. It was a look at once tortured and protective, anxious and despairing. Involuntarily, Jenny's hand went out to touch him, to comfort him in some way, but she drew it back in time. It would never do to let him know that she had fathomed his secret.

He said, "I wish she'd let me fix up that studio for her and give her the proper lighting for her work. I suggested it once, but she said she couldn't afford it. I didn't mean it that way, of course. I had just wanted to do it for her."

Jenny nodded. "She won't take anything she can't pay for, but you mustn't blame her for that. It was instilled into us by our mother from the time we could understand anything at all. And she's very proud, you know."

"I know," he agreed. His face, as he turned away from her, was a mask of discouragement. What did he mean?

She said quickly, "But she made a wonderful new contract yesterday in New York and sold quite a few of her designs. If it works out, it will mean that she can earn a great deal more."

His face remained set, and he answered politely, "I'm sure she'll become a great success. She's clever and attractive, and her work has real appeal. Besides, she does not skimp on it—doesn't try to get by through her attractiveness. Yes she'll get there."

Jenny frowned. He had sounded like a catalog of her sister's virtues, but this last phrase sounded so disheartened that she prodded him a little.

"Get where?"

"To the top. Where she wants to be," he answered.

Woman Tells of Relief From Heartburn, Indigestion Gas - - Praises Syntona

Was Often Troubled with Sick Headache, Nervous, Rundown. "Entire System Now Built Up, Improved," She Says.

MRS. ANNIE CORBIN

Every man or woman in this city and vicinity who suffers from stomach distress after meals, or who feels tired, nervous or rundown will be interested in the recent experience of Mrs. Annie Corbin, 144 Giles Street, London, Ontario, who tells of relief from her suffering by taking a short treatment of Syntona Herbal Compound.

In thousands of cases across Canada this medicine has given equally good results, because Syntona helps tone up the impaired digestive system, aids elimination of excess acids and impurities from the system and promotes better assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.

"I was having so much pain from gas, indigestion and bloating that I felt distressed from one meal to the next," said Mrs. Corbin. "My food would ferment and sour in my stomach causing awful attacks of heartburn. I would get throbbing headaches, and was so dreadfully nervous, I couldn't even get my proper sleep. I constantly felt tired and wornout."

"But all that is changed since I've been taking Syntona. The gas, sourness and heartburn is cleared up. I am free from headaches, and my nerves are calmed down allowing me to get more sound, restful sleep. As a result my entire system feels built up and improved and even my work seems easier."

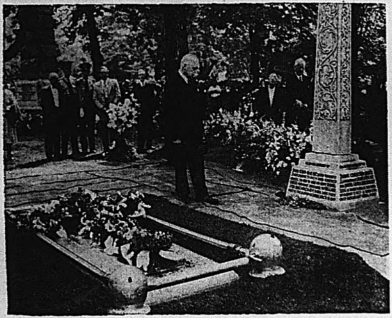
Quiet Ceremony Completes Mackenzie King Legend



Prime Minister St. Laurent stands for the last time by the side of Mackenzie King, his friend and leader for many years. Mr. King was buried in his family plot in Mount Pleasant cemetery in Toronto after a simple brief ceremony.

Memory of Mackenzie King Honored at Simple Service In Ancient Westminster

(By WILLIAM BOSS)

London, July 28. (Reuters).—With simple service in deference to his Presbyterian faith, Westminster Abbey today honored the memory of William Lyon Mackenzie King, long-time former prime minister of Canada, who died last Saturday.

The royal family, all the Dominions, the United States and the British Cabinet were represented, while hundreds of ordinary British and Canadian citizens overflowed the choir into the main body of the ancient church.

Prime Minister Attlee led a Cabinet representation which included Foreign Secretary Bevin, Herbert Morrison, deputy prime minister, and Lord Macdonald, paymaster-general and former governor of Newfoundland.

Lewis Douglas, United States Ambassador, represented his country.

Also present was Mrs. Alexander Macdougall King of Denver, Colo., sister-in-law of the late prime minister. She was holidaying in Britain when Mackenzie King died.

Sun poured through the stained-glass windows over the main altar as the congregation, which included Admiral of the Fleet Earl Mountbatten, and Duncan Sandys, representing his father-in-law, Winston Churchill, assembled.

British Liberals were represented by Clement Davies, their leader in the House of Commons, and Viscount Samuel from the House of Lords.

The Earl of Athlone, former governor-general of Canada, represented the King. The Queen, Queen Mary and Princess Elizabeth also were represented.

A hymn version of the 23rd Psalm, "The Lord's My Shepherd, I'll Not Want", opened the service, which included Gustav Holsts's setting of Cecil Spring-Rice's poem, "I Vow to Thee, My Country, All Earthly Things Above".

"We give hearty thanks for the life and work of William Mackenzie King, our brother," said Dean A. C. Don in his prayer for the departed leader.

Many Volunteers Want to Fight In Korea Only

Ottawa, July 28 — (CP) — Canadians who want to fight only in Korea are being turned away from the recruiting stations by the hundreds.

A defence department official said today that in the two weeks July 1 to 15, 600 Canadians asked to enlist for Korea duty. Hundreds more have kept the recruiting officers busy since.

Each had to be informed that Canada is not accepting volunteers specifically for Korea. What the services want are men committed to go anywhere.

When told this, said the official, many of the volunteers wouldn't sign.

But in the first two weeks of July, 1,500 did volunteer for active service anywhere. A sharp upsurge was noted in the latter half of the month after Defence Minister Claxton made an appeal for men.

The total for the month will not be known for several days when district officers have sent in the figures.

Officials here said it may reach 5,000. That does not mean Canada will obtain 5,000 recruits.

For every man who passes the services' physical and other tests, 14 are turned away.

The armed forces' standards are high. At the moment there is no indication they will be lowered as was done during the Second World War to increase the percentage of volunteers who can be enlisted.

FLOUR MAY EASE

Ottawa, July 28 — (CP) — The wholesale price of bread flour may ease slightly next month, but that won't mean a cheaper loaf for the Canadian housewife.

A baking industry spokesman said Thursday that costs of such other ingredients as lard and sugar have risen so sharply within the last few weeks to make it impossible for bakers to consider price reductions.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS:

Toronto, July 28 (CP) —Synopsis: Afternoon temperatures rose to the seasonable 80s in southern Ontario and 70s in Northern Ontario yesterday. Isolated showers and thundershowers were reported during the night.

Continued warm weather is forecast for today and Saturday, with temperatures a little higher than yesterday in most localities.

Widows of Slain Langton Men Will Share Bank Fund of $18,500

Langton, Ont., July 28—(CP)— The widows of two district men slain while pursuing a bank robber here June 21 are to share $18,500.

Mrs. William Goddyn, who has three small children, will receive $15,500 and Mrs. Arthur Lierman $3,000. The Canadian Banker's Association is providing $12,500 of the money and The Imperial Bank of Canada, whose branch was robbed, will contribute $6,000.

J. U. Boyer, Banker's Association president, said Mr. Lierman, real estate dealer, insurance man and tobacco farm owner, left a "moderately substantial" estate. Mrs. Goddyn, whose husband worked for Mr. Lierman, was left with no money, no insurance and a few debts.

Mrs. Goddyn plans to use some of the money to build a house.

Courier Plane With 26 Aboard Down in Sea

Tokyo, July 28—(Reuters)—A United States general headquarters courier plane carrying 23 passengers between Tokyo and Kyushu was reported down in the sea about eight miles south of Oshima Island.

The passengers included four correspondents flying to the Korean battle zone.

(The Associated Press said the plane carried a crew of three.)

One survivor has been picked up. Search for the others is continuing.

The plane was a C-47 transport.

Japan's southernmost island of Kyushu is 500 miles southwest of the Japanese capital. Oshima Island is 70 miles south of Tokyo.

The third air rescue squadron has been put on the alert to search the area.

Aboard the missing plane were Stephen Simmons of the Manchester Guardian, Max Philenenko of Agence France-Presse, James Supple of the Chicago Sun-Times and James Hicks of Afro-African, a newspaper syndicate embracing a number of U.S. newspapers.

Bevin Returns After Illness

London, July 28 (Reuters) — Foreign Secretary Bevin was back at his desk in the foreign office today for the first time in nearly two months.

He returned yesterday from 12 days at Eastbourne on the south coast where he was recuperating after an operation.

Bevin's first official engagement today was to attend a memorial service at Westminster Abbey for Mackenzie King, former Canadian Prime Minister.

TWELVE AUTOS ENTERED

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 28—(CP)—Thieves broke into 12 cars in the General Brock Hotel parking lot here during the night. Police said the loss in clothing and personal effects is nearly $1,000, and that damage to the autos amounted to hundreds of dollars.

RUSSIA ENDS BOYCOTT U.N. SECURITY COUNCIL

Washington Sees Move West Diplomatic Victory

By A. I. GOLDBERG

Lake Success, N.Y., July 28 — (AP)—Russia late yesterday announced the end of her boycott of the United Nations Security Council. Her chief U. N. delegate, Jakob A. Malik, said he will take over the council presidency on schedule Aug. 1.

The full meaning of the Russian return could not be evaluated. It threatened vetoes over future council actions on the Korean conflict or on any other action the Russians oppose.

But there appeared no way the Russians could recall actions already taken, although they have branded U.N. intervention in Korea illegal because the Soviet Union was not represented at the meetings and the Chinese Nationalists were.

Alphabetical rotation of the council presidency among its members gives Russia its regular term in August.

Malik, a Soviet deputy foreign minister, gave no indication that he intended to attend the Security Council meeting this morning. Its announced purpose was to hear what council members have to say about the review of U.N. military operations in Korea, received this week from Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Plans to Take Term

Malik notified Secretary-General Trygve Lie yesterday that he plans to take his August term and that he wants a council meeting held at 3 p.m. EDT next Tuesday. He told Lie he would announce the program of business later.

C.C.F. Party Pledges Support To U.N. Action

Vancouver, July 28 (CP) —The national CCF party, a policy revolt crushed, today was pledged to support United Nations' action in Korea and Canadian participation in such action.

A move to kick aside the Nation council's stand on Korea was swamped yesterday at the CCF's biennial convention. Delegates voted 115-25 against a policy opposing armed intervention.

The revolt paralleled on Atlantic pact disagreement last year at a British Columbia conference of the CCF.

The revolt groups had the same leaders: Rod Young, former CCF Member of Parliament for Vancouver Centre; Colin Cameron, former secretary of the British Columbia CCF, and Bob Strachen, delegate from Nanaimo, BC.

Young's Proposals

The Korean proposal, introduced by Mr. Young and seconded by Mr. Strachen, asked in the place of military support to South Korea:

That communist China be admitted to the U.N. Security Council; that the U.N. issue another cease-fire order to both sides; that leaders of both Korean governments appear before the U.N.; that the U.N. form a commission, headed by Prime Minister Pandit Nehru of India, to seek a permanent solution.

Mr. Young tried to have the national council's Korean resolution—hammered out in closed sessions here—referred back to the resolutions committee for redrafting along the lines of his proposed substitute.

The move was defeated, 111 to 24. The original resolution then was passed 115 to 25.

Wants Parliament Recalled

The resolution, which asks the government to reconvene parliament at the earliest moment says: "The burden of military action to halt aggression in Korea should not be left to one nation alone."

All countries in the U.N. should participate "according to their ability in whatever military and other measures are necessary."

Louis Will Try To Regain Title, Starts Training

New York, July 28 (AP)—Joe Louis, now 36, will try to regain the world heavyweight boxing title he gave up two years ago.

As a challenger he notified the International Boxing Club that he started preliminary training in Indiana today with the hopes of meeting Ezzard Charles, National Boxing Association champion, in September in either New York or Chicago.

In Cincinnati, Charles said in a statement he "never had any particular desire to box Louis, but always wanted to be the undisputed champion."

Welcomes Opportunity

The N.B.A. titleholder added: "I welcome the opportunity to settle in the minds of boxing fans whether I am the undisputed champion."

The 36-year-old Louis made the announcement through James Norris, president of the International Boxing Club.

Louis said in a statement "I have decided to fight again because of a large and unexpected tax assessment for 1946-1947 which has just been levied."

"My returns for those years were prepared by certified public accountants. They took large deductions for me that have been disallowed. As a result, I was placed in the 90-per-cent bracket. While the exact amount of the tax has not been finally fixed, it is going to be large.

Charles is the generally-recognized successor to Louis although no champion occupies the New York State throne and Lee Savold of Englewood, N.J., is recognized as the British and European world champion.

After he had flattened Jersey Joe Walcott in the 11th round of their second fight at Yankee stadium, June 2, 1948, Louis said:

"For my mother—this is for her". "Tonight was my last."

Since then Joe has engaged in several exhibition tours, fighting many good opponents in 10-round affairs.

Canada Stands Pat on Present War Commitments

Ottawa, July 28 — (CP) — Canada is standing for the present on her current commitment of ships and planes to Korea and no plans have been made to send ground troops, defence minister Claxton indicated last night.

The minister told newspaper men on his return trip from Toronto that no major decisions on Korea were taken at the latest meeting of the cabinet. There were no plans for a special session of parliament, which Prime Minister St. Laurent has said would be called if more Korean aid became necessary.

Mr. Claxton and other ministers were questioned as they returned from Toronto burial services for former Prime Minister Mackenzie King. A special cabinet meeting was held aboard the train en route to Toronto Wednesday night.

More For Defence

The defence minister said developments in Korea had resulted in a decision to spend much more on defence than the $425,000,000 allocated in the budget. But he denied reports that an announcement would be made shortly on the question of sending Canadian ground troops to Korea.

There was no indication Mr. St. Laurent will return to Ottawa from Rimouski, Que., before the next regular cabinet meeting Wednesday. This was taken to indicate no further moves will be taken on Korea before then.

Canada at present has committed the destroyers Cayuga, Athabaskan and Sioux to Gen. MacArthur's United Nations forces in Korea and a squadron of R.C.A.F. transport planes to transport work across the Pacific.

SUMMER RECESS

London, July 28 (AP) —Parliament adjourned tonight for a summer recess which will last until Oct. 17—unless it is recalled because of the international situation.

Herbert Morrison, Deputy Prime Minister, told the House of Commons yesterday it may be notified to reassemble at any time if necessary.

SUPPORT FOR CONTROLS BUILDS UP IN CONGRESS

Baruch Plan Gains Powerful Strength

Washington, July 28. (AP) — Considerable support built up in Congress today for a drive to put the United States under rationing and wage and price control.

The idea is to substitute full home-front mobilization for President Truman's limited economic-control bill.

The House of Representatives banking committee approved the President's plan late yesterday by a vote of 20 to 1, but only after 11 failed by a one-vote margin to take instead the all-out economic control plan proposed by elder statesman Bernard M. Baruch. The Baruch plan lost 10 to 9.

Will Carry Fight

Representative John Kunkel (Rep. Pa.), author of the all-out substitute, announced immediately he will take the fight to the House floor when the bill comes up there next Tuesday. His measure would roll back prices to their lowest level between July 24 and 28.

Powerful support gathered behind the Baruch plan.

Chairman Carl Vinson (Dem. Ga.) of the House Armed Services committee, said "I am for the Baruch plan. Otherwise there will be inflation, absolutely out of control."

The Federal Reserve Board reported that department store sales in the country last week ran 46 per cent higher than in the same week last year. Never before has such a large increase been recorded. The Agriculture Department said sugar sales by primary distributors jumped 37 per cent in the first three weeks of July, compared with the same 1949 period.

Bill's Demands Moderate

Truman's bill calls for no price and wage controls, and for no rationing powers. The President says he doesn't need this authority now but will ask for it if he finds it needed.

His request provides allocation and priorities authority to channel facilities and materials into military and essential uses, to finance increased productive capacity and a larger supply of materials, and to control installment buying and other consumer and real estate credit, and also power to curb speculations in commodities.

Reports Russian Naval Transport Sighted Near Jap Islands

Tokyo, July 28. (AP)—A Japanese district patrol boat reported today it sighted a Russian naval transport sailing between two of the main islands of Japan.

The patrol boat said the Soviet craft, of about 5,000 tons was at the western entrance of Tsugaru Strait, between Honshu and Hokkaido Islands.

"ROBBERY" SOLVED

Welland, July 28 (CP) — The nearby village of Crowland has solved its first bank robbery. Police said three brothers, aged 6 to 10, forced a neighbor's window and took two piggy banks, each containing about $2 in pennies.

First Flight of Canadian Air-Lift Planes on Long Trip Over Pacific

McChord Air Force Base, Wash., July 28—(CP)—The first flight of R.C.A.F. Korean air-lift planes was thundering across the Pacific today, bound for Tokyo.

The 5,000-mile flight will take at least 23 hours.

Officials at this base, North American hinge of the air lift, declined to say exactly how many planes had left or their time of departure.

It was assumed, however, that six R.C.A.F. aircraft were making the flight and that they had left here at 7 p.m. (10 p.m. EDT) last night.

The North Star planes of 426 Transport Squadron, under command of Wing Cmdr. Campbell Mussells of Montreal, arrived here Wednesday.

The squadron will ferry supplies to Tokyo over the northern Pacific air route via the Aleutians.

R.C.A.F. ground crews will be spotted at airfields along the route to service the North Stars. United States air force ground crews are not familiar with the engines of the Canadian aircraft.

The North Stars brought spare engines with them when they landed here from Montreal and spare parts will be flown here as needed.

Americans Struggle To Restore Breach Driven in Line

Next Few Days Extremely Important Says Spokesman

Tokyo, July 29 — (Saturday) — (AP) — Communist North Korean invaders threw a savage armored attack at American divisions today in a decisive battle for the remaining U.S. foothold in South Korea.

The North Koreans were attacking in the rain along the whole 200-mile front with an estimated 90,000 men in nine divisions.

The heaviest blows were dealt against the greatly outnumbered American forces in the west-central sector northeast and southeast of Yongdong.

General MacArthur's summary issued early Saturday said "a savage fire fight" was in progress, with concentrated assaults on the U.S. 1st Cavalry division area southeast of Yongdong.

The 1st Cavalry foot troops lost some ground in the Hwanggan vicinity 15 miles east of Yongdong, but were last reported holding firm against three enemy divisions.

Poor Flying Weather

Twenty miles farther northeast elements of North Korean 15th division drove a small wedge between the U.S. 25th Division and the South Korean 6th Division near Ichon Village, MacArthur's announcement said. Efforts were being made to restore the breach.

Fighting without much direct air support because of the weather the defending troops sought to bar the corridor to Taegu, temporary South Korean capital and supply-line hub 45 miles southeast of Yongdong and 40 miles northwest of vital Pusan port.

A MacArthur headquarters intelligence spokesman said late Friday: "Enemy pressure now is reaching a maximum, and he must have a decision quickly."

This spokesman said the communist supply problem has reached a point where the invaders are unable to continue a war of attrition. He called the next few days "extremely important" from the communist point of view.

An American counter-attack was made late Friday in an attempt to ease pressure on the central sector. There were no immediate reports on how it fared.

Heavy Artillery Fire

The northerners' attack was launched and maintained under the heaviest concentration of artillery and motar fire of the five-week-long war.

In the far south, where the reds for several days had been advancing with small feeler tank forces, they gained another 10 miles along the undefended roads.

This carried them within about 60 miles of Pusan, the all-important American supply port at the south-east tip of Korea across from Japan.

A Tokyo headquarters spokesman said, however, "the southwestern situation is completely under control."

It was on the west-central front astride the road and railroad leading southeast to Taegu and Pusan, that the decisive engagement was being fought out.

Nine red divisions were in the field. The headquarters spokesman said they were making a supreme effort to crash through before allied air strikes demolish their supply lines.

"Although the enemy is obviously suffering from a terrific pounding from the air and sea he is still pushing forward," the spokesman said.

The red divisions involve about 90,000 troops.

American artillery opened up all along the line. It hurled tons of high explosives and anti-personnel fire at communist concentrations.

Key fight was on the central front, where the American counter-attack was still under way at mid-afternoon. And red artillery was still blasting after 24 hours.

In the far south, where American and South Korean operations have been confined to feeling out the reds with exploring task forces, communists pushed 10 miles along almost undefended roads. This carried them to within approximately 60 miles of Pusan, American supply port at the southeastern tip of Korea.

Father of Dying Child Runs Amok, Stabs Nine to Death

Kampala, Uganda, July 28 — (Reuters) — An African father visiting his dying child at Mulago government hospital here ran amok early today and stabbed to death a woman and eight children in a ward.

Another child died shortly after the attack. Two others were badly wounded.

BABY BORN IN CAR

Brockville, July 28—(CP)—Because a railway crossing gate delayed an expectant mother in her dash to the hospital, a baby boy was born early today on the front seat of an automobile.

The child's father, Eric Rosbottom, said the crossing gateman lowered the gates when a yard engine approached the crossing. The baby arrived during the three minutes the Rosbottoms waited for the gates to be raised.

TREE PLANTING VERY SUCCESSFUL

Survival of trees in tree planting projects in this county and district has been excellent this year, according to Zone Forester W. E. Edwards. This is in direct contrast to conditions in 1949. Applications for trees for 1951 should be made before August 15.

COURT RESERVES DECISION ON C.A.S. APPLICATION

Decision was reserved by Magistrate J. B. Garvin in Kingston after hearing an application of the Children's Aid Society for an increase in the per diem rate paid by eight municipalities for the maintenance of wards. The adjourned hearing will be held Aug. 4th.

Included in those municipalities which had the decision reserved were Hastings County and the Town of Trenton. Frontenac, Prince Edward, Renfrew, Lanark and Welland counties were asked to attend the adjourned hearing.

NUMBER OF SMART CRAFT IN HARBOR

Trim craft are tied up at the Government Dock these days.

Yesterday the smart "Daphne" sloop-rigged yacht flying the burgee of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club was moored here all day breaking the journey from Chaumont, N.Y. Nearby was the "Con" of the National Yacht Club, Toronto, while the heavier "Olanda" wearing the insignia of the Toronto Harbor Commission was astern.

The "Black Watch," ebony-colored Marconi-rigged craft of the Youngstown Yacht Club spent the night here.

GIRL WAS STAYING WITH SISTER

Object of a police search since Thursday evening when she disappeared from her home in Picton, 12-year-old Helen Cole of that centre was located on Front Street in Belleville today by local police. The description of the girl had been broadcast and the young girl was seen as she walked up Front Street shortly after nine o'clock. Before she was turned over to her mother the girl told police officers she had stayed overnight in Belleville with her sister.

INJURED DEER IS DESTROYED

A two-year-old male deer was destroyed this week near Marmora by Department of Lands and Forests game overseers. The animal had suffered an injury to one of its antlers which resulted in such abnormal growth that it was unable to support the weight and feed properly. The deer was in a very weakened condition when discovered.

Spectator Finds Wrist Broken Day After Race

Jim Baxter, of the staff of Burrows Motor Sales of this city, stood at the Thornhill Speedway Park the other evening watching madcap drivers race stock cars willy-nilly over the track. With him was Steve Burrows 'the boss'.

Both men thrilled to the reckless chances the drivers took and winced occasionally as cars collided, crashed into a fence and performed other antics while the drivers emerged unhurt.

"Wouldn't want to take a chance like that," opined Mr. Baxter, as he mounted a ten-gallon oil can in the vicinity in order to get a better view.

Came a spectacular stunt and Mr. Baxter, in the excitement, fell off his improvised perch. He scrambled to his feet and enjoyed the remainder of the races.

Next morning he noticed an arm badly swollen. It became painful and he went to the doctor.

An X-ray revealed a fracture of the wrist.

Next time Baxter goes to the races, he'll take a chance driving one of the car entries.

FRANKFORD

Fist Fights Force Halt to Game

Frankford — Frankford Midgets defeated Belleville West Royals in an abbreviated six-inning contest Tuesday evening on the Frankford diamond. Feelings ran high, and there were several minor skirmishes throughout the game. The spark which touched of the powder keg was a play in the sixth inning when a Belleville player charged Jack O'Brien, Frankford catcher, as he was making a play. O'Brien took a throw to cut off a runner coming home, and was hit hard by the runner coming in. Fists began flying, and it was necessary to call the game, with Frankford on top 8-5.

Mysterious Object Scoots Along At 2,000 M.P.H.

London, July 28. (Reuters)—A mysterious object was reported seen yesterday at 15,000 to 20,000 feet over Cowes Airport, Isle of Wight. George Wilks, chief engineer at the airport, and Capt. J. Jessop, a former R.A.F. transport command pilot, said the object was round, "emitted a hard, white light," and travelled at about 2,000 miles an hour.

Ingenious Plan Will Enable Bank Staff to Work During Construction

In the course of their career, most bankers expect to make occasional moves, but I. G. Hefkey, manager of the Royal Bank of Canada branch here and his staff, will have chalked up something of a record by the time they move into their new quarters in the building now under construction at the corner of Front and Campbell streets.

Within the space of twelve months, from last June, when the wreckers first started pulling down the old building, to next May, when it is expected the new building will be finished, Mr. Hefkey and his staff will have made three moves and conducted business in three different banking rooms, all without changing the location of the branch.

Here is the Plan

It sounds a trifle confusing, but here is how they are doing it.

When the Royal Bank decided this year to replace the eighty-year-old structure at Front and Campbell with a new modern banking centre, there were no suitable temporary quarters available in which to carry on business. The solution was to "stay put", building the new bank around a specially-constructed temporary building, made so it can be moved within the ground-floor area of the building.

The rear half of the old building previously used by stores is now being demolished, while the bank continues operations in its original premises facing Front street. Then the foundations, vaults, and ground floor slab for the rear half of the new building will be constructed. Next a temporary frame building, mounted on rollers, will be built over the new floor, and the bank staff will move in, bag and baggage.

Movable Room

The front half of the old building will then be torn down and the builders complete the foundations and ground floor slab. The temporary frame building housing the bank premises will then be rolled forward into the centre of what will be the new banking room, and the new building will be completed around this banker's version of the Trojan Horse.

When the building is finished some time next spring, the staff will move once again, this time out of their temporary quarters which will be dismantled, and into the new banking room. By that time they will welcome the change of setting down at last in what will be one of the most modern banking centres in Ontario incorporating all the latest innovations for convenience and efficiency.

Quarter Mile Of Highway Now in City

Provincial highway traffic officers patrolling on No. 2 highway east of the city had a quarter of a mile lopped off their beat recently when the section of highway between Herchimer Ave., and the former city limits was turned over to the city. This part of Dundas Street, East, will now be patrolled by city traffic officers.

Since the former county home property was annexed to the city, this particular part of the four lane highway has actually been within the city limits but the highway had not been formally turned over by the Highway Department and duties of patrolling remained with the provincial police. This week the stretch of roadway was formally turned over to the city by order in council.

INFANT KILLED

Pembroke, Ont., July 28 (CP)—An infant was killed and two young girls injured Thursday when struck by a motor car, driven by Bert Holmes of Renfrew, while walking along the highway.

Killed was 13-months-old Beverley Richardson, in her baby carriage, while her four-year-old sister, Aloma, and a companion, Merle Paget, 16, were injured.

Bolivian Minister Will be Guest Speaker Here

Secretary of Christian Education for the Methodist Church in Bolivia, Rev. Alberto Marubia of Le Paz, Bolivia, will be the guest speaker at the combined United Church service to be held Sunday evening at the Drive-in Theatre. Mr. Marubia is also president of the National Youth Organization which is the only interdenominational organization in Bolivia.

On August 16th, Dr. T. Kagawa, of Japan, one of the leaders of the world convention and well-known Christian, will speak here. He will be in the city on the day following his world convention address in Toronto. Dr. Kagawa spoke in the city on a previous occasion in 1935 or 1936.

724 DROWNED IN YEAR

Strathroy, Ont., July 28. (CP)—Canada lost two citizens every day through drowning in 1943, Health Minister Martin said on Thursday night, in an address prepared for delivery at the opening of a Lions Club swimming pool here.

He said 724 Canadians drowned during the year, though even this figure was a considerable improvement over previous years.

"To be able to swim and to render assistance to others is essential for living a full and challenging life," he added.

Junior Farmers Softball Honors To Peterborough, Northumberland

Peterborough county boys and Northumberland county girls won district softball honors for Junior Farmers in Central Ontario on Thursday when their teams bested all opposition at the annual district Junior Farmers' field day at the Ontario School for the Deaf here.

The Peterborough boys were extended to the limit to win over Hastings in the finals and came from behind in the seventh inning to eke out a close 6-5 decision.

The girls' final game was also a close match with Northumberland winning a close one from Victoria county by a 17-14 count.

Twelve Teams Compete

With 12 softball teams competing six boys and six girls, the preliminary games dragged on and the track and field events scheduled for the day had to be cancelled. Counties entering teams included Hastings, Prince Edward, Northumberland, Durham, Peterborough and Victoria. Lennox and Addington, and Frontenac were also expected to compete but failed to put in an appearance.

A dance in the OSD gymnasium concluded the day's events which were directed by J. Fred Young publicity director for the Department of Agriculture, and F. R. Hilliard, assistant director of extension.

In the preliminary games Hastings boys defeated Northumberland 8-4 and then went on to win 11-0 over Durham. Peterborough won over Prince Edward 18-3 and then defeated Victoria 13-3 with Peterborough and Hastings then meeting in the finals.

Lineups

Hastings: Lanigan 3b; Finch, 2b; McInroy, c; Sills, lf; Zufelt, ss; Campbell, rf; Edmondson, p; Harder, cf and Richardson 1b.

Work to Begin on Improved Sections of Highway to Bancroft

The 50-mile stretch of Highway 62 from Madoc to Bancroft will be completely graded and paved by the fall of 1951 it is expected by the Ontario Highways Department.

This was reported today by Roscoe Robson, M.P.P. for Hastings East, who said the department hoped to complete grading and construction of culverts this year, while the sections remaining unpaved would be mulched next year.

The local representative stated that the contract for the grading of the three and one half mile stretch from Kellar's Bridge north of Eldorado to Bannockburn has been recently let and the contractor would commence work in the near future. Contract price was not stated but Mr. Robson said the grading and culvert work had been estimated at $85,000 per mile.

Also, tenders will soon be called for the stretch of highway from L'Amable to Bancroft, the work expected to be completed this fall.

The McFarland Construction Company has completed grading operations on the two - mile stretch from Green's Corners to L'Amable and is now commencing construction of the bridge at L'Amable. Mill owners at the village have the water rights and it was necessary to wait until logs were out of the water before the water could be lowered sufficiently to allow a start in the work of bridge construction.

Work of mulching the Bannockburn-Millbridge section of the highway is now underway, as is the work of mulching the Selby Hill section of the highway north of Bancroft.

Girl Thrown Out Of Car, Tells of Rape Attempt

Toronto, July 28 — (CP) — Mary Turner, 19, leaped or was thrown from a slowly moving automobile in downtown Toronto early today.

She told police she was picked up by the motorist while waiting for a streetcar in the west-central section of the city. She said she was driven to the waterfront and an attempt was made to rape her. In her battle with the motorist her jaw was fractured and her face cut and bruised.

Two bystanders saw the girl tumble from the car. They tried to get the licence number but it was covered with a piece of cloth.

The girl gave two different names and different ages to police before she admitted her real name and age. Police are still investigating her story.

Minister Approves Holiday Clothes For Church Wear

Derby, England, July 28—(Reuters)—A Church of England minister today defended casual holiday clothes, including beach costumes, as decent attire for church-going.

Writing in the Derby Diocesan News, he said:

"It is not essential that necks, arms and legs should be throttled for worship. Such things are recognized nowadays as not indecent. They may even be comely."

30 POLIO CASES

Toronto, July 28 — (CP) — Thirty polio cases, with one death, have been reported in Ontario this year. By the same date last year, there were 286 cases and 12 deaths.

Officials of the Ontario Health Department described the number of cases this year as "only slightly above normal."

Obituary

MRS. E. Z. (STAPLEY) DODDS
(Edmonton-Stirling)

The following obituary, which appeared in the paper at Viking, Alberta, will be of interest to residents in the Stirling and West Huntingdon districts:

The funeral of Mrs. Emma Z. Dodds, wife of J. Leslie Dodds, former C.N.R. agent of Viking and Stettler, who died in an Edmonton hospital after a long illness on July 11, was held on Thursday, July 13, from Andrews and McLaughlin Funeral Chapel in Edmonton. Burial took place in the Edmonton cemetery with Rev. Hart Cantelon officiating.

The pall bearers were J. R. MacRae, Dr. M. G. McCallum, Eldon Reid, Harry J. Robinson, W. S. Jones, Lane McAthey, the latter three having been members of the Sunday School where Mrs. Dodds had taught for many years.

The late Mrs. Dodds was born near Stirling, Ont., in September 1877, older daughter of Sam Stapley and his wife the former Sarah Tufts. She was married in 1903 at West Huntingdon, Ont., to J. Leslie Dodds and resided in different points in Ontario until 1910, when they came west to Holden, and kept house in a box car, which served as the station as well. Three months later they moved to the new depot at Viking where they remained for 27 years, which included a short time in Calgary. In 1937 they moved to Stettler, from there retiring to Chilliwack in February, 1945, where they resided until just prior to her death.

Mrs. Dodds was a much loved and highly respected person among her many friends and acquaintances. She was a life-long member of the Methodist and United Church working tirelessly for the Ladies' Aid and always having a class in the Sunday School. When help was needed in the community, she was one of the first to offer a helping hand. Mrs. Dodds was a member of the Eastern Star.

LATE HAROLD O'BRIEN
(Niagara Falls—Tyendinaga)

The funeral of Harold O'Brien, one time of Tyendinaga township and of late years residing at Niagara Falls, N.Y., who died in that city on Tuesday last, was held Friday morning from the Corrigan and O'Brien Funeral Home, Moira Street West, to St. Michael's Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father C. E. Baker, who also said the committal prayers at St. James' Cemetery.

The bearers were John Craig, James McGrath, Edward Jarrell, Patrick O'Brien, Leo Bennett and James Whalen.

MRS. EMMA D. CLEMINGER

Marmora—On Thursday, July 20th, Mrs. Emma Drusilla Cleminger passed away at her home in Marmora township in her 81st year. Her husband, the late Henry Cleminger predeceased her on August 11, 1942, and she had since resided with her son Gordon Cleminger.

The late Mrs. Cleminger was born in Marmora township, her maiden name being Emma Drusilla Whitney. Her parents were pioneers of the township. In recent years her age and health had confined her in her home.

The deceased had eleven children all of whom survive and are as follows: William, Niagara Falls, N.Y.; Gordon, at home; Roy, Oshawa; Joseph, at home; Clayton, Marmora; Clinton and Stewart, Niagara Falls, N.Y.; George, Port Hope; Mrs. Bert Inkster, Marmora; Mrs. B. Carman, Eldorado; Mrs. Ezra Carman, Eldorado.

The funeral was held on Monday afternoon from her late residence to St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, where service was conducted by the Rev. G. D. Young at 2 p.m. Interment took place in Maple Grove cemetery, Havelock.

BIRTHS

SCHMIDT — Mr and Mrs. Milton F. Schmidt, (nee Olive Jones), R. R. 2, Ameliasburg, are happy to announce the birth of their daughter, Susan Eileen, on Wednesday, July 26, 1950, at the Belleville General Hospital. J28

VANCE — Mr. and Mrs. Allen Vance, (nee Gloria Morris), wish to announce the birth of their daughter, Carol Amber, on Wednesday, July 26th, 1950, at the Belleville General Hospital. J28

IN MEMORIAM

HULL — In loving memory of a dear husband and dad, Walter P. Hull, who was killed on July 26, 1949.

Many a lonely heartache
Many a silent tear
Always a beautiful memory
For one we loved so dear.
God gave us strength to fight it
And courage to bear the blow
But what it meant to lose you
No one will ever know.
A happy home we once enjoyed
How sweet the memory still
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never forget.

Sadly missed by wife and son. J28

CARDS OF THANKS

Mrs. Archie Munns, Sr., and family would like to express their thanks for all the cards, beautiful floral tributes received and donations of cars in their recent sad bereavement. With special thanks to the bearers. J28

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 28 (CP)—Early gains were reduced as the session progressed on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Industrials climbed strongly in morning dealings, continuing yesterday's strong advances, but begun to settle in mid-session as mild selling appeared.

Volume for the first three hours was 504,000 shares.

Abitibi Paper held the limelight on the industrial board, climbing 2¼ to 30¾ in brisk dealings. The semi-annual report is expected to be distributed shortly. Other papers, utilities and agricultures also climbed. Steels and refining oils were mixed.

Junior gold producers also climbed in dull dealings. Newlund paced leaders slowly upwards. Seniors also brightened.

In base metals, Quemont and International Nickel gained fractions and Labrador Exploration and Steep Rock iron mines attracted considerable buying.

Western oils started higher but slipped into minus territory at the half-way mark.

PRODUCE PRICES

Creamery prints: First grade, 55 cents.

The egg market was firm this morning. Grade B eggs are in light supply and the price has advanced slightly. Other grades remained unchanged. Country shippers quoted graded eggs, cases free: Grade A large, 51; A medium, 49; A pullet, 39; Grade B, 34-35; Grade C, 28. Wholesale to retail: Grade A large, 54; A medium, 52; A pullet, 44; Grade B, 38-40; Grade C, 33.

Butter solids: First grade solids, tenderable, 53, non-tenderable, 52; second grade solids 48-48½.

HOGS

Toronto, July 28 —(CP) — Grade A truck hogs were $31.25 at Stratford this morning.

Other markets were not reported.

BUFFALO LIVESTOCK

Hogs 600; good and choice hogs 20-25.50; goods sows 16-20.

Lambs and sheep market not established.

Gun Discharge Causes Scads Of Excitement

Vancouver, July 28 (CP)—A bank messenger's revolver discharged in his pocket on a downtown Vancouver street Thursday leading to an intensive police search of the bank of Nova Scotia premises and scads of excitement.

It went like this:

The unidentified messenger and a companion were waiting for a light to change when the revolver went off, shooting bits of pavement into the startled face of a woman bystander. She and a woman companion followed the two as far as the Bank of Nova Scotia, then summoned a constable.

Hordes of police descended on the 12-storey building, blocking all exits as crowds gathered. The mystery finally was explained but is still under investigation.

Prices of Pork May Drop Later, Beef Prices Won't

Guelph, July 28—(CP)—A federal government official predicted Thursday that pork prices may drop later this year but beef prices won't.

A report by L. W. Pearsall, head of the agriculture department's livestock marketing service, said heavy demand for beef in the United States and the prospects of lower U.S. tariffs on beef would tend to keep prices up.

But when the Anglo-Canadian bacon contract expires at the end of the year, pork prices might dip.

Mr. Pearsall's report was presented to the Ontario poultry and livestock conference here by S. C. Barry of the federal agriculture department's poultry product division.

Miss Pepsi New And Promising Powerboat Entry

Detroit, July 28 — (CP) — Detroit has a new and promising powerboat as candidate for the three-boat United States team which will defend Harmsworth Trophy in September against the challenge of Miss Canada IV from Ingersoll.

Miss Pepsi, a 36-foot boat owned by the Dossi Brothers of Detroit, yesterday became the first boat in history to round a three-mile course at more than 100 miles an hour.

No official timers were on the course, but stopwatches held on Miss Pepsi recorded her at slightly faster than 100 m.p.h. on the three-mile gold cup course on the Detroit River. Previous lap record for the course was set in last Saturday's gold cup race by My Sweetie at 86.200 m.p.h.

Experts estimated Miss Pepsi travelled 140 m.p.h. on the straightaways, and driver Chuck Thompson said "she'll go faster."

Delay Completion Of Barrie Highway

Toronto, July 28 — (CP) — The new Toronto-Barrie express highway will not be completed this year, Highways Department officials said today.

Difficulty in clearing entrances to the 55-mile, four-lane artery has dimmed hopes of starting paving in 1950, but it is hoped the highway will be completed in 1951. Tenders totalling $3,000,000 have been called to complete overhead bridges and cloverleafs.

Korean At a Glance

(By The Associated Press)

Korean Fronts: 90,000 communists open general offensive all along 200-mile front in South Korea. North Koreans launch ferocious attack at centre under artillery cover. U. S. forces, outnumbered four to one, counter-attack to restore positions. Communists attack south Koreans on east coast as Allied naval units shell Yongdok. Communists drive to within 60 miles of Pusan on southwest front.

Air War: Heavy rain and low clouds hamper air operations on front, but low-flying U.S. planes strafe attacking communists. B-29s plaster invaders' supply lines behind front.

Lake Success, N.Y.: Russia announces she will end her six-month boycott of U.N. Security Council Aug. 1, with Soviet delegate assuming presidency of Council. Move seen as foretoken of Soviet vetoes in event of new aggression, renewed pressure to oust nationalist China.

Washington: Army moves to boost manpower to near 800,000 mark before end of year. All enlistments extended 12 months. Tours of duty extended six months in foreign services beginning Aug. 31.

APPROVE AGREEMENT

Toronto, July 28 — (CP) — Members of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers (A.F.L.) today approved terms of an agreement arrived at yesterday by union leaders and the Toronto Builders' Exchange.

The painters will get a 15-cent-an-hour increase for every future five-point rise in the cost of living. They return to work next Monday.

On strike for three days, they had demanded a 20-cent increase. About 1,200 were involved.

Anti-Leopold Mobs Rage Through Streets of Capital

Brussels, Belgium, July 28. (CP)—Mobs of anti-Leopold demonstrators stormed through the streets of Brussels today, attacking street-cars and taxis which still ran in defiance of the general strike order protesting the return of the king. It was the second straight day of violence in the capital.

By mid-afternoon the anti-Leopold action squads had managed to stall most of the 100 street-cars which, operated by pro-Leopold workers, had tried to run the gauntlet.

The Belgian Cabinet was in almost continuous session throughout the day.

There were unconfirmed reports that Max Buset, leader of the Socialist Party which has spearheaded the campaign against the king, has refused a summons to see Leopold at Laeken Palace.

With some 300,000 workers already idle in protest against King Leopold's return to his throne, both the king's supporters and his opponents pulled their battle lines tighter. Tension mounted through the country.

Paul-Henri Spaak, former Socialist premier, called it "the start of a revolution."

Royalist Fatally Injured

An anti-Leopold demonstrator died of injuries suffered last night in a bloody 50-minute fight between police and anti-Leopold partisans who penetrated to within 300 yards of the king's palace at Laeken. The dead man was reported run down by a car he was trying to stop.

Only about 20 of Brussels' 750 street cars were operating today. Protected by rifle-carrying gendarmes and jammed to the doors, they were driven by members of the pro-Leopold Catholic Union, which ignored the strike call of the large socialist-controlled union.

Anti-Leopold strikers lobbed stones and smoke bombs into street cars today. Gendarmes rushed to aid smoke-filled cars floundering outside the stock exchange in the centre of the city.

A crowd before one open store sang the communist internationale and booed member of the staff going to work.

At Brussels last night 2,500 anti-Leopold partisans defied a local order forbidding more than five persons to gather in the streets. They marched on the royal palace, hooting, whistling and calling for the king's abdication.

When police failed to disperse them with a baton charge, 24 motorcycle police rode into the crowd. Several persons were injured.

At Antwerp today 4,000 workers in the major port's ship repair yards joined the country's strike wave. It was expected the city's 12,000 dockers would join them later in the day.

The Brussels-Liege railway was reduced to single track working as a result of further sabotage last night. The Brussels-Charleroi line also was cut by the dynamiting of an electric pylon on the railway.

Army Will Retain Training Base At Brockville

Ottawa, July 28. (CP)—The Army said today it has cancelled negotiations to declare surplus the big training base at Brockville, known to thousands of former Canadian officers who were trained there during the war.

An official said the army had been negotiating with Brockville authorities for disposal of the camp, but the new defence expansion program has changed the picture.

There are no plans at present to station troops there but the camp is being "frozen" so it will be available if needed. The step was taken as an emergency measure related to the new recruiting drive for 3,000 to 4,000 more regular soldiers.

A great number of Canada's wartime army officers were trained at Brockville.

Women Defeat Men In Tug of War

Armstrong, B.C., July 28 — (CP) — Some 2,500 farmers agreed today it was a picnic they had themselves yesterday.

A women's team defeated a men's team in a tug of war.

Johnny Tryella of Armstrong won the ice cream eating championship by devouring 32 double cones.

Louis Wejr, who is 70, won the buttermilk drinking contest. He downed a quart in 24 second flat.

Unwary Speeders Being Nabbed By the Dozens

Toronto, July 28 — (CP) — Speeders are being nabbed "by the dozens" on highways east and west of Toronto, the Ontario Provincial Police said today. Officers in "plainclothes" patrol cars have charged 600 speeders during the last week.

The unmarked patrol cars, with radio antennae on the side rather than on the roof, are patrolling the highways along with the standard black-and-white cruisers.

Nearly 400 persons have been summonsed for driving between 65 and 75 miles an hour on highways 2 and 2-A, east of Toronto. The Port Credit Provincial Police detachment, just west of here, has tagged 175 speeders since Saturday night.

The speed limit is 50 miles an hour on highways, except in built-up areas, where it is usually 30 miles an hour.

MISSING GIRL FOUND

North Bay, July 28 — (CP) — A 13-year-old girl who ran away from her Sturgeon Falls home Wednesday night was returned to her parents late Thursday afternoon.

Yesterday she visited the Provincial Police office in North Bay to "make some enquiries," police said. Her identity was checked and she was held until her parents drove from Sturgeon Falls to take her home.

Colorful Spectacle Will Mark 116th Negro Emancipation Day

Windsor, Ont., July 28—(CP)—Windsor's best-known impresario, a shredded cigar in his teeth and a harried smile on his broad face, is putting the final touches to a whirlwind that hits Windsor annually about this time.

He is Walter Perry, 50, secretary-treasurer of the British American Association of colored brothers. The whirlwind is a three-day celebration of Emancipation Day, which begins tomorrow.

Walter (Windsorites wouldn't know him as "Mr. Perry") says it's "the greatest international freedom show in the world."

No one has yet successfully challenged the statment.

On the surface it's a mixture of watermelons and barbecued spareribs, bathing beauties and baby contests, Jazz music and Negro spirituals, amateur shows and pie-eating contests. All have the stamp of Walter's showmanship.

Behind the show is a more serious purpose: celebration of the 115th anniversary of the freeing of slaves in the British empire. Windsor is chosen for the festival because it was the Canadian end of an underground railway which helped United States slaves reach freedom in Canada before Lincoln proclaimed their emancipation in 1863.

Walter and the Association of Colored Brothers, which sponsors the event, say they expect 180,000 persons to attend the three-day show in Jackson Park.

"To colored people," says Walter, "this is the Canadian National Exhibition, the Mardi Gras, the Atlantic City beauty contest—all rolled into one."

Highlights include a Saturday amateur contest with 150 participants; an eight-hour open air service Sunday; and a bathing beauty contest Monday to choose Miss International Sepia from 27 candidates representing such cities as New Orelans, Miami, Los Angeles, New York, Toronto, London, Ont., and Chatham, Ont.

This Emancipation Day show will be the 18th under Walter's direction.

"Despite its size, it is a one-man show," says an associate. "Walter's the big wheel; he's the kingfish."

To which Walter replies modestly: "I operate."

Freak Accident Brings Death to Onlooker at Fire

Quebec, July 28. (CP)—A freak fire-fighting accident brought death to one person in a crowd of onlookers and serious injuries to two others during an apartment building blaze here last night.

While firemen fought flames in the back porch of a third-storey apartment 20-year-old Andre Gauvin touched a metal clothesline charged with 2,200 volts of electricty by contact with a fire ladder which slipped against a high tension line.

Gauvin was electrocuted. Seventeen-year-old Laurent Letourneau and 52-year-old Henri Letourneau were shocked into unconsciousness when they tried to free Gauvin from the clothesline.

Onlookers finally broke the dead man's grip on the clothesline with the aid of a mop.

CHEMICALS PROTECT GRAIN

Chicago, July 28 — (AP) — Development of two insecticides designed to protect stored grain for a full season with a single application were announced yesterday.

United States Industrial Chemicals Incorporated of New York said the insecticides are mixed with the grain when it is stored and afford protection for as long as 9½ months. It is said six years of tests have shown the insecticides are harmless to humans.

The insecticides are produced under the trade names of "pyrenone wheat protectant" for wheat and "pyrenone grain protectant" for other grains.

PRACTICE OF CONSERVATION

Conservation of our natural resources is an old theme. Old as it is however, it remains important, and it is gratifying to see that some people have enough interest in our wild life to practise conservation without being pushed into it by authorities.

In South Frontenac county, anglers havev adopted a motto which fishermen all over Ontario might well heed. It is "return the big ones to the water for natural restocking purposes, and retain only a sufficient number of smaller fish for immediate needs." This is a far cry from the anglers who insist on taking more than their quotas and visitors who feel they have the right to fish in Canadian waters without the benefit of a licence.

This policy of leaving something for the other fellow and attempting to aid the Department of Lands and Forests by voluntary restocking of lakes has been followed for some time by an organization near Battersea. Only a decade ago, large mouth black bass were scarce in Loughborough Lake. Under the direction of the Battersea Guides Association, the above program has been followed, and the bass population is beginning to show an increase.

These men are to be commended for such action. They are setting an example that the rest of the province might well follow.

NO NEED FOR HOARDING

Hoarding of goods, a hangover from the war, is making an appearance once again. There is no need for the stocking of foods and materials that some individuals are scared into doing, yet it goes on.

The basic danger of hoarding is that such action may create an artificial shortage of goods. Foods, automobile tires and other materials hard to get or rationed during wartime soon are in short supply, and panic follows. Attendant to the panic in a short time can be a real shortage, as more and more people stock up.

Various reports have come in that people in different areas are buying more than they need for immediate uses. Sugar has been mentioned as one commodity that housewives as well as others have been purchasing in greater quantities.

Hoarding is merely the expression of selfishness on the part of some people. For everyone's good, panic buying should be curbed as much as possible, lest real shortages overtake us.

HISTORIC SMITHFIELD MARKET

The latest of Britain's landmarks to be threatened is Smithfield Market in London. Recurrent strikes among the porters and truck drivers at the huge central meat market there — which supplies the whole metrolopis — have caused so much trouble that the Government is considering abolishing Smithfield, and replacing it with a system of decentralized distributing centres.

If this idea is actually carried out, it will mark the end of one of the oldest centres of commerce in the Western world, notes The Edmonton Journal. The present-day meat market itself — a sort of super butcher shop — is comparatively recent, dating only from 1868. But for many centuries before that Smithfield was the scene of the most important market for live cattle, sheep and horses in the kingdom. Fairs were also held here in the Middle Ages, including the Bartholomew Fair, which went back at least to 1120. When the market was not otherwise needed, it was the scene of jousts and tournaments.

As a place of public resort, Smithfield was frequently used by the authorities for important executions, so that as many Londoners as possible might see and take warning. The Scottish hero William Wallace was hanged, drawn and quartered here by order of Edward 1. During the religious conflicts of the 16th Century, Smithfield saw a number of leading churchmen — including an Archbishop of Canterbury — burned at the stake. It was in Smithfield, too, that the great Peasants' Revolt of 1381 reached its climax, when the Lord Mayor of London slew the rebel leader, Wat Tyler, with his own hand. The duties of a mayor were more strenuous in those days than they are now!

Smithfield has happier memories, too, as the scene of the world's first agricultural exhibition, which was started in the 18th century to demonstrate the results of improved methods of feeding and sheltering cattle, which were then coming into use. The effect of these shows on farming practice, not only in England but all over the world, was literally revolutionary.

In this world it is not what we take up but what we give up, that makes us rich. — Beecher.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

July 28th., 1930.

The Federal elections are being held today and electors throng to the polls to roll up a high record vote.

The Ontario Intelligencer will flash the election results this evening on a screen on the city hall building as soon as received over the wire from the Canadian Press.

The Argyle Light Infantry Band will be ready for the return of the Old Boys and Girls next week and will appear in brand new uniforms, the predominating colors of which are blue and grey with smart gold buttons.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Clow, Howard Street, have left to spend a vacation motoring to numerous places of interest.

Miss Mary Hurley is visiting friends in Westport.

Mr. J. Wilcox of this city is spending a few days in Woodstock.

Miss Margaret Meagher is visiting friends and relatives in Detroit, Mich.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miles and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Grant have left on a motor car trip through Eastern Ontario and Quebec.

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Black have returned from a motor car trip to Montreal and Quebec.

Miss Betty Corrigan is spending her vacation with friends in Cobourg.

Mr. Henry Alford, age 85 years, who resides on North Front St., was the first to cast a vote in Coleman Ward in the Federal elections today.

30 YEARS AGO

July 28th., 1920.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Terrill and little daughter Dorothy, of Lethbridge, are visiting Mrs. Terrill's mother, Mrs. Sutherland, corner of Albert Street and Victoria Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Consaul Toronto, are the guests of Mr. Phil Harrison, Lewis Street.

Mr. Harry Fitzpatrick of Rochester, N.Y., is visiting his brother, Mr. Frank Fitzpatrick Church Street.

Mr. William H. Carr and Miss Ruth E. Carr of Rochester, N.Y. are visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Lazier in this city.

The employees of the Greenleaf Company had an enjoyable picnic yesterday.

40 YEARS AGO

July 28th., 1910.

Mr. W. W. Bourne of Quincey, Ill., is visiting relatives in the city.

Mr. George A. Dame and wife of Rochester, N.Y., were here for the Old Boys' Reunion.

Mr. F. D. Butterfield of Toronto was home for the Old Boys' Reunion.

Mrs. Frank Flynn of New York City, formerly of Belleville, is visiting friends here.

Mr. J. W. Beckett of Winnipeg was here for the Reunion.

Mr. Charles Hambly and Mr. Warren Hambly of Philadelphia, Pa., son of Col. P. H. Hambly, were home for the Old Boys' Reunion.

Mr. W. P. (Billy) Dempsey, Detroit, an old Belleville boy, was here for the big celebration.

50 YEARS AGO

July 28th., 1900.

Mr. R. Mathison, superintendent of the D. and D. Institute, has left on a trip to Winnipeg.

Mr. and Mrs. Purdy of Rochester, N.Y., are visiting the former's father, Mr. T. H. B. Purdy, Avondale, Trent Rd.

Mr. William Ford is home from McGill University, Montreal, to spend the summer vacation.

In a baseball match between the Boiler Makers and the Printers, which was played on the hospital lot, the former team won the score being 35 to 5. The Printers made only one mistake and that was in letting the Boiler Makers get so far ahead of them. There was a big crowd of spectators and a good time was had. The following composed the teams: Boiler Makers: Draycott, Hunter, Quincey, Turner, Henthorn, Lowe, Conway, Baker and Hagerman. Printers: Davis, Dulmage, Stevenson, Hyde, MacDiarmid, Leonard, Hamm, Powell and French. The umpire was C. Thompson.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The law requiring all engined and sailing craft to carry lights after dark is a federal law tied in to international agreement. But all over Canada, in practically every summer resort, the law is more observed in the breach than the observance. Outboard motor-skiffs hum lightless over the water in the night, and many launches and speed boats of larger and more dangerous weight are guilty of this offence. Every year, there are accidents and fatalities due to this cheerful defiance of law.

When a battery runs down, it is not always easy, in resorts distant from towns, to get a fresh one. Once the members of the family use the boat without lights it easily becomes a habit.

So efficient and handy have the outboards become that the rowboat and canoe are falling into disuse around summer homes. But literally, there is no safer craft in which to make the usual short trips by night around summer resorts than a rowboat or a canoe because in them, unlike in outboard and other engined boats, you can hear the approach of other craft whether they are lighted or not. And you can easily move out of their way.

The federal authorities are stiffening up the regulations regarding the licensing of small craft, and one effect of this will be that small boat owners will be reading the regulations more attentively than in the past. But there is need of a committee of cottagers in most summer resorts where there is no township authority, with power, even locally supported, to attend to the matter of lights on boats.

In the meantime, if it is a short journey you have to make over water at night, use the rowboat or canoe. If you are hit, you will at least know what hit you.

LIVELY PACKAGES

Chicago, July 27 — (AP) — Mrs David B. Rosenbaum yesterday decided to get rid of two footlockers left in her attic by a relative after the Second World War. She turned them over to the Salvation Army unopened.

There was plenty of excitement at Salvation Army headquarters when the lockers were found to contain a land mine, two hand grenades and several detonating caps.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

THE LITTLE STREETS

Regina, Sask.—I want to tell you a story about a 35-year-old Englishman, his American wife and their 4-months-old baby boy and I hope you will feel as good inside about it as I do.

The Englishman's name is Ronald Street and he and his family are living in the smallest cottage of the Regina Auto Camp where we have parked our trailer.

If you could pretend that you were looking through the wrong end of a telescope, you would describe Ronnie as a surprisingly youthful-looking man despite his mid-thirties paunch, with a suave, yet pleasant manner and, above all else, the proudest darn father in the world.

But, without telescope, you might at first notice none of these things. You would be aware only that Mr. Street is just over three-and-a-half feet tall.

Ronnie and his 26-year-old wife, Lela Mae, who is two inches shorter than her husband and looks up to him as a good wife should, are midgets, or Lilliputians. Which means that they are perfectly formed and proportioned folks who just happened to come in the small, or trial package size.

We became friends by accident at the camp's water tap. I was waiting there with my bucket behind what appeared to be a well-fed 10-year-old in a precocious blue suit when the "boy" turned, revealing a large cigar in his mouth, smiled and said in a Philip Morris voice, "Deuced hot weather, isn't it?"

He laughed at my double take and I laughed gratefully and we got to talking.

Baron's Idea

It turned out that Mr. and Mrs. Street are in Regina to join up with a lovely 19-year-old redheaded Regina girl named Ann Hubick, who is even littler than they.

"A very talented young lady," Mr. Street stated in a tiny baritone. "We met while doing a show here two years ago and now Miss Hubick is to join us in some work in the United States.

Mr. Street, known professionally in the show world as "The Cheeky Little Chappie," crossed the Atlantic (two to a berth) some ten years ago as a comedian with the Royal English Midget Circus, subsequently met Lela Mae and married her in 1948.

I asked if he would tell me something of what it is like to be doll-size. Ronnie gave a few thoughtful puffs on the cigar.

"The most difficult part, of course, is that many people insist on treating you as a child," he said. "I suppose we are somewhat on the defensive against this in our desire to be accepted as adults.

You'll notice I drive a new Ford. Bought it and had it fixed up with extension pedals rather than a small English car because I can't stand anything that smacks of being cute.

"Y'see, we all have full-sized homes, full-sized beds and bathtubs, live our personal lives just exactly ar anyone else. The only difference is that we can't earn a decent living unless we're in show business.

"A midget friend of mine was a riveter during the war. They used him for crawling into parts of airplane frames where a larger man couldn't go. But he was an exception. Another was Aesop, who wrote the fables. Bet you didn't know he was a midget, did you?

"But, y'see, most of us must go on display. There are something like 2000 of us in America and Europe and nearly all of us are show people.

"For that we have the daughter of one, Baron Leopold von Singer, to thank," Ronnie went on. "You've doubtless heard of Singer's Midgets, but very few people know how they began.

"The Baron was a very wealthy Austrian whose daughter had infantile paralysis. It was his practise to read to the little girl and one night he read her Gulliver's Travels. Well, the little girl said, 'The one thing I want most is to see a real, live Lilliputian.' And so Baron Singer hired some midgets to stroll about his gardens, hit on the idea of forming a troupe to amuse other children and that was that. Rather charming story, isn't it?"

And Danny

Mr. Street got up, hoisted his pail with an effort and suggested I come along to his cabin to meet his wife. "I would also like you to meet somebody very, very special," he said with a mysterious smile.

Mrs. Street turned out to be a dainty little lady wearing a dark blue dress and sport shoes (made by the designer for a 10-year-old girl) and the somebody special was a plump, blue-eyed baby very busy at work on a bottle.

"Danny Lee," Mr. Street said as if in introduction. "Born April 12 in Indianapolis and our pride and joy."

The two little parents stood looking down at their son with wonder and delight and it occurred to me that here were two people elected by fate to be freaks, to be stared at and laughed at because they are "different" and who now, through this small bundle, had risen above all that.

The baby is normal (no midget has ever given birth to a midget) and Ronnie explained that although one famous Lilliputian, Mrs. Judith Skinner, less than three feet tall, has had 14 children, it is an extremely hazardous gamble. The baby weighed six-and-a-half pounds and was delivered by Caesarean.

"I sat outside the room and prayed," the Cheeky Little Chappie said, "and my prayers were answered."

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

CHARACTER CAPACITY

I am not so concerned about what I see and hear as to my friend. What I want to know is his capacity—for patience, courage, integrity, long suffering, love, and understanding. These are inherent things that have to be sensed and silently realized. A friend characterized by these simple, prime qualities needs no words of explanation, nor indeed any preface to their lives.

It's character capacity that counts above everything else with one whom we would love and go the route of friendship. We have to sense the faith of another. And what a number of our friends do we thus select and hold fast to! With faith shattered however there is left an irretrievable friend.

How important it is that we sense this character capacity early, and put our trust within it! It's like discovering a gold mine, or a field of fragrant flowers in full bloom. The evidence is there. No explanation is necessary. There is magic understanding. When you meet this you know you have a friend for a lifetime.

This character capacity is something that you feel, like the intoxication of rare beauty, or some rare surprise. It's love at first sight, and no questions asked. It's meeting your kin and kind. You are supplements of each other, a unit—a whole. You know that the capacity is in reserve and can be used if the emergency calls.

Character capacity is something that many a banker has taken as security, when a material one might be refused. To have faith in another is to plant something vital of yourself within the consciousness of that one. No words though, nothing written down—just silent understanding. After all, what you are speaks.

Every face is a language, and its capacity for expression is a secret one, revealed only in an atmosphere of trust and confidence. In a unified world who can guess the upsurge of hope, character capacity, and the will for usefulness and interchangeable happiness?

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

SPIRITUAL DESTITUTION

A generation ago Woodrow Wilson declared that we are spiritually in the midst of material prosperity.

If that were true then, how much more is it true today? For one thing, we have a great deal more material prosperity than we had thirty years ago. But what many of us do not realize is that two world wars have just as effectually wrecked the moral standards of the world as it has wrecked cities, economic systems, and forms of government. Europe, after her terrible war experiences, is discouraged, worn out, and lacking in moral enthusiasm. Asia is in a chaotic moral state. In this country we are fast getting to a place where we are not exactly sure whether there is any real distinction between right and wrong. We pretend to believe that right and wrong are relative matters depending upon circumstances and capable of various applications in the case of different people.

All this is morally ruinous. Right and wrong, with a great differentiation between them, are imbedded in the structure of the universe. We need to be deeply concerned over the fact that we are in grave danger of becoming spiritually destitute in the midst of material prosperity.

PLEASE PASS THE HONEY WITHOUT HOKUM

Food merchant tells me that I err when I mention honey in the same category as ordinary sugar and starch as foods which must be restricted in the diet of one with diabetes. The food merchant says he has had much experience in furnishing honey to diabetics. In every instance there has been marked improvement, he declares and "those diabetics who had will enough to eliminate sugar entirely from their diet have shown remarkable improvement and many of them have been able to do without insulin entirely."

The latter part of the merchant's statement is reasonable enough, as I read it. However, from the context infer that the merchant didn't mean what he said. If sugar is excluded from the diet of course that would mean no honey. Honey is composed of a mixture of sugars, chiefly dextrose (otherwise called glucose, dextro-glucose, grape sugar), which is naturally present in many plants or may be manufactured from starch by the action of heat and acids; levulose (otherwise called fructose or fruit sugar), naturally present in sweet fruits; and sucrose (otherwise called saccharose or cane sugar.) So far as we know, any one of these sugars is as good or bad in the diet of a diabetic as any other form or kind of sugar or starch.

> The food vendor continues: "Honey, being pre-digested, has no effect on the heart beat, but sugar forces the heart to work until the sugar is digested, and I have felt that sugar is the cause of much Heart Failures."

Again in anguish I cry: "Why don't people tell me these things?" Here I've been basing my beliefs and teachings on the authoritative textbooks of physiology, chemistry, nutrition, dietetics, etc., yet all along this food merchant has "felt" that way.

> But pray let the merchant:—proceed with his lecture:—"Honey is a Natural Energy food has so many beneficial qualities that I feel that it should be given its proper place in the Diet with honey in the stomach and in the Intestines many cases of so called distress are eliminated."

How was that again? First honey (a mixture of sugars) has no effect on the heartbeat, yet sugar forces the heart to beat or work, and so you believe sugar causes heart failure. Moreover you believe honey yields natural energy (there is no other kind of energy known to science, unless you feel some unique kind that the scientists have overlooked), and we can agree about that. The energy one gets from honey is identical with the energy one gets from any of the sugars that compose it. And if we c now lay all the hokum aside we may fairly conclude that honey is preferable to any or all of the sugars that compose it only if one likes the taste of it better than plain sugar, syrup etc.

Fifty years ago the hokum about honey may have been permissible. Neither the doctors nor the laity knew enough about chemistry, physiology and nutrition to weigh the matter. Today such vagaries as this well meaning food merchant utters are absurd. It is high time the credulous customers be enlightened. There is no better food than honey for child or adult, but it has no superiority over the sugars that compose it, save that of flavor if you happen to prefer the flavor of honey to that of sugar or syrup.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Egg White Has Food Value

Is there any real food value in egg white cooked or raw? Friend says his doctor told him it just goes through the body doing n good. (L. J.)

Answer—Your friend's doctor knows best what the patient can take with advantage. For well people of course egg white has food value. Egg white is more easily and more completely digested when cooked as you like it, than when taken raw. Send twenty-five cents and stamped self-addressed envelope for the red book—What to Eat and Why.

Stranger in the House

A child of five has wet the bed since his birth. Doctor said removal of his tonsils would stop it, but we had his tonsils out a year ago and he has been even worse since. (Mrs. T. S.)

Answer—It augurs ill for the little boy that he is a stranger in the house. However, send stamped self-addressed envelope and ask in writing for the pamphlet The Bed Wetting Habit. No clipping, please, and if you fail to mention your relationship to the little boy you will receive no reply. No trustworthy doctor can promise or say that removal of tonsils will cure bed-wetting.

CLEARED BY INQUEST JURY

Kirkland Lake, July 28 (CP)—Constable Thomas Whittle, 34, of the Teck township police was cleared last night by a coroner's jury of blame in the death of William Bosak, 22, of Noranda, Que.

Bosak died Tuesday after being struck by a bullet fired by Constable Whittle in a chase. Bosak escaped after being arrested for alleged indecent exposure. The bullet entered his brain at an angle from the base of the skull and lodged in his forehead. The policeman said the man tripped and fell just as he shot at his leg.

Sewage Survey Report Recommends $726,950 Improvement Program

Trenton (Special) — A sewage disposal plant, three pumping stations and sanitary and storm sewer installations costing an estimated total of $726,950 are recommended in a "Report on Sewers and/Sewerage Treatment" prepared by a firm of Toronto engineering consultants, who were engaged by council last December to conduct a survey of Trenton sewerage facilities. The completed report was received this week.

The sanitary sewerage system recommended in the report would cost an estimated $536,050. The sewage treatment plant would cost $310,000. The report states that this plant would provide complete treatment of sewerage for a town having a population of 12,000.

Three Pumping Stations

The three pumping stations would be located at the end of Bentinck Street, at the south end of Dufferin Avenue and another pumping station complete with pumps, piping and controls on Ontario Street, south of Dundas Street. The three pumping stations would cost a total of $85,300. The storm sewer installations recommended in the report would cost $190,900.

Warning that the sanitary problem is such that in order to achieve satisfactory results, it is necessary to construct the whole system at the same time, the report goes on to say "the waters of the river and bay will be relieved of pollution by sewage wastes and improved in appearance. The danger to health when the water is used for recreation or water supply will also be eliminated."

Details of Plans

The report also recommends that "throughout most of the town, sanitary and storm sewers should be separated. Unlike sanitary sewers, storm sewers are more or less unrelated to each other in many cases, so they can be constructed as the need arises."

Detailed plans of existing sewage facilities and the recommended improvements are outlined in the plans which accompany the report. Pending the arrival of the report, council has been reluctant to make any new sewage installations, in order that all new installations would fit into the overall plan.

Council intends to carry out the recommendations contained in the report, as a long term development program which will spread the total expenditure over a period of years. The report estimates that the entire program would raise the tax rate 7.2 mills. This estimate is based on the 1950 assessment of $7,733,000.

Annual costs of the system when the entire plan is in operation are placed at $55,681.30 "assuming that the work is financed by issuing 20 year debentures bearing interest at the rate of three and one half percent."

Adoption of Recommendations Urged

The report concludes with these observations. "After a careful study of town conditions and existing storm and sanitary sewage systems, we are quite convinced that it would be in the best interests of the town to proceed as soon as possible with the improvement of the sanitary system, including treatment and discharge of the treated residue into the Bay of Quinte.

We believe the town is in a position to carry the financial burden and ultimately, the benefits will justify the expenditures for the improved system. Until the sanitary system is put in good shape, we do not recommend construction of an extensive program of storm sewers, but only those necessary to relieve the sanitary system of excessive storm water."

Cats Cause Civic Confusion Who Should Bury Dead Ones?

Trenton (Special) — When cats are killed on Trenton streets, whose job it is to remove them? This question has cropped up twice this week and each time it has broken the usual calm and harmony that exists between the different municipal departments.

While the police and public works departments were tossing the cat question back and forth between Monday night and Tuesday morning, the fur started to fly but not the cats.

Mayor Couch asked the police to remove a dead cat from Dundas Street West at 7.30 p.m. Monday night. Tuesday morning when he came to work at 9.30 there was the cat still stretched out on the highway.

Mayor Buries Feline

Without any further effort to untangle interdepartmental red tape,. Mayor Couch whipped off his coat, borrowed a shovel from a nearby workman who was fixing the sidewalk and proceeded to give the deceased feline a decent burial while a photographer popped a flashbulb to record the event.

The cement had hardly hardened over the unfortunate pussy's grave (a new sidewalk was being laid where the mayor buried the cat) when Thursday afternoon the cat problem arose again.

Wednesday, a policeman patrolling in the cruiser saw a dead cat on Dundas Street. Some men were cleaning the streets right beside the cat and the constable naturally assumed they would pick it up. However, the cat was still there Thursday afternoon and the municipal merry-go-round started all over again.

Town Engineer R. E. Davey said he could not understand why his men had failed to look after the matter and instructed them to do so. Mayor Couch said that Trenton was too small a town for each department to operate in air tight compartments but he added, "We are definitely going to define these jobs and see they are looked after."

Thursday morning, the mayor had stated in an interview that there was a general lackadaisical attitude throughout the town and he said, "I will break either it or it will break me. It's the same all across the board," said Mayor Couch in referring to the confusion which exists over responsibility for certain things which are on the border line between different departments.

Everyone concerned has indicated that they hope this will be the tail end of the dead cat problem.

Stewart-Warner Downs Brewers By 6-5 Score

Brewers Warehouse had their laurels as front runners in the Commercial Softball League A section withered last evening as Stewart Warner singed them with a scalding 6-5 reverse. The win, the Alemite's second of the current campaign knocked out Brewers out of first place in the league standings.

The hard running Alemites, who have been bridesmaids in three one run ball games so far this season became brides last evening with a superlative display of offensive and defensive softball. The planters shone particularly on defence with Harold Lundberg's glittering performance in centrefield leading the list. His two great throws to the plate nipped two almost certain runs that would have been enough to give Brewers the win.

Brewers opened the scoring in the second inning on a single by Henn, a double by Harold Wannamaker and a popout to short right field.

Alemite came up with two runs in the top of the third with a single by Bertrim, a double by Claude Carr, and errors to the third baseman and shortstop.

Tie Score in Third

Brewers tied the score with a single run in a wild third frame. Nolan led off with a single and went to third as Hurrie doubled to left field. The throw to third had Nolan beaten and Alemite were highly incensed when he was called safe. Harold Reid then hit to third base. Vern Carr faked a throw to first and then tagged Nolan who broke for the plate with the arm. Hurrie and Reid advanced on passed balls with Hurrie scoring on an overthrow. Leo Goyer then drilled a long fly into centrefield which Lundberg relayed to the plate to nip Reid who was sliding in.

Alemite added a single run in the fourth on a double by Bob Blaind and singles by Marty Halloran and Vern Carr. A triple by Halloran and a double by Vern Carr netted them a lone marker in the sixth and they took a four run lead in the seventh pushing over two tallie on singles by Claude Carr and Roy McMillan and doubles by Moon and Booth.

Brewers struck back in the seventh for one run as brilliant Alemite defence choked a threatened rally. Rex Young opened with a triple and Jim Barriage popped out to first in an attempted squeeze play. Nolan then grounded to the second base man who fired in to the plate instead of taking the sure out at first. Moon whipped the ball to third to Vern Carr who tagged Rex Young as he scrambled back to the bag. Nolan then went to second as Young was tagged. John Hurrie then singled to score Nolan and Reid grounded out second to first to retire the side.

In the eighth a walk to Leo Goyer, a single by Don Locke and a triple by Herb Henn netted the Brewers two runs with no one out. Wannamaker then pounded one to centrefield which looked like a sure thing to plate Henn with the tying run, but a marvelous throw by Lundberg caught Henn as he came in head first. Young flied out to centrefield to end the inning.

Brewers went down in order in the ninth as a jubilant Alemite team took their most satisfying game of the season.

Marty Halloran went all the way on the hill for Alemite walking one, striking out four, and giving up 13 hits for five runs. Rex Young was nicked for his first loss of the season as he walked three, struck out seven, and gave up a dozen hits for six runs.

Line Up:

Stewart Warner: Bertrim ss; V. Carr 3b; Lundberg cf; C. Carr 2b; J. Moon c; G. Booth 1b; Blaind lf; McMillan rf; Halloran p.

Brewers Warehouse: Barriage lf; Nolan ss; Hurrie rf; H. Reid 3b; Goyer c; Locke 1b; Henn 2b; Wannamaker cf Rex Young p.

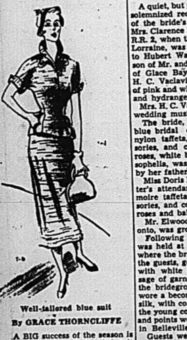
Successful Shantung



Well-tailored blue suit

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

A BIG success of the season is the well-cut, well-handled suit of silk shantung, an indispensable wardrobe companion. Navy blue marks this one, all spiced up with navy velvet as the scalloped pocket trim and for the buttons. The small round collar is worn carelessly open above the two buttoned-down tabs. The jacket top has half-sleeves and is lined in light-weight silk The skirt is slim and straight.

Summer Evening Suit

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THREE pieces and three fabrics combine to make this pastel late day or after-dark costume for evenings in town, at sea, or in the country.

Brief jacket and skirt are of a linen-like weave of rayon and cotton yarns; the scooped neck blouse is lace, and the broad girdle with sash ends is satin. All the fabrics behave well as to packing, or exposure to dewy evening air, and one can have the ensemble in mist gray with pale pink, or in beige with pale blue lace and satin.

WEDDINGS

MACLEOD—RUTTER

Picton—A wedding of more than usual interest was solemnized in the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, on the afternoon of Wednesday, July 26, with Rev. H. C. Secker, of Adolphustown, as the officiating clergyman, when Joan Elizabeth Rutter, became the bride of Lieut. Roderick John MacLeod. Floral decorations were all in white, with gladioli on the high altar and baskets of hydrangea on the rood screen.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Rutter, of Picton, and the groom is the son of Mr. Murdo MacLead, of Vancouver, B.C.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride entered the church to the strains of traditional wedding music played by Mr. Frank Bronskill, church organist. She was attractively gowned in white shadow lace over slipper satin, the lace fashioning the fitted bodice and long tightly-fitting sleeves. A portrait neckline was accented with a softly draped bertha, while lace was used in the deep peplum curving over the hipline of the bouffant skirt, which swept into a short train. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion fell in graceful folds from a Juliet cap of lace, and she carried a white orchid a-top a white Prayer Book.

Miss Barbara Rutter was maid of honor for her sister, wearing a ballerina gown of peach nylon marquisette over matching taffeta, with inserts of organdy flowers in the short sleeves and the full floor length skirt. Matching shortie gloves and headdress completed the attractive ensemble.

The bridesmaid was Mrs. Fred Welsh, in a gown of sea green nylon marquisette, fashioned similarly to that of the maid of honor, with matching accessories. The bouquets of both attendants were fan-shaped and formed of peach and white gladioli petals.

Petite Charlane Crewe was a chic flower girl, wearing a frock of pale yellow organdy, with head bandeau of white and yellow roses to match the flowers in the nosegay she carried. She wore white gloves and shoes.

Mr. Fred Welsh, of Picton, was groomsman, and the ushers were Lieut. A. J. Lawrence and Capt. J. D. Mackintosh.

As the bridal party left the vestibule of the church a guard of honor was formed by the following fellow officers of the groom: Capt. F. J. Pendergast, Capt. W. P. Newton, Capt. C. A. VanAllen, Capt. R. B. Mallory, Lieut. F. E. McLean, Lieut. J. E. G. de Domenico.

At a reception held in Rickarton Castle Hotel, following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Rutter received with the bridal party. Mrs. Rutter wore a becoming gown of navy tissue faille, with lace trim and side panels, a matching navy picture hat, and shoes, with white gloves. Her corsage was of white and pink roses.

Assisting in serving the guests were, Mrs. Frank Trebell, and the Misses Gretta Arkett, Betty Pickering, Shirley Pickering and Violet Anglin.

For travelling, the bride chose a sleeveless dress of printed pink and white silk against a grey background, a small white hat and white accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations.

After their return, Mr. and Mrs. MacLeod will take up residence on Washburn Street, in Picton.

WARREN—DUNHAM

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized recently at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dunham, of Harold, R.R. 2, when their daughter, June Lorraine, was united in marriage to Hubert Warren, of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Warren, of Glace Bay N.S., by the Rev. H. C. Vaclavik, beneath an arch of pink and white streamers, ferns and hydrangea.

Mrs. H. C. Vaclavik provided the wedding music.

The bride, lovely in her pale blue bridal dress of lace over nylon taffeta, with white accessories, and corsage of Rapture roses, white bellflowers and gypsophelia, was given in marriage by her father.

Miss Doris Dunham was her sister's attendant, gowned in pink, moire taffeta, with white accessories, and corsage of Sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Mr. Elwood MacDonald, of Toronto, was groomsman.

Following the reception, which was held at the bride's home, where the bride's mother received the guests, gowned in navy faille, with white accessories and corsage of garnet roses, assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who wore a becoming gown of figured silk, with corsage of garnet roses, the young couple left for Toronto, and points west. They will reside in Belleville upon their return.

Guests were present from Toronto, Glace Bay, N.S., Belleville, and Stirling.

RYAN—PAGE

In Bridge Street United Church, amid a setting of ferns, white hydrangea and Regal lilies, Mary Gwendolyn Page, daughter of Inspector and Mrs. A. Page, was united in marriage to Dorland Ryan, of Clarksville, Tenn. The Rev. D. C. Amos officiated.

The lovely bride was gowned in ivory slipper satin with pearl embroidered bodice. The full skirt fell gracefully into a long train. Her fingertip veil was held by a pearl tiara and she carried a bouquet of Regal lilies and stephanotis.

Her attendants were, Mrs. R. Gunter, Gerry Page, Peggy Sommers and little Linda Ross, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ross. All were gowned in dresses similarly designed of satin in harmonizing shades of blue, rose and gold, and carried floral bouquets matching their gowns.

The bridegroom was attended by Mr. William Page, and the ushers were, Mr. Kenneth Hill, Mr. Murray Page and Mr. Lincoln Keller. All wore blue jackets, and cream flannel trousers.

A dinner and reception at the Quinte Hotel followed the ceremony. Afterwards the guests were entertained at the bride's home, where Dr. P. Ireland, uncle of the bride, acted as toastmaster.

For travelling, the bride chose navy Chantilly lace, with matching hat, white accessories and an orchid corsage. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Ryan will reside in Tennessee, U.S.A.

HEARD—BENWAY

Christ Church was the scene on Friday, July 21, at 7:30 p.m., of a pretty, but quiet wedding when the Rev. Canon J. Grant Sparling united in marriage Greta Mae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Benway, of Wellington, to Arthur, son of Mr. William Heard and the late Mrs. Heard, of Belleville.

The bride was radiant in a powder blue sheer dress with white hat and accessories. She wore a corsage of pink roses.

Mrs. Joe Beer, sister of the bride, was her attendant wearing a pink sheer dress, white hat and accessories and a corsage of cream roses.

Mr. Derek Heard, brother of the groom, was best man.

The happy couple left for Toronto and will reside in Belleville on their return.

MARMORA

Vacation School Concludes Work

Marmora—Vacation School at St. Andrew's concluded its sessions on Thursday morning with a demonstration of work and program. During the ten days of the school, which was directed by Rev. G. D. Young, the children were trained in music by Miss Hilda Henderson of Deloro, handicraft work was directed by Anne Barlow, Jean Nash, Lois Bedore and Graeme Leonard, Bob Prentice and Marjorie Wells also assisted in leadership.

For the Bible Study period, colored film strips on the life of Joseph were shown.

Games were played out doors each morning. The morning program concluded with a period of workshop, following the theme "God's plan for happy homes." Over 60 children registered with the average daily attendance being 35.

Club Meets

The Happy Homemaker's club held its fourth meeting on Wednesday evening at the home of Miss Joan Shannon with all members present, leaders took charge. Plans were made for working in a booth at the regatta on July 29. It was decided to unite with the Garden Club for a wiener roast at Glen Allan Park on July 27. Judging of school lunches took place before the meeting closed. The next meeting is to be at the home of Betty Moffatt on August 7.

The hostess served refreshments.

Calf Club Meets

The monthly meeting of Marmora Calf Club was held in the town hall on Wednesday evening. The president, John Cook presided. A quiz contest was held with all the members answering questions. Two films "Safety on the Farm" and "Early Start" were shown.

Frank Stone, assistant agricultural representative of Hastings county gave an address. Reeve Irwin McCoy, Calf Club leader was present for the meeting.

Game Not Played

Sporting their new maroon colored uniforms, manager George Brook's Trent Valley Baseball team strutted out on the Deloro grounds on Thursday evening for their scheduled home game with Havelock. Disappointment was felt as the news was received just before seven p.m. that Havelock was unable to field a team. The Marmora boys consequently indulged in practice.

Winsome Starlet Abandons Films for Church Work

Paris, July 26—Beauteous starlet Colleen Townsend, who turned her back on Hollywood for a religious career, is spending the summer trying to ease the life of refugee students.

"We're on K.P." she said with a pert smile. "We have to get up at five o'clock to fix breakfast for camp. After we get through in the kitchen we go out and scrape bricks for the new chapel and barracks."

The "we" refers to Colleen and pretty Francis Kent of Glendale, Calif., a Glendale schoolteacher and a long time friend.

The camp in suburban Sevres is run by "Cimade," an organization supported by the World Council of Churches. Most of the Cimade's work is concerned with refugees, the majority from iron curtain countries. The refugee students live in the camp while going to school.

Member of Summer Team

Some of the students are there now in the vacation period, in addition to Cimade helpers who have come to build a chapel and barracks so more students can be accommodated. Colleen is a member of this summer team.

Colleen says most of those at the camp speak English, but when there is any difficulty they resort to "hand language." She plans to stay for five more weeks before returning to America. "Then it's back to school for me, and back to school for Fran, too, only she'll be a teacher and I'll be a student."

Before coming to Paris they visited Rome and Geneva. So far they've come into Paris from Sevres only once. "We want to go back and see everything, Colleen said, "but I don't know when."

No Regrets

Ask this vivacious, blue-eyed brunette if she regrets quitting her $350-a-week job in pictures. Her expression clouds, and she says earnestly:

"Oh, no! If you're sure God is leading you, you don't have to worry about a thing."

Rejecting a future such as most shopgirls yearn for, was no hasty decision. She says, "I prayed over it for a year and a half."

"I'm not against money or fame if it's right for you." she added. "But if it's not in God's will, it's so shallow.

"I loved picture work and Hollywood. My friends are there. But I think Christian work is what God wants for me. Its merely a matter of following his work."

Always Known Church Life

Colleen, whose parents separated when she was small, was "nominally raised in a church—mother's a wonderful Christian." She was a senior at Hollywood High School when Spike Jones gave a war bond show there. The show's manager, a talent agent, got her a Warner Brothers contract. She made four pictures and then was dropped by the studio.

"That made me very happy," Colleen says; "I wanted to go to college." She spent two years at Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah, before her money ran out.

The agent got her a new contract at 20th Century-Fox. She had a small bit in "Scudda Ho, Scudda Hay." In "The Walls of Jericho," she killed a man in self-defence and was defended by lawyers Anne Baxter and Cornel Wilde. "Chicken Every Sunday" gave her a young romantic role opposite Alan Young.

PICTON

Picton—The three family terrace at 127 Main Street owned by Prince Edward Motors is being demolished to make way for a used car lot for the motor firm. The tennants, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Tripp have purchased Mr. Tom Ackerman's home on Burns Ave.; Mrs. Charles Culmer Sr. has moved into a small home built by her daughter-in-law on Washburn St. and Mr. Harold Rand of Milford is building a small home for his mother, Mrs. George Rand, on Queen Street West.

Firemen were called early Friday morning to extinguish a chimney fire at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Culmer, Jr., 10 Washburn St., where damage was caused mostly by smoke.

Miss Sheila Power, of Belleville, and Miss Mary Power, of Ottawa, are guests this week of Mr. and Mrs. William Norman, Barrie, Ont.

Mrs. D. A. Fournia spent the weekend the guest of her brother, Mr. Allan Shannon and family, at Black Creek.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A young couple has lonely evenings

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been married ten months and I am going to have a baby. We live with my mother-in-law, who is very good to me. The problem is that my husband and I are left alone every night because my mother-in-law always goes to church, and my sister-in-law and brother-in-law are never home in the evening. This makes the evenings very boring for us because we have very little money and can't go out every night.

I am wondering if you can suggest something which will help us occupy our minds so we won't be so lonely. I am afraid that if we don't have more fun, my husband will leave me.—M. F. D.

Dear M. F. D.: If your baby is coming soon, of course it isn't quite so easy to get out and have fun. But, even so, there ought to be ways in which you can liven things up for both yourself and your husband. Naturally, even though two people love each other very much, it can get very monotonous if their social life consists exclusively of each other's company.

What you obviously need is more friends who would come to see you and whom you could go to see. Aren't there some other young couples you could invite over to play cards in the evening? It certainly wouldn't cost much to give them some coffee and cake or soft drinks and cookies at the end of the evening. And can't you afford one movie a week? Isn't there some sort of social club at your church that you could join? Many churches have clubs especially for young married couples. If your church has none, why don't you suggest that one be started?

Another thing that would be fine for you to do under your present circumstances is for both you and your husband to start getting interested in a hobby on which you could each work in the evening. There are all sorts of inexpensive hobbies that are fun, and I will be glad to tell you more about them if you would like to write again and send me a stamped addressed envelope, so that I could write you personally.

It certainly is no fun for a man and wife just to sit around at home every evening doing little or nothing. Think over what I have just said and then write me again.

Don't try to run his life

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 18 and the fellow in whom I am interested is 19. Sometimes I think he loves me, and other times I doubt that he does, because he always seems to want to be with the fellows rather than with me. This happens so often that I don't know what to do, but still I don't want to break up with him. —E. L.

Dear E. L.: If you don't want to break up with this chap, it sound to me as though you were going to have to put up with the situation. Trying to interfere with his choice of where he wants to spend his time will get you nowhere, or rather it will get you out of the picture, faster and faster.

Unless you're willing to take him as he is, you might just as well put him out of your mind entirely. He won't take kindly to any attempt on your part to direct his life.

'Morning Sickness' Eased by New Drug

Johannesburg, July 28—(CP)—The Union of South Africa, at the moment, probably has the luckiest mothers-to-be in the world. They are able to obtain a cheap and effective antidote for the "morning sickness" nausea suffered by most women in the first months of pregnancy.

The preparation, called hexadoxin, is at present only manufactured in South Africa, and is taken in tablet form. It has no toxic effects, and a week's course is, in most cases, sufficient to allay all the nausea common to early expectant motherhood.

Results have been "remarkable," according to one doctor. In most cases nausea was instantly relieved. Only a very small percentage of sufferers did not obtain benefit.

Hexadoxin, according to medical experts, is a combination of a sedative and pyridoxine (vitamin B6). Both these substances have been used separately as treatments for "morning sickness," but when combined they have been found to be "synergistic"—each heightening the nausea-curing effect of the other.

Make-up Magic for Blondes

If you're a blonde, says golden-haired Movie Star Janis Carter, be especially careful about make-up. For lipstick she chooses a warm red.

By HELEN FOLLETT

BLONDE pretties feel that their beautifying rituals aren't as easy or as simple as those of their dark-eyed, dark-haired sisters. There is that difficulty with the honey-toned tresses; they have to be washed carefully, watched lest they darken at the roots.

As for make-up, you have to be so stingy with it that you might as well not use it at all. Brunettes can slather it on, get away from it and not look brittle. If the blonde goes the least bit beyond the limit the synthetic aids do not glorify; they make her look tired and older.

Harmony of Color

Between the hair and the complexion there must be harmony of color: otherwise there will be a jarring appearance. Of course, all blondes are not identical in coloring, so it is difficult to lay down strict laws as to the use of glorifying items if the skin is creamy, a light rachelle powder can be used; if it carries a natural blush the powder should be of the new pinky-pink variety in which case cheek rouge may not be called for. Lipstick shouldn't be too vivid.

Warm shades of red, such as fuchsia and cherry are nearly always becoming. If the skin has been caressed by the sun, taken on a golden-tan, rouge and lipstick both can be of orange-red. The purple-reds, the wine shades, the raspberry tones are likely to be too deep.

When rouge is used, it should never be applied much below the cheek bone because it will give the face too much color, create heaviness of features. Apply it on the cheek bone, then up to the temple. Coloring around the eyes will enhance them.

Fresh peas in the shell are becoming few and far between.

In retail markets quick frozen peas have all but eliminated their fresh rivals. Frozen pease have been developed to such a state of near perfection that fresh peas are simply no rivals. The greatest advantage in buying frozen peas is that you don't have to rack your brains deciding whether they're tough or tender, young or old. Their flavor, color and size are almost always uniform month in and month out. Simply choose a brand that you like, and the rest is as easy as pea soup.

Summertime, however, brings fresh peas from local truck farms to city markets. You have the job of shelling them, but the shells can be ground up and used to make a delicious cream of fresh pea soup.

In buying fresh peas be sure the shells are smooth and crisp with a deep green color. Avoid shells that are yellowish or withered. The pods should be full. The peas should be soft enough to crush easily in your fingers.

Use fresh or frozen peas in the Chinese chicken dish, recipe below. The peas must be green, tender and sweet tasting if the dish is to be really superb.

Chinese Chicken with Green Peas—Serves 4.

Cut enough cooked chicken into 1-2 inch cubes to make 2 cups of meat. Any cooked chicken that is tender may be used although boiled chicken is the best.

Shell 1 1-2 pounds of fresh peas or use 1 twelve ounce package of frozen peas.

In a heavy saucepan add water to a depth of 1-2 inch. Add 1-2 teaspoon salt. Bring water to a boil. Add peas. Simmer covered, over a low flame until peas are tender, 5-10 minutes. Add water if necessary to keep peas from scorching. Drain peas.

In a large saucepan place 1 cup celery and 1 cup of Chinese celery, both cut into 1-4 inch thick slices. Add 1 1-2 cups of chicken broth, fresh or canned, and cook covered until vegetables are semi tender, not soft.

Add chicken and cooked peas. Cover with lid and cook only until peas and chicken are hot. Overcooking will toughen peas and cause them to lose color.

Mix to a smooth paste 3 tablespoons cornstarch with 1-4 cup cold water. Gradually add to sauce, stirring well. Cook until liquid is thickened. Add 1 teaspoon soy sauce, 1-2 teaspoon salt or more to taste and 1-8 teaspoon white pepper.

Serve over fluffy white rice.

Do you want a particular recipe, or have you a cooking problem? Write Mario, care this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped, envelope for his reply. —Ed.

GOOD MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

When guests are teetotalers

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Some time ago my husband and I met a very charming and delightful couple, and since then we have met them again several times on various informal occasions, such as tea parties, cocktail parties, and so forth. The last time we met them we asked them if sometime they would come to dine with us at our house, and they said they would be delighted. Now we would like to make the date definite, but before we do, we would like to have you answer a question we have.

We are positive that this couple do not partake of any liquors, not even wine; they always drink a soft drink at a cocktail party. My husband and I drink very little, but we do very much enjoy a cocktail before dinner and wine with our dinner. Now when these new friends of ours come to dine with us, what should we do . . . . serve ourselves wine and provide a soft drink for them, or should we not partake at all?

R. H.

When these charming new friends of yours come alone to dine with you, it is the gracious and considerate way of hospitality for you not to serve any alcoholic beverage either before dinner or during dinner. If you wish to serve a something before dinner, you might serve, in the living room, either tomato juice or a tomato juice cocktail, or fruit juice, with some interesting crackers, heated, or simple canapes, of you wish. And with dinner perhaps a choice of iced tea or coffee or a fruit drink. Later, if perhaps you have a larger party and include this couple, you might, if the other guests aren't teetotalers, serve cocktails before dinner (providing, of course, non-alcoholic drinks for this couple), and wine at dinner.

Informals . . . their form and uses

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Exactly what should be engraved on the outside of an Informal? Is it ever correct to include the address on the card? And if so, where?

2. When using an informal card, is only a brief message written on the inside, or may a real note be written?

3. May an Informal be used in place of a visiting-card?

Vera M.

1. The outside of an Informal is engraved with the person's name (or, if a joint card, with Mr. and Mrs.). . . the formal name, with the title, just as a visiting-card is. Very often the address is engraved in the lower right corner, and generally very convenient it is to have the address on the card.

There is a handsome new fashion today too. . . having the name engraved fairly high up on the card, in a block letter, or Shaded Antique, and the address directly above the name, engraved in Script. Very effective.

2. Either is correct . . . a brief message, or a note may be written in letter-form, with a salutation ("Dear Sallie"), and a complimentary close ("Devotedly,").

3. Many of the uses of Informals are the same as of formal visiting-cards . . . to enclose with flowers and other gifts, for example, and for invitations to parties such as tea-parties, cocktail parties, and so forth . . . but Informals must not be left in place of visiting-cards when making calls. (But since not many formal calls are made today, this does not much matter.) The Informal is simply a convenient substitute for note-paper.

Hope chest is a special present

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for a girl to receive a hope chest from her future fiance before they are engaged, or is this gift given only after the engagement?

M. L. P.

Since the idea of a hope chest is to contain the trousseau of the bride-to-be, it would certainly be "previous" for a man to give such a personal and special present to a girl before they are actually engaged. (There is no such person as a "future fiance" . . . a man either is or isn't a "fiance" whether or not the engagement has been announced.)

BEAUTY

Summer is reducing time

Don't sit down comfortably and accept your over-curves, Mrs. Heavyweight. If, each year, you notice that your frocks are getting snugger and you must get a size larger, you are doing yourself an injustice if you do not delete the fat cells. Insurance companies report that two out of five of the adult population of Uncle Sam's realm are overweight, and that overweight is a menace to the health of the policy holders. Modern diets in general contain too much fat, and fat forms adipose tissue. Take toasted rye bread instead of white bread and butter. Cut out pastries —they are your enemies. Take tea and coffee clear.

The diet should include an adequate amount of carbohydrates —the sugars and starches—because they create energy; but, like fats, nearly all plump women get more than they need.

It is a grave mistake to try to reduce quickly

One of the grave mistakes ommon to reducing is to endeavor to attain the slimmed outline quickly. Reduction should proceed slowly. If you lose two pounds a week you are doing all right. More than that may weaken facial tissues, cause wrinkles, bring on a state of fatigue and nervous strain. The tonnage has been a long time forming; you cannot safely be rid of it in a hurry. Persevere, be patient and stick to a non-fattening diet.

There are plenty of good things to eat, as you will suffer no privations. You can have lean meat, poultry, fish if it is not fat, three or four eggs a week, fruit and fruit juices, clear soups, vegetables that grow above ground, cottage cheese and buttermilk. Cereals, pastries, macaroni, rice, cream soups, butter, sugar, cream must all be cut down to the limit.

Overweight is caused by overeating. You shake your head, say you live on nothing a day? The fact remains that you are taking more calories than you burn up in the day's activities, and these calories are stored away in the form of adipose tissues. You just can't get around the truth! You might try cutting down the usual food intake by one half. The more exercise, of course, the more food can be taken. The mode sedentary the life, the less food.

Exercise contributes to reduction in two ways; it consumes food values that otherwise might be stored up as fat, and it tends to produce harder muscles on which fat will not be so easily deposited in the future. Note how the body has a tendency to accumulate adipose cushions on the little-used abdominal muscles as compared with other portions of the body.

All exercises are good. Swimming, walking, horse-back riding and golf are of particular benefit. Tennis is too strenuous, unless one is young and the heart muscles are strong.

If a gymnasium is available, exercise can be done under the supervision of an instructor.

Fashion Flashes

VERY MUCH to the fore this Winter will be the good fur-lined and fur-trimmed suit. Navy broadcloth make a handsome suit, its boxy jacket, very flared in back, is lined in American broadtail, dyed to tone. The slim skirt has a deep hemline of the fur, too. The tuxedo fur fronts of the jacket convert to a wrap.

HANDSOME for night wear, come Autumn, is a cardigan coat made of white Indian broadtail with a white knit band down the front and the sleeve edge. The cardigan is lined with black chiffon.

A JOY for smart town or country Summer nights are the lovely cotton evening clothes. Gold and black batik print cotton makes a handsome evening dress, draped and slinky, with two string-thin straps holding up its very deep neckline. With it a short flared jacket to match.

IT WON'T be long before early Fall clothes will be in and out of the shops. Black silk crepe makes a slim dress, its deep, flanged horseshoe neckline filled in with a white handkerchief linen vestee with pearl buttons and tiny self tie. Double fronted closing below the vestee, a contour belt and concentrated front fullness are other features.

VERY NEW and good for Autumn is a suit made up of a waist-length topper, antelope on one side, tweed on the other, that is reversible. With it a slim matching skirt of tweed with antelope piping down each side.

A GOOD investment that pays long dividends is a really fine alligator handbag. A big beauty is in a rich golden honey shade, with pale beige leather lining and gold piping. It is shirred, but with the shirring stemming from the bottom rather than from the top. The wide top handle is suspended from long gilt metal hangers and the wide tab fastening is edged in gold metal.

Sunday School Lesson of the Week

Begin Where You Are

By ROY L. SMITH

It is said of the late Henry Ford who took great satisfaction in providing jobs for men who had served time in prison, that when released men applied to him for work saying that they were ready to begin life all over again he would say, "All right then, begin where you are."

Reading the Old Testament one gets the impression that God did exactly that. He took men as he found them and by guiding them carefully and precisely through the years he made of them the worthy leaders they became. The story of David is a particularly good illustration of this principle.

David, the Imperfect

David is referred to as a man "after God's own heart," and this phrase has been held up to scorn a good many times by those who have been critical of the Bible and of religion. "Is an adulterer, a blood letter, and a tyrant the kind of man God favors?" they have asked.

It must be admitted, of course, that David was all of that. But he was also something more. It is true that he seduced the wife of a faithful citizen-subject, but so great was his penitence over his foul conduct that he never again suffered a lapse in his personal morals. It is true, too, that he was a bloody king. He lived in a time when brute force was the only authority men respected. But it is also true that he used all peaceable means available before he resorted to battle. It is also true that he ruled as a dictator. Every king in the world did that, for there were no written constitutions extant among any people. But his was a dictatorship dedicated to the best interests of the people.

To David nothing was outside the field of religion. He saw the Divine in every fact and circumstance of life. He was convinced that the Eternal was at work in all the affairs of men and of nations, and that the will of Jehovah would ulimately triumph among men.

David and Nathan

Long before any of the great writing prophets appeared among the Hebrews to compose their sermons and commit them to writing to become, ultimately, scripture, there were godly men—always laymen—who seemed to see with unusual clearness the mind of God

> The Sunday School lesson for July 30: "David, a King Who Honored God," II Samuel 5:1-5; 6-7; 9; 22; Psalms 24; 51.

In David's time there was one such in the person of Nathan—a man of wisdom, sagacity, keen moral perception, and of great courage. He was a loyal subject of King David, but a man who maintained his own honor and self-respect by continuing to be independent of his judgments.

With complete candor he expressed his opinions, offered his advice, and sounded his warnings. And he always seemed to be right. The greatness of David is evident in the fact that he always listened respectfully and carefully, and in most cases acted accordingly.

And Thus He Became

Beginning as a little lad tending his father's flocks on the rocky hillsides, without the benefit of friends at court or royal lineage, David "started from where he was" and by recognizing his mistakes and refusing to repeat them finally achieved a moral stature which made him one of the immortals.

He was a vigorous individual, but his vigor was always invested in great causes. He was impetuous, but always in the direction of justice and honor. He was imperious at times, but always on behalf of causes which ultimately proved to be eternal. He was weak in certain aspects of his life, but he never gave up the struggle to be strong. No small part of his great achievements must be credited to the fact that he knew how to take advice from the right sources.

He Listened To Godly Men

It is conspicuous in the life and rule of David that his chief concern in every situation was to be "right."

No one could possibly have pronounced more stern judgments on his mistakes than he, himself, did. No one saw his sins more clearly nor with greater revulsion than he did.

Inside the court he surrounded himself, as far as he was able, with godly men, and to them he gave the most careful heed. No man professing to have had a word from God, was ever denied an audience with King David.

It was unfortunately true in the case of many kings who succeeded David that the court was filled with collaborationists, pagan priests, self-seekers, and grafters. But David's court was always clean. At one time he was compelled to war against his own son. With breaking heart he did it, emerging triumphant, and suffered all the pangs of a heartbroken father, but he never allowed himself to be swerved from his duty either to his people or to his God.

He could be stern, but he could also be generous. He could strike terrible blows, but he could also deal gently and tenderly. He could sin and he could repent. He could become morally indignant, and he could also forgive for the sake of the nation.

He began at the bottom, and ended in the heights.

Cottons Stay Crisp With New Treatment

Manchester, England, July 27—(CP)—Thanks to a new textile process introduced here you soon will be able to buy a cotton dress that will stay as crisp after washing as when you picked it off the rack.

The new process, developed by the Calico Printers Association, will reduce ironing cotton fabrics to a minimum and heighten their crease resistance.

Another development is a nonshrink finish of particular importance for rayon goods which will enable fabrics such as crepe and marocain to be washed without pulling or stretching. Research into pattern durability has yielded a "permanent glaze" process for cotton, spun and linen. With this, patterns in cloth can be glazed leaving the background unglazed.

There are also finishes which make spuns and linens stronger under abrasion, more translucent and permanently stiff.

The new group of processes, called calpreta, should be on the market within six month, manufacturers say.

These Are Salad Days

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa July 27 — (CP) — A crisp, cool salad will tempt the most lackadaisical appetite these hot weather days.

Shrimp salad — Ingredients: four cups cooked shrimps; one-quarter teaspoon paprika; one-half teaspoon salt.

Boil fresh shrimps in salted water, wash and drain and carefully remove the shells. Also remove the black line which runs the length of the body.

When cool, add salt, paprika and mix well in French dressing Let stand in refrigerator until thoroughly chilled.

Arrange shrimps on crisp lettuce leaves or shredded cabbage and garnish with curled celery and sliced pickles.

Salmon salad is another hot-weather luncheon dish.

Ingredients: One can salmon; one cup cabbage (finely cut); one cup celery (chopped); one-half teaspoon salt; one-eighth teaspoon salt; one-eighth teaspoon paprika; mayonnaise.

Flake the salmon fine and mix it with cabbage and celery. Sprinkle lightly with the salt and paprika and then chill the mixture. Mix with mayonnaise and serve on lettuce leaves.

Lemon snow makes an excellent dessert after a heavy meal.

Ingredients: four tablespoons of cornstarch; one-third cup sugar; one-half teaspoon salt; two cups boiling water; one lemon (grated rind and juice); two egg whites.

Mix cornstarch, sugar and salt well together. Gradually add boiling water, stirring constantly. Cook over low heat until thick and clear (about five minutes). Add lemon juice (three tablespoons) and grated rind (one tablespoon) and pour slowly over stiffly beaten egg whites, stirring until well blended.

Serve with custard sauce. Yield: six servings.

For the custard sauce you need: two tablespoons sugar; one teaspoon cornstarch or two teaspoons flour; dash of salt; 1 1-2 cups milk two egg yolks or one whole egg; one-half teaspoon vanilla.

Mix sugar, cornstarch or flour, salt and one cup of milk. Add slowly to the hot milk, stirring constantly. Cook until mixture coats a spoon, about five minutes. Remove from heat and add vanilla.

If desired one-third cup chopped maraschino cherries or raisins may be added to the sauce.

Child health experts suggest that it is best to give children small servings of food — big amounts may be discouraging. It is better for a child to form the habit of cleaning his plate, and, if still hungry, asking for a second helping.

"Sack" Uniforms Or "Common" Togs Ask N.Z. Mothers

Auckland, N.Z., (CP)—Is it better to dress school children in "gunny sack uniforms" than have them "run around in dirty sneakers and denims?"

A newspaper battle is raging here between United States visitors who are shocked at the uniforms worn by all New Zealand school children and local educationalists who regard American school clothes as "common".

For New Zealand boys the uniform, summer and winter, is a navy blue or grey flannel shirt, open at the neck, serge shorts of similar color, and black stockings ending several inches below the knee. A small round cap is usually perched on the back of the head. All boys, up to the age of 18, wear short pants.

"Gym" Tunic For Girls

For girls, the uniform is a "gym" tunic, usually of navy blue serge, worn over a white blouse with a starched collar. They wear black, woollen stockings and a felt or straw hat. Cosmetics and jewelry are banned.

One American visitor wrote: "I am still suffering from the shock of my first sight of New Zealand school boys and girls."

"If uniforms are necessary, why can't they be more attractive? A gym tunic which fits like a gunny sack, a blazer cut along the lines of the Hunchback of Notre Dame, and a bucket-shaped hat which gives the most beautiful face a hang-dog expression—why are these necessary?"

Comic Characters

A New Zealand headmistress hotly replied: "For an American woman to tell us that our children look like comic characters in their school uniforms seems to me the height of irony."

"American children are notorious for their peculiar dressing. The girls look messy, sloppy and over-dressed, and the boys—those awful knickerbocker trousers and plaid lumber jackets. The denims, and jeans, and shirt tails hanging out, and the dirty sneakers. There seems to be something about the way American children dress that makes them look common, even though they may not be."

There was some support for the original writer's view that uniforms should be improved.

Other Suggestions

One parent said she could see no reason for the "type of mass mourning in vogue here." A man pointed out that youth movements all over the world had devised attractive, yet serviceable and economical uniforms. Several writers urged the use of brighter colors, long trousers for boys in winter and lighter shirts in summer.

Almost without exception, however, the writers declared themselves strongly opposed to the North American system of leaving choice of clothes to children or parents, and in favor of uniforms, as putting children on an equal basis.

Trailer Wives Enjoy Roaming Family Lives

Morden, Man., July 28—(CP)—Some 2· housewives here wash the outside of their homes as regularly as they do the kitchen floor.

They are the wives of American Oil men working on the pipeline which will carry Alberta oil to the lakehead. They live in luxury-fitted trailers.

They will stay in Morden as long as their husbands are at work nearby. Then they will move on as the pipeline progresses. A few months from now they may be with another pipeline job, perhaps in Venezuela or Mexico.

Every morning in this temporary community, the "lady of the house" can be seen in T-shirt and jeans, attacking the exterior of her trailer with scrub brush.

The trailers are self-contained, finished in blonde wood and containing bedrooms, shower, kitchenette and living rooms. Most have electric refrigerators and ultra-modern stoves.

There are no facilities for heavy washing, so the pipeline wives usually send it out to a nearby laundry. However, a few do their own in large modern sinks.

Groceries are picked up twice a week with perishable foods stored in refrigerators. Tinned foods are stored in ample cupboard space in the kitchenettes.

There is no waste space in the trailers. Good-sized cupboards line the walls and extra storage space is found under the chesterfield. Meals are eaten from a collapsible table that folds into the wall.

Wives who have babies bathe them in portable bath tubs. They are fed regularly with the help of a bottle warmer. Older children play with tricycles, wagons and toys. All go along when the trailer moves.

Mrs. L Silvo, one of the wives, has been travelling over North America by trailer for 14 years. Her husband is a utility helper.

"Of course, I didn't have as much work until he came along," said Mrs. Silvio, glancing at her six-month-old son, Gerry. "There isn't much space, and when one thing is out of place the whole trailer looks upset."

Mrs. Silvio, whose home is Atlanta, Ga., says she hopes her husband will quit pipeline work when Gerry is old enough to go to school.

Montreal, Quebec.

Dear Mr. Byrens,

You said we would be satisfied with the Vauxhall's performance. You understate, sir! Not only are we satisfied—we're astonished.

The Vauxhall's maneuverability in Montreal's helter-skelter traffic turned out to be excellent, as you assured us it would be. But we were wondering how it would manage those roads up above Labelle and in the back country around Nominingue. Well, it managed everything from that early September construction mud to a one-deer cross-country track . . .

Our first long trip was an emergency flight to Detroit and back on an unseasonably hot late October weekend. We had changed to antifreeze for the trips up north, but that didn't faze that Vauxhall. It was a matter of some 1250 miles in about thirty hours driving time. Satisfactory, say we—considering the weekend traffic and the woolly fog we pushed through this side of Toronto one night. The Vauxhall's trunk took most of our luggage and there was room for the rest of it, and the four of us, inside.

I drove another make of car down to Albany a few weeks ago and got fooled three times by the pick-up. I had become used to the snap of the Vauxhall's acceleration when we turned out to pass. I found that the other car needed much more time and open road ahead. Three close calls driving me back into line were necessary before I caught on.

Driving a Vauxhall in winter we get a kick out of watching other cars at an intersection switch their tails around like angry lions trying to get started on ice. We just wait for them to slither over to the side while we go on our way. We're keeping the tires at 27 and they're gripping everything so far.

And there are a lot of little things we like about the Vauxhall: from the leather seats, the side signal lights, the heater, the footroom, to the way you can snap the windows shut on a second's notice with a flick of the wrist. But the main things are Vauxhall's ease of parking and the fact that we can afford to buy the gas—32 miles per is all right with us—and, well, we're just glad we didn't wait for that car we thought we wanted!

Thanks for everything.

Yours sincerely.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

MUSCLE MEN

A couple of human tanks will throw their muscular armor at each other in Memorial Arena tonight when the Eric from the Yukon meshes muskles, as Popeye would say, with the flint-ribbed Austrylian, Fred Atkins from somewhere in kangarooland. After the decision handed out by Referee Bert Maxwell a week ago when he tympanied a rapid trio of thumps on the canvas to give Atkins the formal nod of victory in the third fall, the pair has been going around throwing everything but the respective kitchen sinks at each other, in a verbal way of course.

Eric rumbled deeply in his 56-inch torso and strained this through his tonsils: "I'll make him the laughing stock of Belleville tonight. I'll definitely prove who is the better man, if I have to take him apart and send him to the junk shop."

Atkins emitted a lusty guffaw. "I defeated him easily last week, but just for fun, blimey, I do it up in much shorter order tonight. He may scare some of these wrestlers with his ponderous size, but not little Freddy from down under."

So there it is, take it or leave it. Personally we believe it will result in a rough toughie sort of battle with no quarter asked nor given. Should be a lively set-to. Then there's Ski-Hi Lee the towering Ozark Ike who will mingle mat calisthenics with clever Seli Samara, the dark-skinned African sensation. And to start the procedings there's that pair of old favorites Toar Morgan and Abe Zvonkin.

GETS OUR VOTE!

If we were asked to cast a vote for "Mr. Baseball" of the Belleville District Baseball League, there would be no hesitation on this corner's part. It would go to Elder Neilson, the handsome, smiling and starry second baseman of the Belleville Cubs.

Elder, we understand, hails from Utah where the kids play baseball with a formula bottle in one hand and a bat in the other. He ranks not only as the outstanding infielder in the league but in our opinion, he's a lot better than some we have seen disporting COBL uniforms. He is a dangerous and powerful hitter who passes up the opposing outer gardeners at times, by poking the pill exactly where "they ain't." When he poles it where they are, it usually sails over their heads.

The other night against the Cannifton Clippers, Elder gave one of the best performances of his Belleville baseball career. He slammed out two four-baggers in a row and garnished them with a run-scoring double. And just to show his diamond versatility, Elder essayed a pitching role starting the seventh, and let down the Clippers with a pair of hits. True he allowed three runs, but this was due to an early inability to find the plate. He struck out seven of the last nine men to face him. He blazed a blistering fast ball down the alley that had the foemen swinging like a beer sign. The Elder will do.

ALL BUTTONED UP!

Last night's tilt between the Belleville Cubs and Point Anne wound up the District League ball-of-yarn as far as the two clubs are concerned. Sixardee finished their scheduled games last week and are now awaiting the playoffs. From here it looks like the airmen and Point Anne who finished in third slot, and the Cubs and Uapanee, who, we understand will finish in fourth place. The Cubs wound up their seasonal stint with 11 victories and five defeats while the Sixardee'ers swept through the schedule undefeated.

SHOULD BE GOOD!

While some of the wise boys pick Group Captain Green's laddybucks to pull out with the league championship, it should be remembered that anything can happen in a baseball game, and the series is not decided until the last man is out in the final game. Sixardee boasts a powerful well-balanced aggregation, but so was Hitler's gangsters until it came to the playoffs in the European League. The Cubs have shown surprising strength in their last four or five games, while Point Anne is a force to be reckoned with. It should be a good playoff series, and if the field narrows down to Sixardee and the Cubs, there should be some lusty diamond battles in the offing.

HE WASN'T FOOLING!

Tempers flared and rhubarbs threatened in that Cubs-Point Anne tussle at Ox Point Park last night. Catcher Johnny Green objected to a decision by the plate umpire, lost his temper and tried to push His Nibs around and promptly got the ole heave-ho. Manager Bob Strahan also left the game but went out on his own accord. He, too, did not like the way the officials were calling their wares, and walked off the field in disgust during a latter inning. However the game was lost at that point for the veteran "Chuck" Barriage whose soup bone must be part turkey for it improves with age, let the Pointers down with seven spaced clouts. The Cubs collected ten safeties off youthful Billy Strahan who has all the earmarks of becoming one of the district's outstanding hurlers.

PICTON HERE TONIGHT

Those arch enemies of the diamond and especially the Central Ontario Baseball League, the Picton Athletics and Batawa Shoemen, clash tonight in what should be a baseball classic. There is no love lost between these Bay of Quinte teams and each will be going all out to cop the victory nod. Batawa slipped back into fifth slot in the league standing when they lost that heartbreaker to Kingston Wed. gloaming while Brockville was taking the measure of Napanee. We hear that the Spaniards have acquired a crack lefthander who will likely be tossed in there tonight to stifle the Bata bludgeons. Come what may it should be a stern tilt with both squads shooting for the laurel wreath. Art Wright will, in all probability, start for the Bata crew. Game at eight-thutty.

Blue Bombers on Comeback Trail, Make Strong Bid for Grid Title

By MORLEY COOPER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, July 28 —(CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers are on the comeback trail. They've slipped a few aces into the deck for a grand-slam bid in the Western Interprovincial Rugby Football union.

The days when Bombers dominated the western football scene and sometimes the Canadian picture are fond memories. But the club hopes to make them a reality again. Bombers don't intend to finish in last place as in the last two seasons.

To carry out their plans, coach Frank (Butch) Larson and president Ralph Misener have recruited some promising talent in Eastern Canada and the United States.

Topping the list of imports is 30-year-old quarterback Indian Jack Jacobs. A desire for the security Canadian football offers and the amalgamation of the two United States professional football leagues enticed Jacobs away from Green Bay Packers.

"I hurt my knee last year with Packers and I might be cast off without a penny if it goes on the bum in the middle of the season," Jacobs said. "In Canada, I have all-season security."

R. P. (Buddy) Tinsley, a brawny six-foot, four inch tackle backs up Jacobs.

Many New Faces

The combining of the leagues is going to put a lot of guys out of work," said the former Baylor and Los Angeles Dons star. "The slicing of contracts by the combined leagues—plus the insecurity—brought me up here."

A big Bomber factor will be fleet Tom Casey, almost a one-man team with Hamilton Wildcats in the Big Four last season. Besides his year's experience in Canadian football, the 25-year-old halfback toted a pigskin for Hampton in West Virginia from 1942 to 1947 and for New York Yankees in 1948.

Latest find is Mitch (Mr. Smear) Smiarowski, six-foot, 215 pound centre, who earned his nickname in college football before being drafted this year by Baltimore Colts. At present he is working out with Bombers but hasn't signed a contract.

Bombers are keeping their fingers crossed that a duo of ends will turn up. There's a chance that Abner Wimberley, a Louisiana State and Dons alumnus, and Bill Kelley of Texas Tech and Green Bay Packers may line up with an American club. They haven't reported to Larson yet although they have signed. The seventh import under league rules also has not been named.

From Eastern Canada, Bombers have culled Donald (Sleepy) Knowles for a backfield slot. He was voted most valuable player in the Ontario Rugby Football Union last season for his work with Sarnia Imperials.

Wiley of Albert College

There also are Andy Sokol, former University of Western Ontario back who has played with Hamilton Tigers and Imperials; Alan Wiley, a useful ex-Imperial who plays centre or guard; and Tommy Ford, a Toronto Argonauts backfielder of last season and with Toronto Balmy Beaches in 1945-46-47.

Bombers have had their recruiting disappointments. They lost Bill Larochelle of Ottawa Rough Riders when a winter deal fell through. They are still dickering for Jimmy Loreno, Big Four rookie of the year with Hamilton Wildcats last season.

Only member of the last Bomber championship team of 1947 is 24-year-old guard Bud Irving.

Johnny Stroppa—rookie of the year in the west in 1949—will also play a major role for the blue and gold this year.

Coach Larson and line coach Sol Kampf of Grand Fords, N.D., are cagey about making any predictions.

"We'll have a much better-balanced bay club this year," said Larson. "Our rookies of last year are shaping up well—but all the teams in the west are building up, especially Edmonton. It will be a better league this year."

Stratford Skids To Fourth Slot In Intercounty

(By The Canadian Press)

Stratford's recent nose-dive down the Intercounty ladder can be laid to one factor—no cluch hitting.

It was never more obvious than Thursday night, when Nats dropped a 5-2 decision to London Majors and skidded into fourth place in the league standing. They left 11 runners stranded on the base paths.

Duane Gottschall, London twirler, restricted the Nats to four hits, but he walked nine. Nats couldn't do anything about it. In the fourth, with none out, they loaded the bases on walks but only salvaged one run, and that on an infield out.

London made sure of the game in the fifth when Joe Rossamondo doubled and Timber Dahlberg and Ken McFadden parked a pair over the fence.

Guelph Maple Leafs stepped out of character to hang up a 10-4 victory over Kitchener Legionnaires.

On the mound, the cellar-dwelling Leafs got unusually good pitching from George Patte who gave up seven hits, fanned one and walked one for his fourth win of the season.

At bat, Leafs rapped out 11 hits and made good use of 11 walks from three Kitchener pitchers.

Meanwhile, London's Joe Bechard maintained his Intercounty batting lead in the last week. Bechard, with a .407 average, leads Alex Kvasnak of Waterloo Tigers by 31 points.

Tommy McGrattan, Jim Burns, and Stan Lipka, all of Brantford Red Sox, lead in the important runs-batted-in division. McGrattan has 31, Burns 28, and Lipka 25.

In pitching, Bobby Schnurr of Kitchener replaced Joe Yosurak of Waterloo as top moundsman. Schnurr has won seven and lost one. Yosurak has the most victories—nine.

Maple Leafs Drop Close Game To Syracuse

(By The Associated Press)

Rochester Red Wings are sailing serenely along at the top of heap in the International League pennant race today following victory in a crucial series.

Johnny Keane's pace-setters nipped the runner-up Baltimore Orioles, 8-7, in 11 innings last night to win a six-game series, 4-2. The series victory enabled the Wings to increase their lead to five games.

The Wings won out in the 11th on Dick Cole's single and Don Richmond's double.

Montreal's third-place Royals also lost ground as they bowed, 3-2, to Springfield Cubs. Al Ihde blanked the Royals on one hit until the ninth when he was yanked after the Royals loaded the bases on a double and two walks. Tony Jacobs come on and got out of the hole with the aid of a double play. Jack Wallaesa smashed a two-run homer, his 19th of the season, to drive in what proved to be the winning runs for the Cubs in the sixth.

Jersey City Giants edged Buffalo Bisons, 5-4. Andy Tomasic scattered nine Bisons hits and fanned 11 in out-dueling Charley Harris and Lynn Lovenguth.

Art Hartley pitched Syracuse Chiefs to a 2-1 decision over Toronto Maple Leafs.

Claude Corbitt homered in the third for the Chiefs' first run and Ed Little drove home Ben Zeintara with the clincher in the sixth.

MINER STAYS AT POST TO EVACUATE MEN AFTER BLAST

Leonard Morrison, of Stellarton, N.S., risks life to assure safety of fellow workers

1. Coal miner Morrison's job is to run a stationary engine which sends small cars on a cable down a steep incline for half a mile to the shaft bottom. Here, a cage takes men and materials to the surface. When he felt the shock of an explosion, he knew he was at liberty to save himself if he could — and forget about the other men. However, Morrison decided to stay on the job.

2. As the men came in, he sent them down in the cars to the cage which would take them to safety. For fifteen long minutes, Leonard's ears strained for the dreaded sound of a second explosion. But it did not come. Calmly and quickly he worked until the last of the 45 men had gone. Finally, Morrison was free to look after himself!

3. Shutting off his engine, he started out — alone and on foot — towards the shaft and safety. The mine superintendent sums up Leonard Morrison's bravery in this way: "This young man might easily have given his life for his fellow workers. He went far beyond the call of duty." We are proud to add our tribute by presenting him with The Dow Award.

Phillie Mound Corps on Spot, Lose Simmons to Uncle Sam With Heavy Schedule Ahead

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Temporary loss of Curt Simmons, top National League pitcher with 14 victories, puts the Phillie Whiz Kids to the real test. Eddie Sawyer's staff must take up the slack for two weeks until the $65,000 bonus baby returns from a National Guard camp.

The Phils face a harrowing schedule including important series with St. Louis and Brooklyn before Simmons comes back.

Simmons protected the Phils' 1½-game lead over the Cardinals with a 13-3 decision over Chicago Cubs. Curt allowed seven hits, including a homer by Andy Pafko, fanned five and walked five.

Del Ennis ruined the Cubs, driving in seven runs with a double in the seventh and a homer in the eighth, each with the bases loaded. Doyle Lade was the loser.

Cards Rout Dodgers

St. Louis stuck close to the Phils with a rousing 13-3 romp over Brooklyn. The Cards broke the game wide open after it had gone 1-1 through the first six innings. Enos Slaughter and Chuck Diering each hit two homers and Del Rice hit one but Stan Musial's 30-game batting streak was ended. Musial went hitless in five trips.

The loss cost the Dodgers third place when Boston grabbed a 5-3 night victory over Pittsburgh behind Warren Spahn. The Braves' lefthander had a shutout until the ninth when the Pirates bunched three of their eight hits for all their runs.

Cincinnati and New York were idle.

As happens so often in baseball, an old teammate came back to haunt the New York Yankees last night. George Stirnweiss, traded to St. Louis in June, came through with a ninth-inning single to break a tie with a 3-2 Brownie victory.

The loss dropped the Yankees a game and a half back of Detroit, which knocked over Boston, 5-1, in an afternoon game. As Cleveland also lost to Philadelphia, 17-2, the Tigers gained on all other first division clubs.

Trout Whips Boston

Dizzy Trout, who figured as second-strong bullpen pitcher last spring whipped Boston for the third time to help the Detroit cause. The veteran righthander turned in a neat nine-hitter to beat Ellis Kiner. A three-run fifth inning in which Vic Wertz hit his 16th homer with a man on ruined Boston.

Lou Brissie, the "losingest" pitcher in the Majors with 13 defeats, calmed the Indians with four hits for the first Philadelphia victory over the Indians in their last 10 starts.

Sam Chapman accounted for the A's first four runs with his 17th homer with Elmer Valo on base in the first and a two-run double in the third.

Washington split a pair with Chicago, winning the first, 3-2, and losing the second, 6-3, on Randy Gumper's efficient pitching. The Senators were held hitless for 6 1-3 innings of the opener by Billy Pierce. Then they broke loose for three runs to win in the eighth inning.

Musial's Hitting Streak Halted Short of Record

New York, July 28. (AP)—Stan Musial's lengthy batting streak is at an end today but the star St. Louis Cardinal outfielder can be consoled by the knowledge that he is only the 11th big leaguer to hit safely in 30 or more consecutive games.

Musial entered yesterday's game against Brooklyn Dodgers with a run of 30 straight games in which he'd hit safely. He had five chances in which to keep his skein alive but failed each time although his mates clubbed five Brooklyn hurlers for 13 assorted hits.

Musial thus failed in his efforts to equal or tie four marks.

His immediate goal was the team high of 33 straight hitting games set by Rogers Hornsby in 1922. The second was the modern National League mark of 37 games established by Tommy Holmes of Boston Braves in 1945.

After that would have come the all-time National League standard of 44 games set by Baltimore's Willie Keeler in 1897; then Joe Dimaggio's brilliant 56-game hitting streak in 1941 which stands as the major league record.

Following are the team leaders since 1900:

Seeks Permit to Hold Night Racing

Baltimore, Md., July 28 (AP)—Marlboro, newly-remodeled half-mile track in southern Maryland, asked the State Racing Commission today for permission to hold its 10-day September meeting under lights.

Marlboro's decision to take to the arcs wasn't surprising. Manager Ed O'Hara has been mulling over the idea for some time. But his decision to carry it out could be interpreted as a sign of the times.

Night flat racing has been tried at a few tracks across the United States, but as yet nothing conclusive has resulted.

Jack Guest, 17, Seen as First Triple Winner

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Port Dalhousie, Ont., July 28.—(CP)— Barring such unforeseen happenings as a leaking shell or a broken oar, Toronto's Jack Guest today should become the first triple winner of the Royal Canadian Henley's 68th annual outing. The kid has everything in his favor, including a bundle of confidence.

The strapping 195-pounder, unbeaten since he entered big-time competition a year ago, rolled up victory No. 2 of the four-day regatta, Thursday. For a 17-year-old that probably is a record in this premier aquatic festival on North America.

He followed up Wednesday's first-place effort in the high school singles with a close victory over defending champion Joe Angyal of New York Athletic Club in the open quarter-mile dash. It followed by an hour an easy two-open-length decision over Winnipeg's Derek Riley in the first heat of the association singles.

The final of this event is scheduled for this afternoon and Guest, Canadian and American High School champion, may expect most trouble from Bobby Williams, Hamilton Leander sculler. Williams placed second behind Olympic and Diamond sculls winner Jack Kelly, Jr., of Philadelphia in the United States National championships at the Quaker City last weekend.

Others in the association finals are Derek Riley of Winnipeg Rowing Club and Frank Tucker of Brockville, Ont., but grandstand observers already are counting these two out. They figure it a Guest-Williams race with the Toronto Youngster the favorite.

The Henley's 600-entry list was trimmed considerably after Wednesday's 4 1-2-hour program which featured close finishes and a wholly-unrehearsed dash across the course by a motorboat which almost swamped four scullers. Times were slow. Competitors said this was caused by a fairly stiff cross-wind in open stretches of the course.

It was worth the price of admission alone to see the second heat of the junior 145-pound eights, the closest three-boat finish in the memory of old-timers. Officials decided on the Wyandotte, Mich., crew as winner by one foot over Toronto Argonauts with Toronto Don Rowing Club one yard behind.

But the day really belonged to the St. Catharines Rowing Club, defending team champion. It ended with a 71-point total, 40 1-2 points over the runner-up Dons, manufactured from six firsts and three seconds in the complicated Henley scoring system.

With only today and Saturday remaining in the four-day regatta, the experts are calling St. Catharines to make it two in a row.

Nine of today's 13 events are finals—the junior 145-pound eights, junior 145-pound singles, junior eights, intermediate 145-pound fours, association singles, junior 155-pound eights, intermediate fours, intermediate 155-pound fours and senior fours with cox.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT
(For Hugh Fullerton, Jr.)

New York, July 28—(AP)—If the income tax authorities are willing, it now appears more than likely that Joe Louis will come out of his semi-retirement to fight Ezzard Charles at New York's Yankee Stadium in September.

It is the only means the once-great champion has of settling a six-figure tab with the government and it would seem the part of wisdom for Washington to approve the reported "deal" whereby Joe would surrender his entire end of the purse in exchange for a full financial pardon.

The layman might well be puzzled at Joe's ability to run up such a bill with the government. Even those closest to the situation are somewhat vague about it. Their awed remarks about Joe terrific spending ability, while undoubtedly true, still leave a question or two unanswered.

The man who earned about $4,000,000 while holding the heavyweight title for 11 years owes a pile of money, and he's got to make a stab at coming up with it. The only way he can earn that kind of money is by fighting again.

The Old Joe

So it is too bad. Louis was a great fighter — maybe even the greatest ever to pull on a glove.

But that Joe Louis is gone, leaving only the memory. The man who is preparing now to try to run and sweat himself back into 15-round condition is fat around the hips and shoulders and packing 36 years on his back.

Here is one Louis admirer, at least, who has no desire to watch him chase Charles around a boxing ring until his legs grow weary. It can't possibly be a good fight, and it might easily prove a worse one than Joe's last title defence against Joe Walcott two summers ago.

Trotting Queen May Break 73-Year Record

(By The Canadian Press)

Proximity, queen of the country's present day trotters, gets a chance tonight to break the 73-year-old money winning record for harness horses.

The eight-year-old mare heads a classy field of nine in the $15,000 Sportsman's trot at Sportsman's Park in Chicago.

Proximity, unbeaten in 10 starts this season, will be shooting for the money-winning record of Goldsmith Maid which has stood since 1877 at $206,462.

Proximity now has a total bank account of $204,879. If she takes first in both heats of a mile and a mile and a sixteenth, her money total would be increased $7,500. A second place finish would give her $3,000 and third place would be worth $2,250.

The other horses in the race have good records but the bay flash is rated at least a 6 to 5 favorite.

Ten prospective starters were ready today for the colorful $75,000 added Arlington Handicap which will close Arlington Park's 36-day meeting.

Top-weighted with 128 pounds and probable favorite in the mile and-a-quarter stake is Calumet Farm's Ponder. Citation, Calumet's champion money winner, was declared out of the race last week after pulling up lame after a workout.

Brandywine Stable's Cochise, carrying 122 pounds, will have as a running mate Greek Song, the Arlington classic winner.

Ponder, with veteran Steve Brooks up, will be after his stable's third Arlington Handicap triumph. Coaltown won the laurels last year and Armed turned the trick in 1947.

Gordon Walker, baseball writer for the Globe and Mail, has been appointed business manager of the Toronto baseball club in the International League, it was announced Thursday night.

John Wyhonic, who signed a contract with Montreal's Dominion champion Alouettes football club a month ago, suffered a knee injury in practice Thursday night and will be lost to the club for the forthcoming season, coach Lew Hayman announced.

Belleville Cubs Defeat Pt. Anne, Cinch 2nd Place

The Belleville Cubs cinched second place in the Belleville District Baseball League standing last night when they defeated the Point Anne team by an 8-1 score on the latter's diamond. The victory gave the Cubs 11 wins and five losses in their 16-game schedule.

The good right arm of the veteran "Chuck" Barriage hurled the Cubs to victory. He went the nine-inning route scattering seven hits and sending down 10 Point Anners via the strikeout route. He blanked the homesters for eight innings the only run off him coming in the fifth when an error and a hit sent a runner across the plate.

One Bad Innings

Billy Strahan, 17-year-old Point Anne hurler had a bad innings in the second frame when the Cubs bats got to him for four hits for five runs. He settled down after that and scattered six clouts over the remaining innings. He whiffed seven.

The Cubs added another run in the fourth when Galbraith stole home after clouting a single Catcher Johnny Green protested the plate decision too strongly and was chucked out of the game. Later in the pastime Point Anne manager Bobby Strahan became incensed at an official ruling and walked off the field to the dugout.

The St. Louis crew scored their last two runs in the seventh on Huck Reeves triple and Schreider's single.

Neilson with a double and single. Reeves with a triple and single paced the Cubs attack. Murney Green Jr., smashed out three of the Point Anne hits.

It is expected the Cubs will meet the Napanee squad in the playoffs with Point Anne which finished in third place tangling with the undefeated Sixardee nine.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A singleton lead is very low in the order of choice. Akoolap Oxpert hates to hear this bad news. It hurts him worse than when first he was told that there aint no santyclaus.

It makes no difference to Akoolap who has bid what suit. With a singleton he bows his neck and lets fly with it. If it works, he chortles. If it does not, he chalks it up to bad luck.

The order of preference of leads is tops, longies, shorts. One of the top card leads is first choice. Lacking a top, choose to lead from a long suit unless rule provides an objection to it.

Suppose you have no true top card lead. And suppose there is a rule objection to the lead of your long suit or suits. Then, and only then does rule advise you to lead from a short suit.

A singleton is in the class known as short suits. Therefore, in the rule order of choice of leads, a singleton is in the lowest bracket. It is the group of last resort leads.

The fact that a singleton is in the last resort group of leads does not mean it should always be avoided. Avoid it only when a better lead is available; a lead in the first two groups.

Promote a singleton lead to the desirable class when a lead in the first two groups is absent. That is, when there is no top card lead and when there is some rule objection to a long suit lead.

South is in a contract of four hearts after he and his partner have bid nothing but hearts. It is your opening lead from the west hand shown here:

♠K 8 4 3
♥J 6 2
♣A 8 6 3 2

Opponents had bid hearts. Do not lead that suit. Your spade suit has a king and your club suit has an ace. Do not lead away from either. This leaves you only a diamond to lead.

There is a time and place for everything.

CROP INCREASE

Bloemfontein, Orange Free State — (CP) — The Free State, one of the most important maize-growing provinces in South Africa, expects to reap a 30-per-cent larger crop this year than in 1949, an estimated 9,509,000 bags compared with 6,734,000 bags.

Movie Column

By HUBBARD KEAVY

Hollywood, July 28 — (AP) — This is one of those how-to-break-into-the-movies stories.

Today's subject is a shapely, green-eyed brunette with the improbable name of Debra—Debra Paget. When I heard that name, I asked: "Who thought that up—the publicity department?"

Debra's mother, Mrs. Margaret Griffin, a couple of hundred pounds of good nature and native shrewdness, answered: "I did. I christened her Debra. Her father's people were Pagets. I used to call her Debra Lee, thinking that would be a good professional name. But Paget is more unusual and there are no Pagets in the movies."

Tells Mothers

Mrs. Griffin says something like this to all stagestruck mothers: Don't think you can come here and get your daughter into the movies you day-dreamed about 25 years ago without great effort and patience. It requires years of preparation, of training, and grooming, of dieting and dramatics. But even those are not enough.

"It helps to know somebody," said Debra's mother. "In fact, you have to have an 'In'." Mrs. Griffin's good many years with stock companies, touring shows and even burlesque gave her a wide show business acquaintance. She knew Ivan Kahn, who is Zanuck's talent scout, when she came here with Debra six years ago.

I suggested that luck and friendship play great parts.

Mrs. Griffin said they sure do.

"Lucky," says Debra—

"I am very lucky," said Debra, who, being 16 and well-mannered usually speaks only when she is spoken to.

Debra is being built up now as a Polynesian glamor girl for "Bird of Paradise," to be filmed soon in Hawaii. No too-revealing Lamour sarongs for her, though, but almost-genuine Polynesian stuff.

AT THE CAPITOL — "Singing Guns" Republic's Trucolor production, marks the screen debut of Vaughn Munroe, idol of the nation on radio and records. Vaughn plays a desperado in the action-packed film, which is now showing today and Saturday at the Capitol Theatre for its first city showing. On the same program, "Square Dance Katy," starring Vera Vague, Jimmie Davis and Phil Brito.

AT THE CAPITOL — Virginia Welles plays the title role in "Square Dance Katy," the Monogram musical film which is now having its first city showing today and Saturday at the Capitol Theatre, with Vera Vague in the starring role. On the same program, Vaughn Munroe in "Singing Guns," his first screen role in Trucolor.

AT THE BELLE

"Maytime in Mayfair" in Technicolor, and "The Tattooed Stranger"

Anna ..eagle and Michael Wilding are appearing at the Belle Theatre tonight for the last times in "Maytime in Mayfair", their newest romantic comedy, in technicolor, featuring Peter Graves, Nicholas Phipps and an old friend Tom Walls.

Contrasting with 'Maytime in Mayfair", one of the most beautiful romantic comedies ever put on film, is the second feature attraction, a bold and unusual film, "The Tattooed Stranger."

Against the background of a world's greatest city, a pair of detectives hunt a lone killer among eight million people. RKO Radio's "The Tattooed Stranger" is the story of the exciting manhunt through New York to find the mysterious murder. With only two clues to work on, John Miles and Walter Kinsella, assisted by Patricia White, finally track down the killer.

The identity of the murderer is not known until near the end of the chase.

The Warner-Pathe Newsreel, completes the program showing tonight for the last times at the Belle Theatre.

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows were talking and arguing around the letter box, and Skinny Martin said, G, look who's coming, he's sure proud of that darn watch.

Meening Shorty Judge coming up looking at what time it was by the big silver watch with his initials on it that he just won for selling 2 duzzen tubes of Morning Glory tooth paste with a red tooth brush tied to each tube free, and he put it back in his pockit trying to look as if he did not think it was anything special, and Puds Simkins said, Heck, things are certainly slow today. I wish something would hurry up and happen.

Why, what's the big hurry, it's erly yet, Shorty said.

And he took his watch out again, saying, Sure, it's only 10 and a half minutes after three.

And we kept on talking about different subjects sutch as time going faster during vacation even when there was nothing special doing, and Shorty said, G. that's rite.

And he quick took his watch out again, saying, Gosh, talk about time flying, it's 6 minutes later alreddy than it was when I got here.

Aw, let's stop waiting and start something, I said, and Shorty said, That's a good idea, let's get up a guessing game to guess who can come the closest to guessing the exact time.

Aw, what kind of a game is that? Glasses Magee said, and he said.

Aw, why dont you imagine you never saw that darn watch? Skinny said, and Puds said, Sure, give us a rest, can't you?

All rite, just for that I wont tell anybody the time even if they ask me, Shorty said.

Being an easy promise to keep on account of nobody asking him. Shorty said. It's a swell kind. I'll be the official judge

LEOPOLD ON HIS HOME TERRITORY

King Leopold of Belgium, who returned to Brussels after six years in exile, is shown walking in the grounds of the Laeken Palace with his sons, Prince Baudouin and Prince Albert. Pro-Leopold demonstrations were held outside the palace gate where a crowd of 3,000 cheered as the King made his appearance on the steps of the palace. The anti-Leopold factions in the country also staged demonstrations, parading through the streets shouting "abdication" and "Leopold to the gallows." After one brief public appearance, King Leopold remained in the castle grounds.—Central Press Canadian.

FRANKFORD

Lions Club Holds First Picnic At Crystal Beach

Frankford — The Frankford Lions Club held their first picnic at Crystal Beach, Moira Lake, on Wednesday afternoon. Although a number of the Lions were, through necessity, unable to attend, over 70 were present.

The early part of the afternoon was spent in baseball and swimming. At 6.30, all sat down to a bounteous repast, and what a repast it was! Mrs. Arnold Stickle can make a salad that's out of this world, Mrs. M. Dafoe is second to none when it comes to lemon pie.

Following supper, a horse-shoe tournament was organized. Lions Sid Martin and Albert Warren teamed up to win the elimination contest.

In the tug-of-war contest, the single men outpulled the married men, two draws to one. The single men took the first draw, the married men bounced right back to win the second, and the third was a hard-fought battle with the single men finally outlasting the husbands.

Races

Several running races were held, winners being as follows: Boys 7-10 years, Billy Dafoe, Douglas Badgley; Girls 7-10 years, Betty Burkitt, Shelia Macauley; Boys over 10 years, Francis Stickle, Jim Johns; Girls over 10 years, Sandra McDonald, Kathleen Carter; Ladies' race, Mrs. Jack Farley, Mrs. Arnold Stickle; Sack race, girls, Kathleen Carter, Sandra McDonald; Boys 7-10, Billy Dafoe, Douglas Badgley; Boys (over 10) Francis Stickle, Jim Johns; Scrambled Shoe race, Darryl Bates, Kay Williams.

A number of special contests were supervised by the picnic conveners, Lions Mervin Dafoe, and Ray Scott.

In the ladies nail-driving contest, Mrs. R. D. McDonald edged out Mrs. Loyd Hanna "by a head" with special honorable mention to Mrs. Jim Johns, who also was just edged out.

Children's Balloon Burst, Wanda Martin, Jim Johns.

Pie Contest

The executive held a special contest which proved to be most amusing (and messy). With hands tied behind their backs, the eight members of the executive, namely: Mac McDonald, Bill Berscht, Bob Bates, Jim Johns, Ed Loucks, Preston Chase, Albert Warren and Bert Carter, raced to a row of pie plates on the ground, each plate with a piece of berry or lemon pie on it. They had to kneel beside the plate, and without the use of hands, eat the pie. Lion Preston Chase emerged victorious. The others can't figure how he did it, and so soon after supper, too! Lion Ed Loucks says: "I have enough pie in my moustache to last me all week!"

This event climaxed a very enjoyable time for the service club's members and their families, and will undoubtedly become an annual affair.

VANGUARD
the Car that Seats Six

THE VANGUARD is essentially a large, deluxe automobile. It seats six in easy chair comfort with plenty of head room. The 14 cu. ft. trunk takles care of all your luggage. The body is of heavy gauge steel for maximum strength and lasting beauty. Heavy duty bumpers and grill guards are gleaming chrome. The body is Bonderized (rust proof), Seal Fitted (dust proof) and luxuriously finished inside and out. New, high efficiency heating and air conditioning system with built-in defrosters gives clear visibility and just right temperatures summer and winter. Canadian 3-speed gear shift on steering column has all forward gears synchronized for perfect control in traffic. The world-famous Standard hi-power "STEEL SLEEVED" engine delivers smooth speed, swift acceleration and plenty of power with speeds up to 80 m.p.h. Removable cylinder liners assure top performance and low maintenance costs throughout the life of the car. Oil bath air cleaner and engine oil filter mean longer engine life. Specially designed water pump cools efficiently at all speeds and temperatures.

THE VANGUARD, through superior designing and engineering, combines all these big car features with small car economy, low price, extra gas mileage and exterior dimensions that make for dream-easy handling, smile-a-minute traffic performance and dime size parking.

The Gentle Heart

By Kay Hamilton

"Of course, anyone wants to get to the top of his field. That's perfectly natural. You can't blame her for it."

"I'm not blaming her," he said with sudden vehemence and turned to look straight into her eyes. "But it's bound to get me down when I realize that every step forward for her takes her much further from - - -" He broke off and closed his mouth with a determined air. He would not say any more. Jenny knew.

But he did not need to. She understood that he would have said, "Every step forward takes her that much further from me." That was the word he had bitten off, the word he would never say. And she knew, too, that he was so set in this conviction that any move would have to come from Natalie. He would never be the one to make it.

"I wish Diane were here," Jenny stopped in mid-step, surprised to find that she had said it aloud. She had been saying it to herself all afternoon, and now it had come to the surface of her mind, and slid from her tongue.

She did wish that Diane were here. And yet, in a way, perhaps it was as well that she wasn't. It was Natalie's birthday, and Jenny was preparing a buffet supper party in celebration. There were to be Brent and Gary, of course; Faith Owen, the next-door neighbor, and Max Lord, who had been squiring the pretty little widow for some time now; Pete and Elsa Torres. A comfortable, easy-to-handle crowd. But if Diane had been present, there would inevitably have been comment about Fred's absence, and that would have been awkward indeed.

Surprising, no one seemed aware of the crisis in their married life. Fred Barbour was active in several organizations, and it was pure luck that he had been sent as a delegate to one of the conventions shortly after Diane came home to stay with her sisters. People seemed to think that she had simply tired of housework and was visiting with them for a while. Everyone was conscious of how close the three sisters were. And then, too, the fact that Fred had appeared frequently at their home made it look as if there had been no rift.

But Jenny realized that talk would begin soon enough. Fred had been home now for almost a week. People would expect the bride to return to her home in a day or so. She hated the thought of scandal's touching them; hated the thought of the surmises which would circulate—none of them accurate, all of them unkind.

Now she tried to put all this resolutely from her mind This was Natalie's birthday, and she was determined that the supper party should be a success. It was unseasonably warm for the end of September, one of those close fall days with a haze in the air. She was glad she had prepared two alternate menus—on in case the weather was cold, one in case it was warm.

She paused now in the middle of the old-fashioned kitchen to go over her plan, counting off the items on her fingerds. "Let's see," she murmured. "Consomme Madrilene. Out of a can, but good with lemon slices and parsley. Then chicken mousse. Awfully rich with all that whipped cream and mayonnaise, but the salad will counteract that. Bread sticks, homemade, and a casserole of green beans, limas, corn and tomatoes for the hot dish. Iced tea and coffee."

She glanced proudly toward the birthday cake which reposed on a large Wedgewood cake plate, the candles in readiness beside it. It had come out well fluffy and light with a tantalizing taste of orange.

There would be mint ice cream with chocolate sauce to go with it. And there was plenty of everything.

The mousse was in the refrigerator, the casserole was ready for the oven. It was time for her to go and dress, but she put if off for a moment, looking about the kitchen with an affectionate eye. This was her domain, just as the studio was Natalie's. And the dressing table was Diane's, she added, with that touch of cynicism which occasionally startled people.

The large old gas range was temperamental at times, but it was commodious, and she could bake in it as well as most women did in newer, glossier ones. She knew how to handle it. She thought, suddenly, why, that's true about people too. If you know how to handle them, you can get so much more out of them than others expect. We're all alike new, and shiny, and standard. Sometimes you have better results with a person who is different from the common run who doesn't conform. It you know just when to turn down the heat, and just when to open the oven door.

She burst out laughing at herself. "I am getting mixed up," she chuckled. "I'm not sure now whether I'm thinking about people or stoves!"

The doorbell cut across her laughter, and she moved to answer it. She smothered a little groan when she saw that her visitor was Mrs. Folsom. "She'll never go home; I won't have time to get properly dressed," she said inwardly. But she opened the door with a smile of welcome, just the same, for she couldn't help being fond of the old woman who had been a friend of her parents, and who was convinced to this day that if Jerome Mayhew hadn't met his little French wife, he would have married her. She never mentioned Mr. Folsom in these reminiscences to the girls. Apparently he didn't count.

She came in now, accompanied by her elderly scottie Ghillie. "My dear, I simply had to run in and leave this little gift for my dear Natalie! It is her birthday, isn't it? I never forget such things." She had not waited for an answer. Now she held out a small parcel done up in pink flowered paper which had obviously, from the creases, been used as a gift wrapping before. It was fastened with Christmas seals which Mrs. Folsom used thoughout the year. "After all," she would say, "people go right on getting tuberculosis, you know, when Christmas is over. So I always buy enough to last."

"Sit down, won't you?" Jenny urged Mrs. Folsom. Ghillie came to flop down beside her, his elbows making a sharp sound upon the floor. He sighed gustily.

"Poor dear, he does feel the heat so. We all do, I think, when we grow older. And then, all of a sudden, from one year to the next, we seem to go into reverse and feel the cold much more. It's a real sign of old age and when I begin looking at the thermometer and grumbling because it isn't eighty-five I'll know I'm old. Well Jenny, tell me what's been happening in this household. I declare you are so ridiculously domestic that you don't even bother to see your friends any more. Mustn't do it, my dear." Mrs. Folsom shook a gloved finger at her. "Mustn't do it; before you know it, your friends will have looked elsewhere for companionship, and you will be left high and dry. Well, I thought I darned that." She eyed her glove disapprovingly, and said without any transition whatever, "I was hoping you could keep Ghillie for me."

Jenny was startled. "Ghillie " she echoed The dog, hearing his name, twitched one ear irritably, and rolled a bloodshot eye upward at her.

"Yes, I have to go to Indiana. My sister, poor dear. Arthritis, and now some new complication. He hates to travel, for which I don't blame him. and I couldn't bear to put him in a kennel while I was gone. Fleas, you know. They all get them, if not something worse. And you would take good care of him. I'll leave money for his food."

She was taking Jenny's consent for granted and, perversely, Jenny was tempted to say that she couldn't spare the time to care for a dog But she was fond of Ghillie. He had romped with her when he was a pup and she was a shy child of thirteen. She said, "I'll be glad to keep him for you." And meant it.

Ghillie's tail thumped twice on the floor, then he put his nose on his paws and went to sleep. He knew his fuure was comfortably settled and he could relax. "Well, that's a load off my mind. Now, I wish you'd relieve me of another my dear. What is Diane doing at home, when she has a perfectly good house —not to mention husband—on Trevelyan Road?"

Mrs. Folsom, having posed her question, folded her hands and sat back in her chair to await the answer. Her air was a discreet mixture of disapproval and curiosity, and Jenny sensed that what she said now would prove a pattern for the next inquiries. They would be coming now, every day, from someone or other.

She said easily, "You know Diane and housework—they just don't mix. So she's taking a sort of holiday from it by staying with us for a while. She'll be going bac ksoon. And meanwhile, Fred comes over, here, of course."

"But not to spend the night, I notice," Mrs. Folsom said sternly. "Are you sure she isn't taking a holiday from Fred Barbour as well as his house?"

"Of course not." She couldn't help the telltale flush which stole up to her hair, and it angered her. She said, with what dignity she could muster, "Will you excuse me a moment I must put the casserole in the oven right away."

Thousands Riot Against Leopold In Brussels, Liege

Mounted Police Charge Crowd in Heart of Capital

Brussels, Belgium, July 29—(AP)—Furious rioting by thousands of anti-Leopoldists broke out anew in Brussels today. A state of siege was declared in the industrial city of Liege, government sources said.

A battalion of the crack Chasseurs Ardennais Regiment was ordered to be ready to move into that French-speaking centre, a stronghold of socialist-led forces who want to drive King Leopold from the throne he regained a week ago. Liege was paralyzed by strikes. The city's governor resigned, either unable or unwilling to carry out the government's orders against the strikers.

There were unconfirmed rumors that an attempt might be made to set up a rebel provisional government in Liege. The more extreme Walloon separatists long have wanted to secede from Belgium and throw in their lot with France. These, however, are only a noisy minority group.

Sing Revolutionary Song

Rioters started marching through Brussels at noon, singing the revolutionary "Marseillaise." Mounted police, with drawn swords, charged a crowd on the Place de Brouckere, heart of the capital, as it was trying to overturn a street-car.

The rioters had dragged the motorman and his two protecting gendarmes from the car. Mounted police rode in, striking with their sabres in all directions.

The Gendarmes drew a cordon across the square but were attacked by the demonstrators. Horses reared and plunged under a shower of bottles, cafe chairs and tables snatched from a nearby terrace.

The crowd forced its way through the police cordon and marched along the Boulevard

Some Warfront Reports Hurt U.S. Prestige

Tokyo, July 29 (AP) — Gen. MacArthur's public information officer today strongly urged war correspondents to use "discretion" in their reports to avoid injuring the morale of soldiers and the prestige of the United States.

Col. M. P. Echols said U. S. embassies in Paris and Rome had advised headquarters that news accounts are hurting the American position in the eyes of foreign readers.

"These stories from Korea of American soldiers running down the road sobbing and crying are creating a terrible impression abroad," Echols said. "We have got to have the support of those people and such writing is damaging our position:

Echols added:

"That sort of stuff gives people in other countries the impression that something like Genghis Kan II is on the loose again and that we can't hold them."

Echols did not identify the correspondents or stories. Neither did he suggest any change in the present system whereby correspondents operate without censorship.

Britain Halts Army Discharges, Reserves Alerted

London, July 29—(CP)—Britain, backing up its pledge of ground troops to fight in Korea, yesterday halted release of army regulars whose enlistments are expiring and told volunteer reserves to get ready for duty.

A war office spokesman said it is impossible to say how many men would be affected by the orders.

The army call followed a similar move by the Royal Navy two days ago.

Conscripts are not affected.

The King signed a "case of emergency" proclamation yesterday permitting the navy to enforce its call-up orders. A similar royal proclamation will be needed later to formalize the army action.

The navy expects to call up from its reserves a number of technicians and about 50 pilots with carrier experience. About 1,100 officers and men will be retained through the freeze of discharges.

A war office spokesman also hinted that the order will be extended to the Women's Royal Army Corps. A spokesman said instructions for the women's services "will be issued separately."

The regular army now consists of 184,000 men. Counting conscripts, women auxiliaries and the territorials, Britain's Army, Navy and Air Force can muster 827,000 soldiers, sailors and airmen. Of these 46,000 would be army men and women.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS:

Toronto, July 29 (CP)—Synopsis: Toronto, Windsor and Hamilton all reported high temperatures of 88 yesterday, as a weak area of high pressure continued to stagnate over the southeastern quarter of the continent. Isolated Thundershowers occurred again during the night in central and northwestern Ontario.

Somewhat cooler air is moving into eastern Ontario from the north, but elsewhere little change in the weather picture is in sight for the weekend.

Negotiate Release British Soldiers Captured by Reds

Hong Kong, July 29 (AP) — Negotiations for the release of five British soldiers seized by the Chinese communists were under way today. They were captured Thursday on the mainland border.

Speculation arose in this British crown colony whether this is merely another "isolated incident" or the forerunner of something bigger.

A British army spokesman said the five were taken while on routine patrol along the 20 mile border separating China proper from the small peninsula which is part of the crown colony.

Guns, Planes, Troops in Action In Petawawa Miniature Battle

Petawawa, Ont., July 29. (CP)— Units of the Governor-General's Foot Guards, the Princess Louise Dragoons and the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa took part in a miniature battle in an isolated valley along the Ottawa River, Friday.

More than 2,000 civilians and military personnel from Petawawa summer training camp lined a bluff overlooking the scene. Vampire Jets, diving from great heights, peppered the ground targets with fire. Machine guns stuttered, rifles barked and mortars tossed their deadly missiles.

Paratroopers from the Royal Canadian Regiment came swinging down in a parachute jump from an R.C.A.F. Dakota, formed swiftly, and in a sudden attack shattered a radar location shed into thousands of flying fragments.

Spectators jumped when the Piat, Canada's ace anti-tank weapon, sent its missle far out in the terrain to explode with an ear-splitting crash. Sten, Bren and other machine guns sent tracers leaping in long lines of fire across the battle ground, only a few feet above the heads of dug-in troops. Trees crashed to the ground under a withering ground fire.

There are no dummy shells at Petawawa. Everything is loaded and everything is operable.

In all more than 1,100 reserve troops now are in camp, bringing the total strength to some 2,500 men. The camp is the home of the Royal Canadian Regiment and the Royal Canadian Dragoons.

More than 8,000 reserves will pass through the camp during the eight-week training period. Reserve units are reported to be at greater strength than at any time since the last year.

C.C.F. BEATS DOWN LEFTWING AND PACIFIST REVOLT

Supports Canadian Aid To U.N. Forces in Korea

By DAVE STOCKHAND
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Vancouver, July 29 (CP) — Belief that socialism cannot be bound by an iron-clad pattern but must be molded to present day conditions dominated the CCF biennial national convention which ended here last night.

The party's national council has instructions, endorsed by rank-and-file delegates, to "prepare a statement of the application of democratic socialist principles to Canada and the world today."

The convention, which opened Monday, hammered out a policy on national and international affairs to guide it for the next two years.

Last night delegates reaffirmed their faith in the basic principles of the Regina manifesto, but decided it has not entirely escaped the tides of time.

Lengthy Debate on Manifesto

The decision was in line with a statement earlier this week by M. J. Coldwell, who yesterday was returned as national leader.

There was lengthy debate on the manifesto, a statement of policy and principles formulated in 1933 by the nucleus of the CCF movement. It has been called the bible of Canadian socialism.

David Lewis, retiring national secretary, said the principle behind the manifesto is "what we want to safeguard." Delegates "should not shudder" at the thought that times have changed and the CCF must search for a modern interpretation.

49 Persons Die In Brazilian Plane Disaster

Rio de Janeiro, July 29——(AP)—All 49 persons aboard were killed last night when a Brazilian constellation plane crashed and burned near Porto Alegre. It was the worst disaster in the country's aviation history.

Among the 43 passengers was Ralph Motley, 48, an American, sales manager in Rio for the Atlantic Refining Company. All other passengers and crew members were believed to be Brazilians.

Witnesses said the plane circled Porto Alegre for 90 minutes in heavy weather and then smashed into Goat's Hill, about 20 miles outside of town. It may have hit a high tension wire in the vicinity. Porto Alegre is about 700 miles southwest of Rio on the Brazilian coast.

Panair owners of the plane, said rescue crews sped to the scene immediately.

Stand Ground or Die Fighting Gen. Walker Orders Troops

By DON WHITEHEAD

A U.S. Front-line Command Post in Korea, July 29—(AP)—Lt.-Gen. Walton H. Walker today ordered his eighth U.S. army to make a stand or die fighting—against North Korean reds swarming forward in a new offensive.

Walker went to the front to tell his division commanders there will be no retreat and no surrender in this fight.

"This operation very definitely has entered its crucial stage," the general told correspondents.

As he talked, the reds were smashing at American defence positions near Hwanggan on the central front and threatening to outflank the Eighth Army in a drive sweeping in about 40 miles south of Hwanggan.

Walker, who fought with Gen. George Patton in Europe, said his troops had been ordered not to yield an inch.

"We have been trying our best to shore up all the holes in our lines. As has been forecast, this is a fight for time. We will not give up an inch of ground that's not already lost.

"Everybody in this army knows we must hold along the lines we now have.

"There's no thought in the mind of anybody in this army—even though we might be so disposed—that there possibly can be a Dunkerque. It would be impossible for us to get out. . . .

"All realize that to be prisoners of these people would be worse than death. . . .

"I feel absolutely confident of success in the operation though I know we are in for some hard blows before we are absolutely secure. The operation very definitely has entered its critical stage."

A correspondent asked the general if there was any basis for speculation U.S. forces would pull back into a tight perimeter about Pusan, United Nations supply port at the southeastern tip of Korea, until reinforcements are built up. Walker replied:

"My army is not going to give up one more inch. We will stand."

Oil Link to the East

1,190-Mile Pipeline Across Prairies 50 Per Cent Completed

Winnipeg, July 29—(CP)— A steel-skinned serpent is burrowing through 1,190 miles of prairie, to carry Alberta oil to the vast oil markets of Eastern North America.

Officials of the Interprovincial Pipeline Company report that trenching, welding, pipe-laying and trench-filling operations are almost half completed. They started this spring.

The aim is to connect Alberta wells with a lakehead outlet at Superior, Wis., from there the crude oil will be shipped to refineries at Sarnia, Ont. The 20-inch pipeline, at a cost of $90,000,000 will deliver oil at one-third to one-quarter of present railway freight rates.

A 75-mile spur line connecting refineries at Winnipeg with Gretna, Man., a pumping station near the international border, was begun yesterday. Southern Manitoba's spring floods delayed that $2,500,000 project.

Lower Price Aim

Among advantages claimed for this "glorified plumbing" are a lower price for petroleum products, a consequent increase in demand, and a resultant impetus to costly research for new fields. Western oil in eastern markets will also save United States dollars ($90,000,000 last year.)

Present production potential of Alberta fields is about double prairie demand, and greater than prairie refining capacity.

The line was first envisaged as a 480-mile feeder from Edmonton to Regina, then, in 1948 ,the Redwater field boomed northeast of Edmonton and production jumped by 50,000 barrels daily.

Imperial Oil engineers and financiers fathered the I.P.C., drafted its route, and arranged financial backing in Canada and the U.S. They decided to pipe eastward to the Great Lakes, Atlantic and possibly European markets, instead of west to British Columbia and the Pacific.

An all-Canadian route was proposed, then ditched because it was 120 miles longer.

Crews of Canadian workmen and American pipeline experts bucked the winter to prepare for spring ditching. Huge machines chawed frozen ground to lay the 3½-foot-deep trench — below farm plow depth. Winding machines coat the welded, 40-foot sections with tarred insulation. Side-boom caterpillars lower them into an earthen cradle. Draglines and clamshells bury them.

Fast Progress

Progress varies from one to nine miles daily, depending on terrain and weather.

Main hitches were a shortage of pipe due to the U.S. steel strike, a treacherous spring break-up, and river crossings along the route.

On the Edmonton-Regina leg, where the line crosses the South Saskatchewan River between Outlook and Macrorie, Sask., pipe laying was held up more than three months. A sudden thaw defeated plans to bury the sections through the ice. Now they will be floated across, sunk, and buried in a trench dug afterward by a suction dredge.

Construction reports from other "legs" indicate progress is on schedule.

Drops Charges Against Baptists Quebec Village

Montreal, July 29 —(CP) — Charges against five arrested Baptist Evangelists in northwestern Quebec have been dropped, John R. Armstrong, secretary-treasurer of the union of regular Baptist Churches in Quebec and Ontario, said here Friday night.

The five were arrested last Saturday night at La Sarre, Que., during a street corner meeting and were charged with illegal assembly and causing a disturbance.

Mr. Armstrong said he had been advised by Dr. Murray Heron, pastor of the Noranda, Que., Baptist Church and a member of the union's board, that the La Sarre town council Friday agreed to free the men, pay all court costs and guarantee police protection for future open air Evangelical meetings.

E. German Reds Invite Ex-Nazis Join Navy Police

Berlin, July 29 — (AP)— Seamen who served in Hitler's fleet were invited by the East German communist regime today to volunteer for the new navy police.

Neus Deutschland, official newspaper of the ruling Socialist Unity (communist) party (S.E.D.), announced the conditions in an article that amounted to a recruiting campaign.

Former Nazi sailors were advised they will be accepted if they can show "a positive attitude toward the German democratic republic and her government"

The communist bosses have been careful to avoid calling the navy police a navy. But the semi-official East Berlin Zeitung said 22 ocean-going ships are under construction along the North Sea coast.

The Soviet zone has been building an army for more than a year. Creation of the navy police was first acknowledged by eastern officials two months ago.

NO SNAP VERDICT SEEN ON QUESTION OF GROUND TROOPS

Government Study May Crystallize in Week

Ottawa, July 29—(CP) — The government's cautious exploration of the question of sending ground troops to Korea may crystallize within a week, authoritative quarters said Friday.

Meanwhile, the army reported its recruiting offices have turned away more than 600 men who said they wanted to fight in Korea but didn't want to enlist under the big new recruiting drive for the regular forces themselves.

There is as yet no sign that Canada will follow Britain, Australia and New Zealand and other countries in offering ground forces to the United Nations. Nor, officials say, has that prospect been ruled out. Canada has sent three destroyers and an air transport squadron.

No snap decision is anticipated at once. Cabinet is expected to consider the situation again next Wednesday as it did in the unprecedented meeting aboard the Mackenzie King funeral train Wednesday night.

By that time, it was indicated, Ottawa's explorations of the situation arising from troop offers by other countries may have come to a head. Government officials have been seeking details on what one high source called "several questions of some interest." discussions are going on at U.N. headquarters and probably in Washington.

John L. Galloway Is Sent to Trial On Murder Count

Little Current, Ont., July 29—(CP) — John L. Galloway, 22-year-old Toronto factory hand, was quoted in court yesterday as saying he killed his wife and tried unsuccessfully to commit suicide.

After a 45-minute preliminary hearing, Magistrate W. J. Golden committed Galloway for trial on a charge of murder.

Pretty Elma Maud Galloway, 22, was stabbed to death with a hunting knife July 16 in a bedroom of her parents' farmhouse at Tehkumman, 25 miles south of this Manitoulin Island town.

An expert witness testified yesterday there were 33 knife cuts in the clothes Mrs. Galloway wore.

A neighbor, William Bowerman, told how Galloway came to his door the day of the killing and asked for a cigaret.

"'I've killed my wife,' he quoted the youth as saying. "'I tried to kill myself but the knife broke.'"

Mrs. Galloway's brother, Boyd Armstrong of Toronto, said he found her "kneeling" beside a bed and carried her downstairs before he realized she was dead.

A statement police said was written and signed by Galloway after his arrest was entered in evidence. It was not read in court.

Fresh U.S. Troops From Okinawa Stall Drive in South

Over 3,000 N. Koreans Killed on Central Front

Tokyo, July 30. —(Sunday)—(AP)—General MacArthur's headquarters release at 12:35 a.m. today (10:35 a.m. E.D.T. Saturday) said repeated attempts by the communists to break through United States 1st Cavalry and 25th Infantry division positions in Korea have been thrown back

It said there has been no appreciable change in the vital Yongdong sector in the central part of South Korea.

Tokyo, July 29 (AP) — Strong American counter-attacks today checked the big Communist push on the blazing central Korean front. Fresh United States troops from Okinawa stalled a thrust on the south coast.

"The enemy must pay heavily for every single inch of ground, Lt.-Gen. Walton H. Walker told division commanders. The commander of U. S. ground forces in Korea added:

"Everyone must fight to the death without any thought of withdrawal from Korea."

Walker said the U.S. line would stand firm, where it is now. He added that a "Dunkerque" was impossible.

The Reds ,were taking heavy losses. More than 3,000 died before the blazing guns of the U.S. 1st. Cavalry and 25th. Infantry Divisions.

Heavy Red Losses

An assessment of North Korean losses to date listed 31,000 reds killed and wounded, 170 tanks destroyed and 100 others damaged. A spokesman at MacArthur's headquarters called the figures "conservative."

Allied planes, land-based and from carriers, roamed dripping Korean skies unchallenged, raining more destruction on the enemy, his transport and supply centres.

News of reinforcements from Okinawa, American airbase island in Ryukyus, south of Japan, was reported reliably but unofficially. They were not mentioned by Gen. MacArthur's release.

Roadblock Checks Thrust

However the official announcement did report "an American roadblock" checked a southern coastal thrust at Ponggye, 55 miles west of Pusan— vital southeast port supplying the allied holding action. Two other Red columns were similarly stalled in the north.

Counter-attacking units of the U.S. 1st Cavalry and 25th Infantry divisions regained ground yielded Friday night on the central front in the critical Hwanggan sector.

The ferocity of the communist assault was indicated by MacArthur's report that more than 2,500 reds were killed by the 1st Cavalry Division more than 800 North Korean dead were counted in front of the 27th regimental combat team of the 25th Division.

Killed Brother 8-Year-Old Girl Tells Police

Milwaukee, July 29 (AP) —An 8-year-old girl told police yesterday that she killed her 10-month-old half-brother almost two years ago by holding his head in a tub of water.

"I was jealous," the little girl replied when asked if she was sorry.

Charles Nowakowski, captain of detectives, said he was not convinced of the accuracy of the girl's statements. He said there were some discrepancies. The case will be handled in secrecy by juvenile authorities.

The child cannot be named because of a state law against naming juveniles charged with a criminal act. She was taken to police by her mother who said she coaxed the admission from her daughter.

Police said the girl also confessed that she tried to injure another half-brother.

"I hate them. My mother paid too much attention to them," she told Capt. Nowakowski.

The drowning occurred Sept. 26, 1948, at Knapp, Wis., where the family lived before moving to Milwaukee. The drowning was classified as accidental.

The girl's mother told police she had long suspected her daughter in the boy's death. Wednesday, she said, she caught the child stepping on another half-brother, 11 months old.

Wrapped in Bedding, Couple Flee Pre-Dawn Blaze

Hamilton, July 29 (CP) — Wrapped in bedclothes, the owner and his wife were forced to flee when a pre-dawn fire broke out in the Parkhill drive-in restaurant at Brighton Beach survey today.

Two hours later neighbors pulled the same two persons, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Salonen, from their smoke-filled second-storey bedroom when fire broke out for a second time in the roadside drive-in.

The fire of undetermined origin caused an estimated $3,600 damage.

Brown Seal Tows Power-Boat For Five Miles

Eastport, Me., July 29 (AP)— Two fishermen said a 306-pound brown seal gave them a "Nantucket sleigh ride" yesterday after they hooked it on a pollock line.

Boyd and Harold Frankland had to use a gun as well as fishing gear to subdue their rambunctious catch.

The seal towed the Franklands' 32-foot power boat five miles in 90 minutes.

Ownership of Bay of Fundy Raised By Reported Sightings of Subs

Ottawa, July 29. (CP)—The East Coast Russian submarine scare has done more than make headlines.

It has brought publicity to bear on an international Rule of Thumb that is under siege now after three centuries of general acceptance.

It has unofficially raised the question of the ownership of the Bay of Fundy, a tumultuous body of water that has been the greatest breeding ground of sub-sighting reports.

It has brought both worries and chuckles to naval headquarters with its wave of submarine reports —23 by yesterday.

The Rule of Thumb is what is known as the three-mile limit. It was devised in the 17th century by a Netherlands lawyer who based it on the range of shore batteries then used to command sea approaches. Since then it has been accepted that any waters within three miles of a country are part of its territory. They are called territorial waters. Water outside that limit is international and any ship, sub or otherwise, is entitled to use it.

This brings up the question of the Bay of Fundy. It is flanked on one side by New Brunswick, on the other by Nova Scotia and there is some disagreement in Ottawa as to just whom it belongs to. The navy tends to view it's Canadian.

Other government officials, however, say only the water within three miles of shore is Canadian. There is no great dispute over it and the latter view is apparently the official one.

At least one of the Fundy reports indicated that a Russian

TWO TRANSFERS MADE BY O.P.P.

Two provincial police constables who have been stationed at the Belleville headquarters for the past several months have been transferred. They are Constable J. Brennan and Constable J. Gable. Constable Gable has been with the highway patrol, while Constable Brennan has been with the radio division. Gable will go to Bancroft, while Brennan has been transferred to the Napanee detachment, transfers to be effective August 1st.

Crowded BCIVS Is Foreseen 1171 Register

Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School will be literally crammed to the doors when classes re-open come September, according to school principal G. E. Currie.

Registration for September classes has already reached 1171 students which is more than 150 increase over that of last year. To accommodate the additional students there will be only one extra classroom—one provided through temporary division of the collegiate library which will hold up to 40 students.

Mr. Currie stated he did not know what would be done to accommodate students expected to enroll for school opening in September 1951. The enrolment then would be up considerably over that of this year and there would be no place to put extra students.

Bancroft Hospital Will Receive $84,117 Special Aid

The Bancroft Red Cross Hospital is among those which will receive further financial assistance from the government, according to an official announcement. It will receive $84,117 in a special grant.

Burks Falls Hospital will receive $81,390 and Wiarton Hospital $72,332.

Obituary

GEORGE HENRY APPLETON

George Henry Appleton, 209½ Front Street, died in Belleville General Hospital on Friday after an illness of three weeks' duration.

Born at Port Whitby, Ontario, the late Mr. Appleton was in his 69th year and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Appleton. For the past forty-eight years he resided in this city and for forty-seven years and up to the time of his illness, he was in the employ of the present Belleville Lock Company and the former owners of the plant. He was a member of the Church of England and a parishioner of Christ Church.

Surviving him are one daughter, Miss Grace Appleton of this city; two brothers, William Appleton and Walter Appleton, both of Toronto. His wife, the former Mary Ellen Hyland, died 24 years ago.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street; the funeral announcement is made in this edition.

LATE MRS. FLORENCE SHORTT

The funeral of Mrs. Florence (Roberts) Shortt, wife of Mr. Joseph E. Shortt, 77 Chatham Street was held from the Pinkston Funeral Home, Victoria Avenue, at Church Street, on Friday afternoon to Bridge Street United Church where an impressive service was conducted by the minister, the Rev. D. C. Amos, who also said the committal prayers at Belleville cemetery.

The funeral was very largely attended and the floral tributes were beautiful and great in number.

The bearers were Lawrence Buck, Harry W. Ackerman, Ernest W. Dickens, Gerald Hyde, Ford Chick and Carey Foster.

LATE WILLIAM JAMES FAYERS

On Friday afternoon the funeral of William James Fayers was held from his late residence, 143 North Front Street. The service there and at Belleville cemetery was conducted by the Rev. H. O. Eastman, minister of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

The bearers were Russell White, Alfred Woods, George Priest, Orville Beer, Fred Noakes and Charles Stewart.

An opponent was Ernest Winch old campaigner who helped draft the manifesto.

"So long as the Regina manifesto stands, we are safe," said the veteran members of the British Columbia. "Marxism is the basis of the CCF and, if Marxism ceases to be the CCF will cease to be."

The convention, beating down a revolt of leftwingers and pacifists from British Columbia, took a stand supporting Canadian aid to United Nations forces in Korea.

International policy discussion was completed yesterday when a resolution was endorsed urging formation of a true international police force. This force should replace troops now in countries other than their own, the CCF added.

Outlawing of the atomic bomb was endorsed. The CCF asked continuous international inspection as a necessary precaution.

The convention, first national CCF meeting to be held in B.C., criticized the federal government. The Liberal administration was accused of betraying those who elected it, riding to victory on hollow promises.

Mr. Coldwell, national president and parliamentary leader since 1942, was re-elected by acclamation for a two year term.

Percy Wright, M.P. for Melfort, Sask., was elected national chairman. He succeeds Frank Scott, Montreal professor of constitutional law who announced his retirement from the post.

SUMMER RECESS

London, July 28 (AP) —Parliament adjourned tonight for a summer recess which will last until Oct. 17—unless it is recalled because of the international situation.

Herbert Morrison, Deputy Prime Minister, told the House of Commons yesterday it may be notified to reassemble at any time if necessary.

Survey of Stores Indicates Tourist Business Generally Lower Than it Was in 1949

The tourist business in the city of Belleville is way below what it was last year, say most merchants and dealers, according to a survey made by The Ontario Intelligencer.

English bone china is the only item reported to be doing a better volume of business than last year. Reason for this was attributed to the devaluation of the English pound, making initial costs less and the favorable rate of exchange on American money which makes chinaware cheaper in Canada than in the United States.

Woollen Business Normal

Some stores reported that the business done in woollen goods and linen was favorable, one claiming that business was about equal in volume to last year's trade, while another stated that business was down somewhat. In all other lines of retail trade the volume of business was reported to be below that registered last year.

Restaurants estimated in some cases that their tourist trade this year was off as much as 60 per cent from that of last year. One proprietor reported that he was equalling last year's trade until about two weeks ago when tourist spending took a sharp drop.

Gasoline outlets report, in most cases that business is below last year's par. Salesmen along Front Street have noted that the Pinnacle Street diversion of all westbound traffic has cut their trade in half. Other gasoline outlets, with new or redecorated stations, point out that improvements have helped their business. They also state that their general level of business is up over last year and that the general rise, due to local spending has made estimates of increased or decreased tourist trade difficult.

Jewellery sales to tourists are reported to be off, men's clothing sales about the same, and five and ten business "satisfactory."

Most dealers reported that they were of the impression that the number of American tourists was down from last year, and that those who were travelling were spending cautiously or, as one man put it, "they are shopping for values."

Many felt that the Korean war situation has deterred tourist travel and there were some instances recorded where younger men were actually cutting their vacations short because they felt that they were about to be called up into the U.S. army.

August Usually Better

It was also pointed out that the tourist season is just at its midpoint by the end of July. The biggest business is "always done in August and early in September," many merchants stated. "Persons who have cottages generally leave for their homes in the United States toward the end of August and do their buying on the way home. We hope for a pick-up in business in August."

Reports that tourist homes, motels and hotels in the Belleville area are not as crowded this season as they were last year seem to bear out the general decline of tourist trade in the city.

Raspberries Hold at 40 Cts., Peaches and Duchess Apples Make Appearance on Market

A few peaches and some Duchess apples were the newcomers on the farmers' market this morning. The peaches, Mayflowers, were being offered at $1.00 for a six-quart basket, with the apples at 70c a basket.

Raspberries were offered in quantity, but the price remained steady at 40c per quart. Blueberries fluctuated between $2.10 and $2.50 per basket, gooseberries were steady at 20c per quart, and blue raspberries were five cents cheaper than the reds. Montmorency cherries were $1.35 and $1.40, with the black cherries at the same price.

Third new offering for the morning was home-grown tomatoes, with growers asking 40c to 45c for a quart box. Other vegetables, for the most part, remained at the midweek level, with carrots, beets and onions selling for 10c per bunch, three for 25c. Beans were 10c for a quart box, or 40c for a six-quart basket. Radishes, both reds and icicles, were 5c per bunch, cabbages, 10c and 15c, according to size.

Corn, making its second quantity appearance, was 60c per dozen, with a fair amount offered. Potatoes remained at 75c per peck. Eggs were moving between 53c and 55c for Grade A large, with medium prices proportionately lower.

New white clover honey was selling at 20c per lb., 40c for two lbs., and 75c for four pounds. Combs were 35c.

No fresh fish were offered.

Progress on New County Home Close to Schedule

Progress at the new county home west of the city is very close to schedule, a trip to the site revealed Friday. The general contractor, J. M. Sullivan, of Arnprior and Kingston, has about 110 men on the job. Foundations for the seven buildings have all been poured, and brick work is well advanced on three.

Material holdups for the job have been few so far, W. K. McKenzie, general superintendent, said. Most of the labor is local, and Mr. McKenzie said that the non-skilled men on the job were "the best." "On the whole," he said, "the labor has been very good."

Several Weeks Delay

The large project was started around March 1, but poor weather and bad ground conditions slowed up progress for five or six weeks. Contract for the construction was let for a little less than $1,000,000, plus extras.

The general superintendent did not arrive on the job until March 13, and then, he said, "we didn't get much done for about five weeks because of the weather." Work at the present time, however, is going ahead in fine style with 11 bricklayers and seven or eight blocklayers on full time. Supplies of brick are just adequate enough to keep ahead of the men. "We are just getting enough brick to keep us going," Mr. McKenzie said, "but other supplies are good."

The administration building, situated at the front centre of the project, is being bricked at the present time, as well as two wings on its sides. Farther back, two ambulatory wings, male and female are being constructed, and still further back are a "senile" building and the boiler house. Construction on the last four as yet is limited mostly to completed foundations.

Sub contracts have been let to Howe and Hagerman, for the plumbing and heating; to C. D. Cole, Kingston, for the electrical work; to the Flynn firm of Toronto for the plastering and to E. P. Carr of Stirling for the roofing.

Original plans of county officials were that the building would be occupied by Christmas, but at the present time authorities will not commit themselves to anything.

Needs More Bricklayers

The number of bricklayers on the scene is limited only by their availability, Mr. McKenzie said. "I would use more if I could get them," he added. Twenty-two carpenters are on the job, the general superintendent said, and they were not as hard to obtain as the bricklayers.

Site of the construction is just south of the county barn buildings which were put up a year ago. Much of the work now is being done is almost invisible, the superintendent said. Sewage control is to be handled by septic tanks, and water overflow will be routed underground, under No. 2 highway, and into the bay.

Mr. McKenzie would set no final completion date, but said that his firm considers the job 50 percent done when the foundations are completed. All the buildings are of one-storey construction, with the exception of the administration building which will be partly two-storey. Laundry facilities are to be installed in the rear part of the administration building.

Walter Thompson Will Soon Retire

Montreal, July 29 —(CP) — Walter S. Thompson, director of public relations for Canadian National Railways and dean of Canada's public relations men, is retiring from the railway's service in October, it was learned today.

A former newspaper man, he has been with the CNR and its predecessor companies for more than 36 years.

Mr. Thompson, who started out more than 50 years ago as a five shilling-a-week "leg boy" in London's Fleet Street, will reach his 65th birthday Oct. 22. Retirement age in the CNR is 65.

There has been no indication who will succeed him.

Mr. Thompson arranged Dominion tours of many an important visitor including the late David Lloyd George, the Duke of Windsor, who then was the Prince of Wales.

He was the first to greet and the last to bid farewell to the King and Queen on their tour of Canada in 1939 and received a Royal thank-you note saying: "Your work called for the combination of the qualities of successful ambassador, a firm but just father of a large family and at times an efficient lion tamer."

At the start of the Second World War he was made director of censorship at Ottawa.

Police Seek Cattle Rustlers

Sarnia, July 29 —(CP)— Modern cattle rustlers who have stolen $15,000 worth of beef cattle in the Lambton-Kent area are being sought by police. It is believed the meat is being shipped to the United States.

Police said they think the rustlers are herding the cattle in farmers' fields into waiting trucks and shipping them by weight to the U.S. at Windsor or slaughtering them somewhere in southwestern Ontario.

Latest raid was made on the old Prescott farm in Dawn township. Some 20 head of cattle, valued at $8,000, were stolen.

TWELVE AUTOS ENTERED

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 28—(CP)—Thieves broke into 12 cars in the General Brock Hotel parking lot here during the night. Police said the loss in clothing and personal effects is nearly $1,000, and that damage to the autos amounted to hundreds of dollars.

THOUSANDS RIOT

Adolphe Max to the Place Rogier in front of the north station, where socialist leader Madame Isabel Blum harangued the crowd: "We are fighting for the good of the country. The gendarmes have no right to strike at us."

Meantime, the gendarmes withdrew into the narrow Rue Neuve to redispose their strength.

The socialist appealed to the crowd to maintain order. Guards were again thrown around parliament.

Workers from anti-Leopold southern Belgium poured into Brussels.

Another battalion of troops was reported to have been ordered into coal-mining sections of Hainaut Province and the strike-bound cities of Charleroi and Mons.

The troops will probably be used to protect power station and steel works.

Anti-Riot Order

The governor of Brabnt Province, which surrounds Brussels, ordered the army to take over power stations and telephone exchanges.

An order forbidding more than three persons to gather together in the streets was expected in all the strike-affected provinces.

A bridge linking two docks at the great Flemish port o Antwerp was blown up, blocking the channel.

The capital's power plants were on reduced production and more than half the city was without public utilities.

Max Buset, leader of the socialist party, said he had been summoned to an audience with the King at Laeken palace but had refused to go.

"I will only go when I know in advance that I will come out with the results you want," he told a meeting of strikers. "Belgium is a democracy which no longer accepts a King of the old kind."

What the workers want from Leopold is nothing less than his agreement he will abdicate.

The only news from Laeken, where the King has been since his return from Switezrland, was that he has chosen his personal secretariat.

SHERIFF SHOT AND KILLED

Pikeville, Ky., July 29 — (AP) —Sheriff Roy Conway, Pike county crusader against gambling and bootlegging, was shot and killed last night.

State police said the sheriff, about 40, received an anonymous telephone call shortly before 11 p.m. and was told to come out in front of his home. He stepped outside and was felled by a bullet which struck him in the temple.

Job Prospects in Trenton District 'Quite Favorable' Says Local Employment Office Manager

Trenton—(Special)— "Employment prospects are quite favorable for the next few months," said J. W. A. Russell, manager of Trenton Unemployment Insurance office in releasing employment statistics for July.

"One drawback is that canning factories are completing their pea processing operations but as there have been small layoffs in some factories, the labor has been absorbed in other industries."

Figures for the end of July show 80 unplaced female job applicants and 119 men, for total of 199. This number of unemployed in the district served by the Trenton office shows a sharp drop from the beginning of July when a total of 292 registered job applicants were listed. Last year at this time, there were 95 female applicants and 213 men registered at the local office This year there are 109 fewer people in Trenton and district who are looking for work, through the employment office.

During July, the local office placed 100 male workers and 49 female workers. At the present time, there are nine unfilled vacancies for women and 19 job opening for men. Of the 80 women who are listed as being available for work, 65 per cent are married. Twenty-two of the 119 male job seekers are under 20 and 54 are over 45.

In Northumberland County, there are 12 western farmers assisting with the haying. These men start to return to Western Canada about Aug. 15.

Mr. Russell said that "there is no scheme at present but something may develop in regard to Ontario farmers going west to help with the grain harvest, "We have only had two enquiries from farmers in this district," he said.

Trent Cotton Mills have reduced the number of days in their work week, but Mr. Russell said that this was something that has developed in all industries dealing with cottons. The same thing occurred last year earlier in the summer.

HIS BIGGEST SALE LAST TUESDAY

The cash register said "No Sale", but actually the pharmacist chalked up the biggest sale of the day : : : he had helped sell a man back his health, his happiness : : . in fact, his life.

It had been a busy morning in the prescription room, but the pharmacist was aware of a man who stood near the telephone booth for quite a time, apparently looking up numbers in the directory. As soon as there were no other customers within hearing, he approached the counter saying: "I think I may have a venereal disease : : : will you give me something I can take to clear it up?"

The pharmacist took the customer aside where they could talk quietly and inconspicuously. In a friendly manner he talked to him about these diseases. He explained their dangers quite frankly. He told him the truth—there are no drugs which will cure venereal diseases that are safe for self-medication. But he also explained that medical science has developed modern drugs which, in the hands of a doctor, materially reduce the time required to treat these diseases.

The pharmacist sold that customer : : : sold him on going to a physician for effective treatment that would rehabilitate his health, his family life, and his usefulness to society. With those few minutes of advice the pharmacist sold that man back his life.

It was the biggest sale he made last Tuesday. Giving dependable professional advice is but one phase of your pharmacist's contribution to public health and welfare of your community.—Reprinted from a copyrighted advertisement published by Parke, Davis & Company.

Vacation on the Porch

This is, of course, the season, and there are many ways in which to spend that vacation. When Friday night comes to strike the chains binding Caliban to desk he is within his rights to jump into the car and drive rapidly fifteen hundred miles to the west, turning then for the second half of the fortnight. Or, if he wills, writes a New York Times columnist, he can pack his fishing tackle for a vacation to be spent along the banks of a stream, or on the shore of a quiet lake. He can go to a summer hotel, with a rock-ribbed tennis court but with music in the evening, or he can visit such wonders of the world as Niagara, natural caverns and the bubbling springs where the devil himself brews up his sulphurous tea. Each of these wonders gets its smaller or larger share of Caliban on vacation, and as that unhappy figure again puts on the Monday chains he has stickers and signs, pictures and sunburn to prove that he has been away. He is able to be envied by all, or by almost all. He is to be envied, and perhaps emulated, by that part of the brotherhood which does not go on vacation for another week and by that part long since returned. He will not be envied, however, by all, just almost all. For there is a part of the world so content that envy finds no place in its good nature or good spirit; it lives apart from envy. This part is the one which spends its vacation on the porch, at home.

No Final Packing

Consider this Caliban released on Friday night and shaking hands as he starts on his vacation. There is no need for him to rush home to supervise last-minute packing, dashing to the corner drugstore fo rthat new tube of toothpaste which is a necessity for travel. He is going nowhere, so he can stroll slowly, sitting on a park bench for a time, if he likes, or taking the leisurely bus instead of the subway express. Dinner that night is good, for the one not going away but still at the start of vacation. Dinner that night is so good that it can be lingered over until darkness settles down outside, and a careless glance at the clock notes the surprising fact that it is time for bed. The vacationer of the porch need not undergo the midnight flurry of checking equipment and extra shirts, and that other dash to the drugstore for additional film for the camera.

Exercise on Runners

As the days of his vacation drift by, he grows increasingly content. Several times a day he can take exercise, not enough to strain his muscles into flaming bands of pain, but just that ideal amount which is scientifically measured by the arc of the rocking chair. As he exercises, he can think. His thoughts are not bound by the question whether he can pass the car ahead before reaching the double white line and the red traffic light; they are bounded by nothing. He can think of all matters of the universe, thinking freely since no decisions need be made. If conscience troubles him momentarily to point that the window screen behind him needs replacing, he can even think of that. He can think of it, but he need do nothing, since he is on vacation.

Night on the Porch

Possibly he can even sleep on the porch, although porches suitable for that are growing more infrequent, in vacation land and out. He can lie on his cot at the end of his porch and look out and up to where the stars of the little Dipper clearly are pouring him another large cup of contentment. When Thursday afternoon's downpour picks up the gale of a northeaster, he need not leave his warm bed to see that the stakes of the tent are firm, and he need not worry about dry wood for the breakfast coffee. Lying in bed at night of a vacation spent on the porch, he can hear the distant sounds, gay and sad, that he will hear at no other time, that in the summer hotel would be lost in the blare of the juke box. There are sounds of distant trains and of owls and the mournful cries of the loon and the mourning dove, and the staccato chirp which may or may not be that of the cricket. Fireflies light on the bushes beside his bed, tracing futuristic patterns in the night, and the mosquitos and other summer vultures whine angrily against the screen, but on the other, the outer, side. Night passes and then there is the dawn, and no dawn ever is so clear, so rosily smiling, as the dawn that peeks in upon the vacationer on the porch, summoning him once again to his exercise in the chair and afterward to rest.

Book Review

SUMMER WINDOW
By Roger White

(Reviewed by Boyd Upper)

"Summer Window" is an eight-page compilation of eleven of Mr. White's poems and marks his first appearance in book form.

The poems, ranging widely in style and content, are, with two exceptions, written in the loosely constructed form of most "modern" poetry and for this reason are rather difficult to understand if one has been brought up to believe that verse should rhyme and be cast in a suitable form.

The poem "Summer Window" which lends its name to the book would seem to be the author's best work in his own estimation but the reviewer believes that "The Innocent Ogress" deserves the palm.

"Summer Window" which deals with the author's speculation on the inexorable round of nature which destroys in order to rebuild, and this consideration of his own life as a part of this routine—a life which is marked by resigned hopelessness over his inability to discover what he seeks in this life—is peculiarly constructed and tends to leave the reader confused the first few times he reads it.

It has a few flashes of fire in it, but like heat lightning on a summer's night, the flashes never boom out but die an aborted death leaving nothing but a sticky feeling in the air.

On the other hand, "The Innocent Ogress" is a poem with real feeling It is the story of an old spinster, as told by herself. Her sense of aloneness is delicately captured to arouse the reader's sympathy without any apparent effort to do so. The story and language are simple, the emotion produced genuine, and the sentiment well modulated. "The Ogress" for she is considered as such by the children in her neighborhood, will call up familiar pictures of your own childhood "Ogress" and let you see her, perhaps for the first time, as a lonely old woman.

The other poems in the book are not up to "The Innocent Ogress." Some are glib, some are shallow, and a few have O. Henry endings that would outdo the master himself. On the whole they are worth a chuckle.

The author deserves credit for the production of a book of poetry at a time when poetry is not as popular as in earlier days. He will undoubtedly bleed freely by baring his chest to the critics but since the writing and publishing of poetry, is, for him, a pleasant diversion, he should not scar too terribly.

Law of the Jungle Spreads to Jungle

Durban, South Africa — (CP) — The International pre-occupation with the law of the jungle has spread to—the jungle. Hunters and wardens are unable to account for an unprecedented outbreak of aggression among the animals in Natal's wild game preserves.

The dangerous temper of Africa's wild life is particularly noticeable among those formidable fighting machines — the rhinoceros and hippopotamus. The already thinning ranks of the rare white rhino have been seriously depleted recently by numerous duels to the death for leadership of the herds. Vanquished survivors, expelled by their fellows, have escaped from the reserves through the electrified fences and are damaging crops and attacking cattle.

The animals are not only fighting and killing each other, but they are terrorizing humans. Many rhinos now will charge at the first sight of man and many visitors to the reserves have been treed. Usually photographers are able to approach them.

Hippos are also in militant mood. At least a dozen have met their death in battle and boating and fishing parties have had narrow escapes.

There is an element of germ warfare in the conflict. Farmers fear that the refugee rhino may re-introduce the dreaded Nagana (sleeping sickness) among their stock. Nagana has only recently been eliminated after many years by a full-scale air campaign with modern insecticides sprayed from planes over the jungle breeding places of the Tstetse fly.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND
BY WINIFRED E. WILSON

BARELY INDEPENDENT

Almost as soon as birds break from the shell they are given instructions as to when and where to hide from their enemies. Go near a nest of tiny, scrawny robins and you will hear their mother, or father, or both shouting out orders about keeping still so as to avoid detection. Then glance at the nestlings and see how they obey.

This series of lessons continues for some time after the birds are old enough to leave home, and another subject appears on the curriculum: what food should be eaten, and where and how it is to be obtained. Young redwinged blackbirds have a choice of weed seeds, grain and insects, but are fed in the bushes for quite a while. The food problem is difficult for any youngster in birdland; but it may be imagined that a flicker has a much easier job picking up ants than on osprey diving for fish.

Well into August you can expect to come across birds nearly as big as their parents (perhaps their short tails being the only evidence that they are juveniles) still getting a meal without any effort on their part because even though able to do some flying, they are barely independent. Mother keeps a watchful eye on her young ones. Little bluebirds and wrens are put to bed each night; young marsh hawks fly a bit farther from home each day.

Certain species can go on their own steam almost as soon as hatched. This applies to plovers, gulls and terns. Therefore Mother Nature, as a precautionary measure, provides them with special downy costumes at birth. These are made with daring contrasts of light and dark, giving a blotched appearance and providing excellent camouflage, because the outline is broken up. Although able to get over the ground fast as soon as hatched, shore birds are brooded by their parents for some time. Herring gulls are able to swim almost immediately. Even after they are capable of flying long distances, juvenile terns are still fed by the adults. Rails and woodpeckers run around right away, so must carefully obey parental commands.

Mother grouse needs to be patient for her large family keeps close to her for many weeks. The same may be said for Mother duck who actually makes herself a pleasure steamer, carrying her whole family on her back when she swims. Wood ducklings follow their mother from their home in a hollow tree to some quiet stream or pond.

HEAVIER PENALTIES FORECAST

Ontario's drivers are losing their licenses at the rate of 1,000 a month this year. In the first six months of 1950, the government suspended 6,558 driving licenses, almost a thousand more than for the same period in 1950.

The bulk of the suspensions came from careless driving charges, but liquor also played a big part. Almost 700 suspensions sprung from a mixture of liquor and gasoline.

When the figures have been digested, it is easy to realize why safety authorities turn grey. Traffic tolls zoom higher every year, with holiday weekends assuming the characteristics of massacres. Such absolute carnage as we witnessed on this continent over the American Independence Day weekend is ridiculous.

Figures are dry until one interprets them in the light of the fatalities, injuries and broken homes. The unhappiness caused by careless and drunken driving can never be measured by statistics. Only the anguish of deprived relatives and friends can make the highway toll felt.

The number of licences suspended in half of 1950 is shocking, but it is evidently not enough, because the Highways Minister promises that heavier penalties will be imposed for infractions of the law. Until the public realizes that the authorities mean business, the needless suffering will continue. Once the realization is there, it is to be hoped that the drivers will use more common sense by being more careful and less inclined to drive and drink at the same time in the case of those who do.

WHAT'S IN A NAME AND A FAMILY

The other day there appeared news of interest to the lovers of music and especially British music in an article which stated that William Wordsworth has just won a competition at the Edinburgh Festival of Music and Drama. His award was one hundred and fifty pounds sterling for a symbolic work in which he successfully competed against sixty other competitors.

The name of Wordsworth in association with the arts has long been known in the field of poetry, for William Wordsworth who was born in 1770 and died in 1850 was one of its great masters. He was a member of the famous writers of the back-to-nature or romantic school which included names which are assured of an eternity of fame, as Coleridge, Byron, Shelley and Keats, while far before these modern masters there were other masters of romanticism, like Edmund Spenser and the master of all poets, Shakespeare. The influence of the Wordsworth tradition in poetry is potent to this very day and influences writers in the English-speaking world.

So the spirit of the arts runs in families, it seems. The Wordsworths prove it by their talent or genius in two different arts. But of course the arts are all associated whether poetry, music, painting or sculpture. It should not cause any wonder that a Wordsworth should appear prominent in music when generations before one of his kinsmen sounded the note of nature in verse that still endures and exercises an influence upon the people of one generation to another.

Actually, too, in English literature there is a poet named Dante Gabriel Rossetti who was also a painter of distinction, while his sister, Christina, was a noted poet and their father excelled in poetry.

WATER BOMBS

The juvenile trick of filling a paper bag with water and dropping it out of a second storey window on any convenient target will be put to good use by the Department of Lands and Forests, if experiments turn out as hoped.

The Department plans to use special wax-lined paper bags, filled with about five gallons of water each, to fight incipient forest fires. The Department already has a fleet of small planes, and has used them for several years to spot fires and transport men and materials to the lake nearest an outbreak, but the method of fighting fire direct from the air is new.

The plane makes its approach as low as possible, and each machine can carry about ten of the "water bombs." These can be released in "sticks" of three, and small fires can be squelched at once. Even fires that are beginning to spread a little might be checked by an attack by several planes, if conditions were favorable.

The water bombs are meant for use against small fires. They would be useless against any forest blaze once it was well started. But when a thin stream of smoke is spotted, it may sometimes be possible to keep it from developing into a vast fire between the time that it is first seen and crews can get to it. —Stratford Beacon Herald.

DIVERSION

American engineers are giving serious study to the possibility of diverting water from the Columbus River to Southern California and adjacent desert regions, and say that the scheme is considered physically possible. Of course, it is still only a dream, but the United States has a curious habit of making dreams come true. The U.S. economy is not stagnating. The country is growing and expanding as rapidly as ever before. Water is the chief bottleneck in the Southwestern States, and the redirection of rivers may remove the bottleneck, says Calgary Albertan.

This is of interest to Canada, for most of the water in the Columbia River comes from Canada. The whole of Eastern British Columbia feeds that river. Water drained from the mountains within 50 miles of Calgary might be used to sprinkle the lawns in Hollywood.

JUST FOLKS

THE IMPORTANT MAN

Mr. Big came walking by
When in trouble deep was I,
Motor stalled and wouldn't start.
Mr. Big is not so smart.
All he said was: "I don't know
How to get the thing to go."

Mr. Wise was next to pass.
Merely muttered: "Out of gas?"
"No. Just filled the tank," I said.
Mr. Wise then shook his head.
Notwithstanding all he knew,
Couldn't tell me what to do.

Big, important men are they,
As the papers often say.
More important then to me
Was the youth in dungaree
Who that moment came along,
Knew and righted what was wrong.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

July 29th., 1930

In the Federal elections yesterday, the Liberal Government of Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King was defeated and the Conservative party, led by the Hon. R. B. Bennett was elected to power. At 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, following the elections, the Canadian Press gave the standings of the parties as follows: Liberals 85; Conservatives 138; U.F.A. 1; Progressive 2; Liberal Progressive 2; Labor 3; Independent 2; doubtful 3.

In South Hastings W. E. Tummon, Conservative, was re-elected over Charles E. Hanna, Liberal by a majority of 2654. The total vote was: Tummon, 8159; Hanna 5505. In Hastings-Peterborough, Dr. A. T. Embury, Conservative, was re-elected over C. Fraser Aylsworth, Liberal, by a majority reported to be over 3,000. In Prince Edward-Lennox, John A. Weese, Conservative, defeated William Benson, Liberal, by a majority of 1462.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In the rattlesnake country of the middle and south-western states, there was a general belief that snakes hate tobacco. A cow hand, before turning in under his tarp on the lonely prairie, used to squirt a goodnight chew of tobacco juice in various directions around his chosen sleeping place. To the belief that the snake will not cross a rope, the cowboys used to rub down a lariat with tobacco juice and then lay the rope in a circle around their tarp or tent.

How many cowhands escaped being bitten by rattlers as the result of these precautions is not on record. A biologist assures me that as far as he knows, snakes have no special aversion to tobacco. But cowboys have told me that if you hit a rattler accurately on the head with tobacco juice, the snake shows every sign of intense distress. Of course, for that matter, so would we all.

None the less, there may be some antipathy for tobacco among snakes. For at the summer resort with which I am best acquainted, there are a normal number of snakes amongst the wild life population. And it begins to appear that the cottages inhabited by smokers are less visited by these polished creatures than those occupied by non-smokers. Around a smoker's cottage is bound to be a certain infusion of tobacco on the ground, from tamped-out butts of cigarettes and cigars, and the dottles of pipes. The rain must wash a distillation of nicotine into every cranny of the rock or soil, erecting a barrier around the premises—if snakes dislike nicotine.

Being stone deaf, snakes have to rely on their sense of taste—with their little, darting tongues testing the air—and it just might be that the odor of tobacco does repel them.

Strength for the Day

MORAL ISOLATION IS DANGEROUS

People sometimes talk about church attendance as if its only benefit consisted of listening to good preaching. As a matter of fact, the sermon is of secondary importance in every church service. The thing of chief value is worship. Right after worship comes fellowship. To meet in a sanctuary with people who hold the same beliefs as we do, who press toward the same objectives and who in general share a common outlook on life, means for most of us inspiration, support amid the temptations of life, comfort in sorrows, pleasant relationship with neighbors, and a confidence in the eventual triumph of good over evil.

The apostle Peter is such an outstanding Biblical character largely because he was more like the average, weak, stumbling, but well-intentioned Christian believer that almost any other figure in the Bible. It is interesting to note that he was alone on the night he committed his great sin by denying Jesus. Perhaps if there had been one other disciple with him he might have had courage. Alone amid the enemies of Christ, he was shorn of all his defences.

We are well advised to seek our friends among the right kind of people. There is no factor upon which we can rely so confidently in our attempt to live the good life as the fellowship and moral support of Christian believers.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

JUNIOR'S U.N.

Regina, Sask.—I had breakfast this morning with the Security Council of the United Nations. The delegate from Soviet Russia, in deadly earnest, told me that the whole mess in Korea would end tomorrow if he had his way.

"Gosh," he said (and these are his exact words), "if everybody would just sit down and talk about it the way they ought to, it could be all fixed up in one session."

This delegate, unfortunately, is not Comrade Jacob Malik, but Master Jack Renouf, aged 13. He does not present his views to the United Nations at Lake Success, but to the United Nations of a hamlet called Loyalty, in the province of Alberta, some hundred miles north of Calgary.

But let's slow down and get into the story. Which is about the principal of a two-room farm country school house who had a bright idea.

He thought his pupils ought to know a bit about what was going on in the world, as well as Julius Caesar's. So, as part of his social studies course, he set up a make-believe Security Council.

The brightest 11 students in the school were appointed as delegates. Each Thursday, with the whole school in attendance, the principal took the role of Trygve Lie. The 11 students took the roles of the delegates. And they re-enacted the latest sessions of the council.

The principal hoped his idea would have a modest success and is just as surprised as anybody that he and his boys and girls are now enroute to be feted at Lake Sucess, entertained by President Truman and facing a brisk schedule of engagements with radio microphones and movie cameras.

Sudden Fame

The troupe, which travels in its own Pullman, is currently in Regina before moving eastward. This morning I was invited to an informal beakfast in their honor and met the man who started it all, George G. Fellowes, a tall, intense and nail-chewing fellow who looks just a little wild-eyed about recent events.

"Never dreamed of this sort of thing," Fellowes confessed. "Oh, naturally I was pleased with how we were coming along. Started last September when the term began and it seemed to be progressing well. The parents themselves became interested — had to, I guess. Youngsters began getting a little sharp with them.

"We had hoped that we might send three of our students down to New York to see the real council. But then, just two months ago, we seem to have become suddenly famous.

"It started when a Calgary newspaper sent a man up to do a piece about us. Then the CBC put us on the air briefly and much to our astonishment, the National Broadcasting Company telegraphed us and invited us all to fly to New York at their expense for a broadcast. We couldn't do it, of course. Not during the term.

"Well, my goodness, things certainly started to hum then. The people at UN invited us all down for a visit and arrangements were made in Washington for us to meet the President and —oh, my!—any number of things!

"A fund was got up and something like $4,000 raised, a good deal of it from donations by the farmers, some of it as the result of appearances the children made. A big sign went up outside Loyalty proclaiming us 'Little Lake Success.' Had it copyrighted, by the way. And now here we are and with a 10-gallon hat, of all things, from the city of Calgary to give the President. Size seven-and-an-eighth."

Fellowes took a deep breath. "Don't take any credit for this at all, you understand," he said. "Just got the right school, the right youngsters, and the support of all the people. But I do think it's worthwhile. Where adults are falling down in finding peace and understanding maybe children can succeed."

Happy Russian

Perhaps the most refreshing aspect of this Security Council (Junior Division) are the youngsters themselves. They are nearly all the sons or daughters of farmers. Not a quiz kid in the pack. None had ever been out of Alberta. Only three had travelled on a train before. Fellowes himself confided in me, "They're not very sophisticated. Had to warn them not to talk to strangers."

The four girls looked at ease in light dresses and saddle shoes, but the seven boys were clearly dying in obviously new suits, the sleeves of which all seemed to hang too long.

The youngest in the party is Joyce Renouf, a dark little girl of 11 who is the delegate from France. I asked one of the boys about Joyce and he replied, "Oh, Peanuts is swell. In Calgary she had to defend the status of women and she was terrific."

The kids know the workings of the UN backwards and forwards and have their own opinions about the news from Lake Success. Joyce's brother, Jack, who is the Peck's bad boy of the gang and who impersonates Russia's spokesman, let me know in a firm voice that he's only acting and that, in his own private opinion, he would sure like Mr. Malik to be a little more co-operative.

I wondered if Jack was displeased with his role and he grinned and said, "Gosh, no. I've got the best part there is. 'Bout all I do is get up and walk out."

"Besides," he added happily, "if I wasn't in the Council I might never get down to New York to see the Giants play."

Deepest Ocean Chasm Found Off Philippines

From Newsweek Magazine

At some half a dozen spots around the world, the ocean floor is scared by giant, curved chasms that extend miles down into the earth's crust. They are usually found on the convex side of volcanic island chains, such as Japan, the Aleutians and the Carolines.

Some geologists think that these spots are depressions formed as volcanoes sucked up underlying rock. These "trenches," as they are called, mark the deepest points in the ocean. The deepest of all is the Mindanao trench, 450 miles long, 3 to 6 miles wide, off the east coast of the Philippines.

In 1929, as they wandered all over the world, officers of the German cruiser Emden took soundings of the Mindanao trench and announced the deepest spot in the whole ocean—a 4,900 fathom (35,400-foot) pin-point which the Germans named Emden Deep. Since then, American scientists have wondered if more up-to-date electronic equipment might not reveal errors in the Emden figuring.

During the war, despite Japanese plane attacks, an American Navy transport commander, H. H. Hess, took another set of soundings off the Philippines. Every five minutes his depth-recording instruments would send out a muffled clang; several seconds later there would return a faint "ping", while mechanical graph recorded the depths.

After the war, back at the Navy Hydrographic Office in Washington, Hess and a hydrographic engineer, M. W. Buell Jr., went to work interpreting the graphs. Their findings, recently released in the transactions of the American Geophysical Union, revealed that the deepest spot in the ocean is a point 45 miles north of Emden Deep which Hess named the Cape Johnson Deep after his Navy transport. They estimated the deep to be 34,300 feet (about 6.4 miles) or much deeper than the highest mountain, Mount Everest (29,002 feet,) is tall. The Emden Deep, they figured, was a mere 33,192 feet. The German sounding, they explained, was less accurate and couldn't be aimed as carefully as the modern Navy instruments.

What is it like at the deepest spot in the ocean? Buell and Hess think the walls of the trench slope down gradually (about an 8-foot drop for every hundred feet), and that the fine mud silt covers the bottom. The water about 85 degrees Fahrenheit at the surface, becomes black at about 700 feet below (sunlight doesn't go any farther) and turns as cold as 35 degrees at about 10,000 feet, or one-third of the way down. Near the bottom, it gradually warms up to 38 to 40 degrees.

Life probably can be found near the bottom of the trenches, including crustaceans, sponges, and strange fish with their own headlights. But there can be no plant life in this pitch-black world. Sea plants need sun.

The second deepest spot in the sea, according to Hess and Buell, probably is the Ramapo Deep, off the coast of Japan. The depth is 34,038 feet according to a sounding made by the USS Ramapo about fifteen years ago. This too is open to question. There still may be deeper undiscovered spots in the ocean.

THE AUTHORITIES ARE STUCK WITH IT

Just what is a medical authority? Hum-m-m?

Webster says authority is power derived from opinion, respect or esteem; influence of character, office or station, or mental or moral superiority. That definition allows considerable room for differences of opinion.

It seems that medical authorities carried a lot of weight a century ago. When an eminent, leading, noted or well known physician, surgeon or specialist "pronounced" something thus and so, in the good old days no one ventured to question it. That's how medical authorities got that way.

Today nobody can get away with a mere opinion. If a doctor tries it today we're all from Missouri. Let's see your clinical records, we answer. Or the published report of your experimental work. If the doctor is not prepared to substantiate his claim, view of opinion with such evidence he gets nowhere.

Now I'll stick my neck out far enough to say take the permeability of the unbroken skin, for example. Medical literature of an earlier era was full of statements by celebrated medical authorities to the effect that this, that and the other chemical, drug, poison or nutritive material could enter the body through the "pores" of the skin under certain circumstances.

As recently as twelve years ago the weekly of the American Medical Association carried a leading article—misleading would be a better word for it—by some eager beaver who badly asserted that he had proved by experiments on animals that numerous alkaloids, such as strychnine, morphine, quinine, atropine, cocaine, are absorbed through the unbroken skin when applied to the skin surface. The miracle man who contributed the remarkable report did not deem it necessary to describe how he controlled his experiments so that the animals could not lick their skin, the floor or bars of their cages, or inhale enough of the alkaloid as dust or, in the instance of nicotine, as vapor, to show the effects of the drug.

As already indicated, it is easy to find inferences if not outright assertions in what purports to be modern medical literature, to the effect that some medicines, chemicals or poisons may be absorbed through the unbroken skin. Sometimes the author of the statement pretends to substantiate it by saying that he or she applied the medicine or chemical to the skin and then within an hour found it present in the urine, which proved it had been absorbed — only, unfortunately, presence of the chemical, drug or poison in the urine or in the blood does not prove it has been absorbed through the skin.

For a century or more doctors believed that mercurial ointment ("blue salve") applied to the skin by inunction produced the systemic effects of mercury absorbed through the skin. Today doctors know that any systemic effects produced by mercury so applied depends upon the circumstances, which determine how much mercury is volatilized by the heat of the body and how much of the volatilized mercury is inhaled. In short doctors today know that mercury is not absorbed through the unbroken skin, and inunctions of mercurial ointment are rarely prescribed.

If a workman is likely to absorb nicotine from a tobacco solution or so-called "nicotine" solution spilled on his clothes he absorbs in through his lungs — nicotine being very volatile or readily converted from liquid (colorless when pure) to vapor by the warmth of the body of course if such a workman continues to wear the overalls or other clothing on which the tobacco or nicotine solution was spilled, he will continue to inhale the poison for as long as he wears the soiled clothes; just as did the old timers continue inhaling volatilized mercury as long as they wore soiled clothing or avoided thorough washing after the inunction.

For the steenteenth time I tell you that there is no evidence that the unbroken skin absorbs anything. The "authorities" are stuck with the idea that the skin absorbs some things and they just haven't the courage to admit that they are wrong.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Cryptorchidism

Three healthy children. Youngest, boy, has only one testicle. Should he be operated on to bring down the testicle, or will it drop later in life. He is 28 months old. (A. R. D.)

Answer—Usually spontaneous descent occurs when the boy is ten or 13 years old.

Turn Old One in For New One

Husband's hair has been falling out very fast. Is there any cure for this? (T. P.)

Answer—When they begin to wither at the top there is not much to do but turn 'em in—but it will do no harm to try the suggestions in booklet The Hair and Scalp. For a copy send twenty-five cents and stamped self-addressed envelope.

Have never seen anything on St. Vitus's dance. Daughter, 13, had rheumatic fever five years ago and St. Vitus's dance followed it. (Mrs. P. A.)

Answer—Send stamped self-addressed envelope and ask in writing for pamphlet on Chorea.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE SENSE OF BIRDS

Among our loveliest of friends are the birds that fly about our homes, sing their songs and raise their little families. I have always loved birds, but they are shy creatures. Thoreau had this to say: "Birds certainly are afraid of man. They allow all other creatures — cows and horses, etc. — excepting only one or two kinds, birds or beasts of prey, to come near them, but not man."

Why is this? Thoreau answers by saying: "Man, too, is a beast of prey to them. They know very well that he is not humane, as he pretends to be." That is a disappointing inditement, but Thoreau may have had something there. I do know that, lover of birds as I am, it is difficult to get near to them, or to photograph them, excepting with a telephoto lens of high quality.

The sense of birds is highly developed. They know their friends, young birds, taken from the nest, kindly treated and reared, do appreciate man's efforts toward friendship, but the cases are rare. In the city the doves fly to one's hand and creep the streets without fear, but it is because they are not harmed and have long learned that they have friends.

In their natural state in the forest, or wide open spaces, these birds have a sense of fear for man, and this is unfortunate. Too many of them have met a tragic fate, and perhaps the news has been circulated! Thousands of them have been caged and cheated of their birthright. I recall the plaintive cry of a nightingale, caged in a store at Miami, Florida. I could hear its cry a block away, and when I stood before its cage, I seemed to sense its own sorrow, or its hope for freedom. How I wished to become its liberator!

When in Hawaii I viewed gorgeous and skillfully made robes and strands that came from the feathers of rare birds that had been captured. Happily a law against this was created, but not, I fear, before most of the birds became extinct. How much we owe to these happy songsters, however. How they tune the earth to a sense of God!

News of Trenton

Sport Briefs From Trenton

Trenton, (Special) —Leadership in the Trent Valley Softball League was at stake last night, when Trenton Chevrolets met Frankford Merchants in Frankford. Although Norm McCue's boys have been cooling their heels for over a week they still enjoyed a one-game lead over Frankford prior to Thursday night's encounter. Depending on the outcome, Chevrolets are either out in front by two games or tied with the Merchants for top spot.

Ontario Amateur Softball Association League affiliations for this season released this week show Trenton in the Intermediate "B" class of zone 4 with Cobourg, East Whitby, Parham, Portsmouth, Renfrew County and Whitby.

Trenton Junior "C" team is listed with Cobourg, East Whitby, North Oshawa, Westmount and Whitby. Last year, the Trenton Juniors were knocked out in the first round by Cobourg but better things are expected this year under the coaching of Charlie Drake with Ray Mitts looking after the managing duties.

On Tuesday night at 8 p.m. the Juniors will play an exhibition game with Benedict Proctor at Bayshore Park. The Silvermen are currently leading the three team Industrial loop and routed Hinde and Dauch 10 to 3 last Tuesday evening. Thursday night, the Juniors will see further action in an exhibition tilt with Hinde and Dauch papermen.

Next week, Chevrolets will tangle with Campbellford in home games on Monday and Friday nights. The Trent Valley League schedule will wind up next week and barring a series of upsets, Trenton and Frankford will probably occupy the two top positions, with Chevrolets having the best chance of leading the loop.

Chevrolets are just as hard to beat in exhibition games as they are in regular league play. The Chevies' latest exhibition victims are Crawford Metals of the Belleville Commercial League "B" section who were trounced 18 to 10 by the Weesemen at Bayshore Park Wednesday night.

Norm McCue used four pitchers to down the Crawford Metalmen and Doug Whitley connected for a grand slam homer—his first hit of the season (of the round trip type.)

Present indications are that Trenton will have a junior O.R.F.U. football team this fall. Two workouts were held at Bain Memorial Park this week. Recreation Director Jack Dean is coaching the junior pigskin carriers and reports that 19 boys turned out for the first practice Tuesday night and about the same number were on hand Thursday evening.

There are no other junior rugby teams in this district but Jack intends to arrange for Trenton to get a bye into the Ontario O.R.F.U. playdowns.

Thursday night, the recreation director announced that the location of the supervised playground for children west of the river will be changed from Dufferin Street School to Hanna Park, starting Monday. Mr. Vic Swirzon physical education instructor at Trenton High School is in charge of the playground but so far, the number of children attending has been disappointing. The Recreation Commission was considering closing the playground but reconsidered and obtained permission from the Parks Board to use Hanna Park where there are swings, teeters, slides and a soft drink concession on grounds. In announcing the change of location, Jack Dean said that in addition to these advantages, "there appear to be more children in that part of town."

Board Approves Sewer Construction Hospital Debenture

Trenton—(Special)—Final approval for an expenditure of $2-130 for construction of a sanitary sewer on Campbell Street has been given by the Ontario Municipal Board, clerk-treasurer O. W. Larry announced Thursday.

The sanitary sewer will be constructed from Princess Street to a point 515 feet north of Princess. Town engineer R. E. Davey said that construction will begin in about two weeks.

Trenton—The Ontario Municipal Board has informed clerk-treasurer O. W. Larry that it will approve the $125,000 Hospital debenture for the completion and initial operating costs of Trenton and District Memorial Hospital.

"THIEVES"

Altona, Australia—(CP)— Eric Lambert, 28-year-old veteran of North Africa and New Guinea, has been given a fellowship to write a novel entitled "Twenty Thousand Thieves." The title is the name given the Australian troops by William Joyce — Lord Haw-Haw. The book will be the story of the Australian campaigns in the near and Middle East.

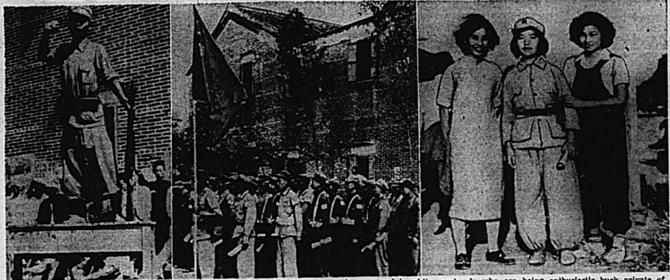
Photos Show How Communism is Being Spread Among Masses of Chinese



Refugees from Manchuria report that the Chinese are massing a huge army on the North Korean border. These photos are among the few that have come out of the Chinese interior since the Communist government has gained control, show what is going on there The girl, centre right, is native of a small town who has joined the women's army and is congratulated by friends as she leaves for Manchuria. Middle photo shows a group of political workers, distinguished by their white armbands who are being instructed to spread Communist philosophy among the people. They are often given arms and wield police authority. Left, an enthusiastic buck private of the Chinese army harangues a crowd on the virtues of communism. —Central Press Canadian.

U.S. TROOPS NOW TRUST NO ONE

Hotel, Beer Parlor On N.W.T. Trapline

Edmonton — (CP)—Northland trapping isn't what it used to be, says 46-year-old Seymour Evanson, Norwegian-American who traps beaver and mink on the Upper Laird River in the Northwest Territories.

Building of the Alaska Highway has linked the northland's outposts with the modern world.

"There's a hotel and a beer parlor on my trapline now," says Evanson.

He and his wife, a city girl, can go to a movie show twice a week at the nearby Watson Lake Army Base.

In summer they can see a baseball game once a week.

The lonely line camp has undergone some alterations, too. Evanson's main cabin, a neat four-room bungalow, is right on the highway. It's fully modern with hot and cold running water.

The Evansons now bring in their own supplies by truck, purchased since the highway was opened. That means another northland tradition has gone by the board.

"The days when you spent the whole summer packing in are gone," the trapper says. "It used to be a full summer job just getting ready for winter."

Robert Service wouldn't know the place.

Long Hair Will be Vogue In Paris This Coming Winter

By FLORENCE MILLS

Paris, July 29. (AP)—It looks as though long hair will be the vogue in Paris next Winter.

Mannequins wearing the new Fall models at the fashion shows are letting their hair grow.

Jacques Fath's mannequins, whose hair is always dressed by Georgel, famous Paris hair stylist, have pompadour styles finishing well below the ears at the back.

All through the short-hair craze, Spanish designer Balenciaga has made his mannequins stick to large chignons worn low on the neck.

Fall fashions that looked as though they were out of a musical comedy were shown yesterday by the youngest designers in Paris, 24-year-old Alwyn.

Greeted last season as a second Dior, Alwyn showed dresses that were skin-tight and figure-revealing. Fur trimming was used liberally.

Alwyn calls his new silhouette the "fan line" and carries it out in deep purple, mauves, grey and black. Hips and bust are emphasized with fan drapery.

Ten coats have fullness falling like a fan from the shoulder blades.

Dresses have necklets of silver-blue mink, black lamb or ocelot and bands of the same fur laid around the hips or rimming the cascades of drapery.

Hobble dresses are shown by Alwyn for evening. A dress in black velvet had a halter built up into a neckband of leopardskin and a deep flounce of the same fur around the bottom of the slinky skirt.

Leopardskin flowers dotted with black jet beads were stuck all over the bodice.

Mrs. A. Lavery has returned home after holidaying in the Laurentian Mountains at Lake Guieldon.

WEDDINGS

JONES—GUEST

Picton.—A wedding of interest took place in Picton on Friday, July 28th., when the Rev. V. A. Ray united in marriage Barbara, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Guest and Harry, son of Mrs. Jones and the late Bert Jones, all of Picton.

Following a short honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Jones will reside at 105 Main Street, Picton.

PLAINFIELD

Plainfield.—Mr. and Mrs. M. Cronkright and family attended the Nicolson family reunion at Cobourg on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Anderson and James, of Sault St. Marie, returned home after spending some time at the Goodfellow home.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Colden and Mr. and Mrs. McCrae of Lonsdale, were Saturday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gow.

Mr. Wayne Gow is spending a few days with Mr. Ross Parks.

Miss Olivia Gillespie spent a few days with friends in Belleville.

Glad to report Mr. Almond Hall able to be removed to his home, having spent some time in Belleville Hospital.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Don Harrison on the arrival of a new daughter.

The new baseball diamond is progressing rapidly. Several men and Mr. Rigby's bulldozer are busy removing stones and levelling. It will soon be ready to use and it will make an ideal community centre. Congratulations to Dr. Empson and his helpers for their effort to make this possible.

ROSLIN

Roslin—On Wednesday evening St. Paul's Anglican Church annual lawn social was held on the rectory lawn. The weather was ideal and a large crowd was in attendance.

Mr. C. Staples acted as chairman for the varied program presented by the following artists who gave several numbers.

Yvone Skinner and Howard Meeks, duet; Joan Vance, solo, with guitar accompaniment; Frank Hockaday, ventriloquist; Marilyn Eggleton, solo; Canon J. G. Sparling address; Ed Waterhouse, solo; Rev. F. C. Beazer, solo; Rev. Everett Smith a short address.

At the conclusion of the program refreshments were served to all those in attendance.

CARMEL

Carmel.—Mr. and Mrs. Willet Pitman and Frank, of Toronto, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Blake Pitman.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Allison have taken up residence here again.

Miss Marion Griffith, Wallaceburg; Misses Helen Griffith and Ruth Brintnell, of Belleville, spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brintnell.

Miss Marion Sills returned home last week after visiting in Niagara Falls.

Mrs J. B. Patterson, Mrs. F. Sullivan and Mrs. C. E. Brintnell, were guests of the Foxboro Women's Institute, held at the home of Mrs. W. D. Simmons, on Tuesday night.

Friends, Neighbors Honor Young Couple With Gifts

Foxboro.—A large number of friends and neighbors assembled on the lawn at Mr. Harold Stewart's on Friday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Stewart, who were recently married.

Games were played under the direction of Mrs. W. Rombough and Mrs. B. Hollinger while the radio provided music.

Mr. S. C. Gay acted as chairman and called Mrs. Rombough to the platform where she read an address extending best wishes to the bride and groom and on behalf of the community they were presented with a large tri-light lamp and bevelled glass mirror.

Jack replied, with thanks for the kind remembrance. "For They are Jolly Good Fellows", was heartily sung and bounteous refreshments served.

Local Delegates Will Attend Church Convention

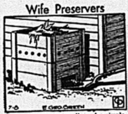
The World Convention of Christian Education will be held in Toronto from August 10th. to the 16th. inclusive, at which 5,000 Christian workers, representatives from 60 different countries will be present, as well as delegates from the Protestant churches.

On Sunday evening, August 13, services will be held in the Maple Leaf Gardens when the massed choir of 500 voices, chosen from the delegates, under the direction of the Rev. W. F. Miller, of the First Presbyterian Church, of Youngstown, Ohio, and under whose supervision they have been trained, will render special music.

Among the outstanding speakers will be the great Christian leader, Kagawa, of Japan, who will be speaking in the Coliseum, on Tuesday evening, August 15.

Representatives from Bridge Street United Church will include the Rev. Donald C. Amos; Miss Loretta McDougall; Mrs. Arthur Clare and Mrs. Wilbur Sherry.

Wife Preservers



For an average small yard a simple compost box can be made from two fair-sized crates or boxes. Remove bottoms from both, cut "doorway" wide enough for a spade; set one on top of the other and drill good-sized holes for air. Throw in all grass clippings and other dead vegetation. It will yield a fine compost for pot plants and shrubs, and can be set up in some obscure place, such as behind the garage, or in a hidden corner of the yard.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

In bridge are guys like partner Seth, the model for a crackpot. He keeps your scoring starved to death while looking for a jackpot.

The lead of a singleton is a gamble. There is a place for it, of course. But it is not classed as a desirable lead in the rule order of choice. It is in the group of last choice.

When you lead a singleton, what is your hope? That partner will win with the ace. His return of that suit will permit you to ruff with an otherwise worthless trump. Sounds good. Feels good when it works.

But what are the chances of it working? The ace is with one of the other three players. One is your partner. Two are opponent hands. Thus, there is a two-to-one chance that partner does not have it.

If partner does not have the ace you will probably wreck his king or queen by the singleton lead. And this happens twice as often as it happens that he has the ace. At least in theroy.

Good bridge requires that you refrain from making a lead that may result to the disadvantage of your side. In determining what may be disadvantageous reckon in terms of percentage of chances.

Not every rule lead will turn out best for your pair. Bridge is not built that way. Bridge is built on rules which offer the most chances for success in the majority of cases.

There are times when a singleton lead is a good gamble. When the situation is otherwise hopeless, for instance. Or, as frequently happens, when you have no better lead in the order of preference.

South is declarer at four spades after he and north have bid clubs and spades. What is your opening lead from this west hand?

Lead the queen of hearts. It is safer than your singleton six of diamonds. Only if there was some objection to leading your heart suit would it be better to lead your diamond. Safety first, even in bridge.

MADOC

Kiwanis Club Holds Carnival, Street Dance

Madoc.—Kiwanis Club held a carnival and street dance on Wednesday evening and it proved a very enjoyable and successful affair with a fine attendance.

The stage show, which proved entertaining, was put on by the Garden Bros. of Toronto. Don Johnson's Orchestra, of Kingston, provided music for the square and round dancing.

Last week's speaker at the Kiwanis dinner meeting was Roscoe Robson, M.L.A., who gave an interesting and informative address on "Our Attitude Toward Government Services." The appreciation of the club was extended to Mr. Robson by ex-Warden George West.

The guest speaker for the coming Friday meeting will be Professor Lindsay Rodgers, F.R.C.S., who, during the past year, has been Professor of Surgery at the University of Irak, Bagdad. Prof. Rodgers is an extensive world traveller and an authority on international affairs. He spent five years in the British Army, two years in Jugoslavia, where he was attached to Marshal Tito's

While in Madoc, Dr. Rodgers is a guest of Dr. Colin and Dr. Charlotte Dafoe.

Madoc.—Mrs. Tom Jones and daughter, of Toronto, are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Stickwood.

Mrs. John Wheal and son, of London, visited friends in Madoc during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Newell Broad visited friends in Toronto, during the past week.

Dr. S. R. Beatty and Mrs. Beatty left on Wednesday for a motor trip to Halifax. N.S., and will visit the doctor's brother, Dr. Stanley Beatty and Mrs. Beatty in that city.

Mrs. F. Latimer of Peterborough, visited her brother, George, and Mrs. West this week.

Mr. Fred Kincaid of Unionville, and Mr. Ted Humphrey of Toronto, spent a few days with the former's brothers, Messrs. James and Archie Kincaid.

Thirty-five Years' Service

Members of the congregation of Sacred Heart of Mary Church, met at the home of Father Hyland to extend to him congratulations on the 35th anniversary to the priesthood of the Roman Catholic Church. With Miss Agnes Walsh reading an address, six small girls presented Father Hyland with a travelling bag, bedspread, bedthrow and several other bedroom accessories as a token of appreciation. Father Hyland thanked his members of their kind sentiments and gifts. A bountiful lunch was served by the ladies. Mrs. Murphy donated a delicious anniversary cake.

Birthday Dinner

Mrs. T. L. Nickle, formerly of Madoc, was tendered a birthday dinner at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hillis Fowlie, Bancroft, on her 79th birthday.

Those of her family attending were, Mr. and Mrs. L. Brown, (Eleanor) of Bethlehem, Penn., Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Nickle and son, Paul, Madoc; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Smith and Monte, of Marmora, and Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Nickle, of Belleville, who are now en route to England, where they will visit Mrs. Clinton Nickle's relatives.

PICTON

Picton. Mr. Harold S. Way, Picton R. 1. has purchased the home of Mr. Jas Friar, corner of Downs Ave., and King Street, and will take possession in the near future.

Rev. R. A. and Mrs. Whattam, Toronto, are expected this week to visit at the home of Mr. Ben Ruttan, Ferguson Street.

Miss Freda Comrie of Fort William, is a guest of her sisters, Marilyn Comrie and Mrs. Lyons and of her aunt, Mrs. Ralph Gibson and family.

SISTERS ALL

By Jean Love Galloway

People who have the odd stuffed animal or animal's head cluttering up the attic, will be interested to know that these hairy old skeletons can do duty in the garden as scarecrows . . . One woman finds an efficient starling policeman in her fat stuffed squirrel. Mounted on a broom handle, sporting a grass skirt, the squirrel keeps constant watch over the vegetable patch . . . A neighbor puts toy stuffed cats in his cherry trees to frighten the robins away from the luscious fruit.

Emphasizing the "you" viewpoint as well as bringing out a score of sound principles in modern letter-writing, June issue of the Royal Bank's monthly letter is well worth writing in for. Students, school teachers, business men, in fact everybody who ever writes a letter will find this article helpful. Extra copies are still available.

"The most important thing to think about when you sit down to write a letter is not yourself, but the reader," the Royal Bank article points out. "What are his interests? What are his needs? What kind of letter would he like to get? There can be no completely successful or effective letter unless the writer moves into the place of the reader and considers his comfort and his convenience.

"It is always a great temptation to write about what we ourselves are doing. We like to think that everyone is interested in our problems, our desires. But self-interest must be subordinated if a letter is to build goodwill. Forget about yourself and concentrate on your reader."

It is good to see that large business institutions and industrial firms are stressing the need for better public and personal relations through good letter-writing. After all, every letter, like every personal contact, either builds or breaks goodwill. First principle of public relations dates back to the Golden Rule.

One of the best exercises to improve letter-writing is to sit down and write a friendly or a business letter as you ordinarily would—then, take a red pencil and circle every "I" "we" "our" "mine" "my" and "us." Re-write the letter so as to eliminate each one of these words.

This is an exercise young children should be grilled in frequently at home as well as at school, to help prevent them from forming the habit of writing self-centred letters. Much of the me-complex can be eradicated by writing only of things which interest the reader, and by substituting participles and new phrases for those sections where "me us and company" enter into the friendly or business letter.

All of which recalls the old prayer of the selfish man who every night on bended knee said: "God bless me, my wife, my son John, his wife, us four and no more, Amen."

For a clean, absorbent dish cloth which will bleach snowy white, try hemming a square of new flannelette.

Uncle Frontenac doesn't think much of having to pay more taxes just to provide $80 a month for the chronic Mr. and Mrs. Spendthrift. After all, an $80 monthly pension means a capital of $35,000 which is more than Uncle could save in a lifetime of economy.

Women's Institute

CARMEL W.I.

Carmel W.I. met at the home of Mrs. Carl Thompson for the July meeting. Mrs. Carman Dafoe, in the absence of the Secretary-treasurer, read the minutes of the last meeting and the treasurer's report. The roll call was answered with, hints for a Sunday dinner.

Mrs. Milton Ross reported for Agriculture, on farm prices. Miss Marg Hicks, Health convenerr, gave a helpful paper of first aid hints on burns, fainting, nose bleed, sun stroke etc.

Mrs. F. Hicks, Historical Research convener, took charge, opening the program with a poem. This was followed by piano instrumentals by Carolyn Thompson and Patsy Dafoe.

Mrs. Hicks read an account about the royal carpet which Queen Mary has recently completed. Mrs. Clarence Barlow, then read a clipping on how the McIntosh apple originated. Mrs. Hicks brought an interesting atlas containing pictures of points of interest in the district and all enjoyed looking at them.

Miss Marg. Hicks conducted a true and false contest and the meeting was closed in the usual manner.

Refreshments were then served by the hostess and her assistants.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A mother doesn't want to attend her daughter's wedding

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have an only daughter by my first husband, from whom I have been divorced for some time. She is to be married, and has asked me to attend her wedding. She felt I should see her get married.

My present husband doesn't want me to go, and I don't want to do anything against his wishes. I never see the girl except once in a while when she calls me up, so I just don't think I should go.

What can I tell her so she won't feel badly about it? I told her I'd let her know.

C. E. M.

Dear C. E. M.:

It seems to me rather strange that you, as the girl's mother, have not kept in touch with her more than it appears, and I think it would be very mean of you not to go to her wedding.

If you don't want to go because you think your first husband would be there, and you don't want to see him, it is understandable that it might be a little uncomfortable for you. But at the same time, I certainly think you owe it to your daughter to put your own feelings aside on such an occasion.

Frankly, I don't think it is any of your second husband's business what you do in the matter, and he should let you make your own decision to remember all her life that her mother refused to see her married?

How smart are you, girls? Let's See!

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My girl friend and I live in a small town where there are few teen-agers and very little in the way of activities for them. The high school we go to is located in another town, but it is only for freshmen and there aren't many boys in it.

There are two boys who go from our town to another school, and most of their social activities are there. Both of them are good-looking and very popular in their own school with both the boys and girls, but as far as we know, they do not go with any special girls.

Have you any suggestions as to how we could get to know these boys better? Do you think it would be all right to invite them to a party or dance which some of their own crowd would also attend?

T. and P.

Dear T. and P.:

It always seems to me that if there aren't enough activities for teen-agers in a town, modern girls and boys should have enough initiative to get busy and see that some are started.

What's the matter with you two going to some of the people in your town who are leaders in the community, and asking them if they won't help you plan a recreation centre for teen-agers, or at least some sort of club where the boys and girls could be together and have good times? It often takes just a little suggestion from the young people themselves to get older people interested in things of this sort, and I believe you could work out something if you were willing to take the trouble. Now that school is out, you ought to have plenty of time to do this.

This would be one excellent way for you to get acquainted with the boys in whom you are interested, since all the teen-agers in town would certainly want to be counted in on your project. Of course, if you want to invite these two boys to a party or a dance, it would be perfectly all right. But I think it would be even better if you invite them, together with some of your other friends, to spend an evening at one of your houses making plans for the project I have just been talking about.

This is the best suggestion I can give you. Let's see what you can do with it!

Stale bait still catches suckers

The sucker is not an attractive fish.

Neither in appearance, habits nor usefulness has it anything whatever to recommend it.

Quite, the contrary, in fact; its thick, stupid, dull-eyed look makes it repulsive to see; it prefers to skulk along the bottom of the pond in darkness, hiding from things, rather than swim up near the surface of the water where there is light and fresh air and sunshine; and it isn't even good eating. Says the dictionary, in describing this poor relation in the piscatorial family, it is used for food only "as a substitute for better fish."

Small wonder that the creature's name has been seized upon by American slang to designate human beings who have many of the same. characteristics. Small wonder that those cheap-skate sportsmen who love to go fishing for romantic adventure in ever-new waters, don't even have to bother providing themselves with fresh bait, knowing that suckers can always be caught with the same old line.

Could there possibly be any bait more stale, for instance, than that which dangles from the end of the "My wife doesn't understand me" line?

Not even a sucker bites on that one any more, you scoff?

Oh no? Not any oftener than every day in the week and any number of times a day!

For no matter how often the sucker has been warned to watch out for this particular sort of bait; how often she may have listened with sympathy and indignation to the stories of friends who at some time in their lives were foolish enough to have swallowed it; when the identical bait is jiggled in front of her own eyes it somehow looks different.

"This man isn't like those others I've heard about," the sucker says to herself. "He's no wolf on the prowl. How sad that his wife doesn't appreciate such a fine character, and how brave and wonderful he is!"

And so, flattered to death because her intuitive understanding has been so immediately recognized, down goes the bait, hook, line, sinker and all, in one quick gulp.

Of course there are men with wives who don't understand them. There are plenty of wives whose husbands don't understand them, either. But you don't find the kind of people you'd like to marry—the people who'd make the most successful husbands and wives—running around telling casual acquaintances about it. The deeply troubled man or woman is not the one who talks readily about his or her intimate personal problem, of whatever sort it may be. You can count upon it, if you fall too fast for the man-whose-wife-doesn't-understand him, you are sooner or later going to be sorry. Either you may find yourself in a distinctly unpleasant situation from which it may not be easy to extricate yourself, or if he is really in purposeful pursuit of a second wife to replace the unsatisfactory first, and you let him persuade you to be "it"—none chances out of ten it won't be too awfully long before you'll be disconcerted to discover that you, in your turn, have become the wife who doesn't understand.

Another piece of stale bait that still catches the suckers is the one that goes something like this: "I love you madly and am dying to marry you, but my wife won't give me a divorce." This usually either precedes the suggestion that while waiting for a change of heart on the wife's part, they might have an affair, or else it comes after the affair is well under way and the girl begins to wonder out loud about the delay in setting the wedding date.

Look for that dangling hook, too, when the bachelor who is talking marriage says that if you really loved him you would be willing to "prove it".

Far from unusual is the experience of one girl who swallowed that particular bit of sucker bait and now tell the story with succinct bitterness:

"The man to whom I thought I was engaged said that he didn't feel sure of my love because I wouldn't have relations with him. Being blind to everything but my love for him, I finally did as he asked. Now he won't marry me. He says he wants a good girl for his wife, not one who gives herself so freely."

Every fisherman who drops a line has his own pet variety of bait, whether he is after mackerel or maidens. Before you bite, remembers the sucker, which is stupid; which is found hiding in dark places and shunning the light; which wouldn't get any attention at all if anything more tempting were available because it is considered merely "a substitute for better fish."

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

A good formula for a thank-you note for a present

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please give me some tips on how to write thank-you notes for wedding presents?

J. W.

Here are some tips that make a good pattern for your thank-you notes:

1. Thank first for the kind thought. For example: "How very kind you and Bill were to make such a wonderful plan for our happiness!"

2. Mention the present specifically (not vaguely "your present"). "The handsome clock arrived today . . . "

3. Chat informally about the present (it's an excellent idea to keep it in front of you as you are writing the thank-you note), commenting enthusiastically about special features of the gift.

With your thanks include the thanks of your groom-to-be. And, if possible, tell the giver how you plan to use it in your new home. For example: "The handsome clock arrived today. . . and Bob and I are enchanted with it. It's a beauty, and the perfect size for the mantelpiece in the living-room of our new home. It has been our dream to have a lovely clock for this place-of-honor in our living-room . . .but the clock you two dear friends sent is far, far lovelier than we even dreamed of having! Bob and I immediately wound it, and now it's happily ticking the happy minutes . . . and we're sure it always will."

4. Make a closing bow. "We are looking forward to greeting you and Bill at our wedding. . .and to having you both come soon to our new home, to see your charming clock 'in position and in action'.

Dearest love and thanks to you both from both of us.

Affectionately,
Josephine"

Not tuxedo for afternoon summer wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter is being married this summer in church, the ceremony to be followed by an informal reception. The ceremony is to take place at four o'clock in the afternoon. Should the groom, best man and ushers wear white gloves with their tuxedos? And should the bride's father, who is to give her in marriage, wear a business suit or should be also wear a tuxedo?

A. R.

It is not correct for a man to wear a tuxedo in the daytime . . . and a four o'clock wedding is, of course, a daytime wedding. A tuxedo is evening attire, not correctly worn before six o'clock in the evening, at the very earliest. At an afternoon wedding in the summer, correct attire for the men in the wedding party (and this includes the bride's father, who is a member of the wedding party) is a white suit (linen, or Palm Beach cloth or other lightweight material), or white flannel trousers and dark jacket, preferably dark-blue or dark-gray.

To sign for special delivery letter, parcel post, telegram

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I was married in May. As a married girl, I am trying to follow exactly how I should use my married name for various occasions. My latest problem is this: When I sign for a Special Delivery Letter, or for a telegram, or a parcel post insured package, or similar delivery, should I sign "Mary Smith" or "Mrs. John Smith"?

Bride

When you sign for the delivery of any of these items, an appropriate form of signature is your initials and last name: for example, M. B. Smith. (This to stand for Mary Brown Smith.) If necessary for identification, add Mrs. John Smith, in parentheses, after or under the M. B. Smith.

Not necessary to have date on at home cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it absolutely necessary to mention the date—for example, "After the first of October"—on the At Home cards which I would like to send out with our formal marriage announcements?

(We are not sending wedding invitations.) I would like to send out At Home cards—we know that our new address will be—and we will be "at home" there as soon as we return from a rather long wedding trip we are planning.

Elizabeth

Today more often than not any date . . .for example, "After the first of October" —is omitted from At Home cards. I think this is very sensible and practical, for then the cards can be used for many occasions —joint cards, with just name and address. For example:

Mr. and Mrs. John Alan Clark
Two Home Place
Haven, New York

As a matter of fact, this form of At Home card is quite often mailed separately, after the bride and groom are "in residence" in their new home.

Unwelcome and discourteous surprise

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

To settle a really heated argument between my sister and myself (the question concerns a banquet given by a large organization to which we both belong), please answer this question: Is it proper, or thoughtful, or courteous, for a chairman or master of ceremonies, to call on someone, whether sitting at the speaker's table or not, to "say a few words", when that person has not been warned in advance that he or she is to be called on?

Sister Frances

No! This surprise calling-on someone, unless he or she has been warned in advance, is not proper—not thoughtful or considerate—not courteous.

Who buys the hope chest?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I've just received a hope chest as a gift from my fiance. Yesterday I invited a few of my girl friends to my house to see this chest, and the question arose as to who should buy the hope chest, the girl's fiance, or her mother, or the girl herself. Most of the girls seemed to think that the girl's mother should buy the hope chest and also fill it. What is correct?

Esther

Generally it is the girl's mother who gives her the hope chest, or the girl herself buys it when and as she wishes it perhaps even before she is engaged. But the girl's fiance may buy it if she wishes him to—and he wishes to.

Groom's mother and her brother to sit together in first pew

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a widow. My son is being married soon. My only daughter is to be a bridesmaid in the wedding party, and my only other son is to be a best man. Would it be correct for me to invite my oldest brother, unmarried, to sit in the first pew with me, and may I ask the bride's mother, who is a dear friend of mine, to make this arrangement? I would so much prefer not to sit alone in the first pew!

Groom's Mother

to sit with you in the first pew

Of course invite your brother —and ask the bride's mother please to make this arrangement for you.

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about Food ... What's Cooking ?

Tomatoes were cultivated by American Indians centuries before Columbus arrived. But they were not eaten by white men in the United States until after 1850. People were sure they were poisonous. In the meantime they had been introduced to European countries where they were widely cultivated. Only after they had been eaten on the continent for generations did Americans dare to follow suit.

In Italy they took the American plants and developed the fine, meaty sweet plum tomatoes which were later introduced to the United States.

Nutritionists have long urged people to eat tomatoes regularly in their diet as a valuable source of Vitamin C. At Kansas State College they are now experimenting to see if artificial light will increase the Vitamin C content. Studies have shown the tomatoes grown on the shady side of trees have less Vitamin C than those grown on the sunny side.

Take advantage of large home grown beefsteak tomatoes now coming into season. Use them stuffed as a cold salad or as a hot main course.

Tomatoes Stuffed with Chipped Beef—Serves 6.

Wash 6 firm ripe large tomatoes. Cut a slice about 1-4 inch thick off end opposite stem. Use a small sharp paring knife to hollow out centre of tomato. Do not cut too deeply or tomatoes will not hold stuffing.

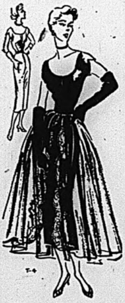
Turn tomatoes upside down to remove liquid. Sprinkle insides generously with salt.

Make stuffing as follows. Chop tomato pieces which have been cut out. Mix with enough fresh white bread crumbs to make a moist mixture, firm enough to handle. This will usually require from 1 to 1 1-2 cups crumbs. Add to crumb mixture 2 tablespoons grated onion, 1 cupful finely chopped dried beef, 1-2 cup grated American cheese, 1-2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce and salt and pepper to taste. Mix well. If mixture is too dry, add water or tomato juice. If mixture is too wet, add more crumbs.

Fit bread crumb mixture into tomato shells. Use the back of a spoon to shape mixture into large mounds. Sprinkle lightly with paprika and a few drops of salad oil.

Place tomatoes in a greased baking dish. Bake at 375 degrees 20-30 minutes or until well browned. Serve with a mushroom sauce made by diluting a can of mushroom soup with 1-2 cup milk and heating.

Double Duty



For daytime or evening

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

DEPICTED is a versatile little dress prepared to go from daytime into evening when treated to a pretty tunic apron. The frock is of black crepe in a pencil-slim silhouette and has short, up-dipping sleeves and a scooped-out neckline. The apron, attached to a velvet sash, is of black tulle with lace panels in front.

Fashion Flashes

THE PET of the millinery world just now is black felt, processed so that its surface gleams with a highly burnished effect. The lacquered felt is made up into simple little shapes—calots, pillboxes and small bicornes, devoid of trimming except for brief, lacy veils.

EVERY AID for cool comfort is at hand this Summer, as far as fashion is concerned. A black sheath frock with camisole top and shoulder straps is of cotton, and over it goes a full-length redingote of white eyelet cotton, the design in daisy petals. The coat is short sleeved, has a black velvet belt and a small sailor collar.

LOOKING NEW and refreshing is the white-ground print with stacatto black print and accents. Black velvet for the collar and pocket flaps of a tailored jacket worn with a scoop neckline dress. The fabric is white silk crepe with a scattered design in black.

SHAPING UP are many trends for Fall fashion. Almost every house is showing one or more town or theatre suits of satin—silk satin in a thin, supple and highly glossy weave. Many such suits sport the horseshoe neckline, a cut that shows off elaborate lace or tucked chiffon blouses.

JUST ONE full-length coat and a topper is usually enough for a journey, even a protracted one. The full-length job might well be of wool fleece in a delicate gold shade, worn loose over dinner clothes, but belted in black patent or white calf with daytime or sports clothes.

A BEAUTY of a bag to wear with warm weather clothes is a generous pouch of white beads gathered onto bracelet handles of gilt metal in delicate filagree design.

COLLECTOR'S ITEM with many a girl is the big circle skirt. One girl has a skirt of black cotton painted all over, except for the hip yoke, in gold with touches of red. Another skirt is of white chintz with a huge red rose print. Bright yellow cotton, with padded cotton appliques in red outlined with white rick-rack braid makes yet another of those big social circle skirts.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON

Listen! Who's speaking?

A woman can have beauty, grace and personal charm, but if her voice is shrill and unpleasant she'll never get a high rating. Most men agree that nothing—except bad manners—destroys the illusion of beauty so quickly as a raspy, irritating voice. The sharp ones, the nasal twangs, the whiney drones are just as bad.

There is no delay in making an effort to overcome external defects. The complexion that does not qualify, hair that is falling, the figure that is going shapeless, all get attention. About the voice nothing is done. A vocal instructor tells us that the afflicted ones often don't realize that their voices are of the kind that sets the listener's teeth on edge. She suggests that they have a recording made. Some of them would be horrified, would seek the professional aid that is obtainable in every city.

Helena Stevens 7-29
Distributed by King Features Syndicate

Read from Shakespeare or Milton.

All that is necessary is an analysis of defects and a conscientious and sustained effort to eliminate them. Many times the unpleasant tones are due to improper breathing. The shallow breather cannot produce the full, rich tones that are possible to the woman whose lungs are air-conditioned because her breathing is deep. Correct breathing is a vitalizing performance—stimulating circulation, bringing good color to the cheeks, acting favorably upon the digestive motors.

Everyone should be careful not to pitch the voice too high, or use too much volume. There is a nice middle register that is acceptable to the ear. Make it a rule to keep to it, endeavor to time your words, enunciate clearly and speak in an expressive manner, so you will not produce a monotone.

The simplest and most effective manner of speech training is reading aloud. Read from Shakespeare or Milton because of their dramatic qualities. It will give you a consciousness of speech rhythm and clarity. Highly stylized prose will prove more difficult than ordinary reading matter, and that is what you need.

For clear enunciation, say the vowels one after another very slowly. Don't do it with lazy lips, but with force and emphasis. No doubt you know those whose lips are lazy. Their conversation is a jumble of sounds, one word running into another, and you must ask them to repeat what they say. These individuals make themselves particularly obnoxious when talking over the telephone.

Put enthusiasm in your tones, but not strong accent, as does the girl who is ever exclaiming "Darling!" or "Wonderful!" When greeting a member of your family, offer a gay "Good Morning," not a dismal "Hello." Don't let your voice go flat and thin. Keep it animated and vibrant.

Facing the wrinkle problem

Take out insurance against wrinkles, you forty girls. That means you must fight them before you get them. Accordion pleats on the faminine countenance often are the penalty one pays for side-stepping good-looks tasks. Pappy Time gets blamed for them; but it isn't always his fault.

Once established, it is not easy to erase them. If they dig far enough into the underlying fibres, nothing but a face-lift will rid you of them, and that treatment is the most expensive indulgence in the way of beauty care. Start early on a policy of protection.

You have to keep fit, practice mental hygiene—no bawling or fussing or arguing with your old man—and you must endeavor to have a sound nervous system. To be a "nervous lady" is to bring on a trail of pulchritude griefs. It is the calm, wise woman who practices emotional control who keeps a satin-smooth face throughout the years. She knows full well that jealousy, envy and anger will leave their tracks in the form of frowns and crinkles around the eyes.

Other causes of wrinkles are malnutrition and loss of sleep. Many women who feel tired and wretched are that way because they don't eat properly, don't get all the various food elements that are necessary for well-being. Poor sleepers age before their time it is during sleep that energy is renewed. If you stay up until all hours of the night, then have to get up early to look after the family, don't be surprised if the reflection in the mirror brings on mental reflections that are discouraging and make you unhappy.

Every night wash your face carefully, rinse with warm water and dry thoroughly. Have at hand a jar of massage cream. The emollient should be of heavy consistency, so the fingers won't slip when you give yourself that five-minute massage to keep the skin smooth, tissues and fibres firm.

Start on the throat, smoothing up and down with flattened fingers. Placing the fingers of both hands under your chin, sweep out along the jawline to the ear lobes. Fold your fingers inside the palms of your hands and do light tapping with your knuckles, passing up over the cheeks with quick movements.

If there are signs of squint lines, place the first finger on your eyelid, close to the nose, sweep out to the temple, do several circles there, and come back under the eye to starting point.

A rotary movement should be used on the forehead, but not on the cheeks, as one is likely to push the flesh up under the eyes and invite lines to form there.

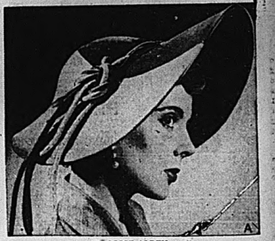
Velvet Millinery



By ALICE ALDEN

VELVET offers a soft touch this summer, especially when it comes to millinery. From the toppers of inexpensive little budget numbers, it's velvet all the way. Bragaard, one of our top milliners, creates a beautiful velvet model destined to set off afternoon sheers and dressy cottons. Fashioned on graceful lines, it combines tangerine, ccooa and beige velvet sections. The crown is banded with velvet cords.

GOOD-WILL GIFT

Thorshaven, Faroe Islands—(CP)—In connection with the island's national day, July 29, the Swedish cruiser "Tre Kroner" (Three Crowns) will visit here, bringing a gift from the Swedish Riksdag. Major part of the gift is a collection of 2,500 volumes of Swedish literature for the National Library.

EARNEST MISS

Staines, Middlesex, England—(CP)—Sheila Wiseman, 18, wanted to visit Canada for three years, but could not do so without her father's consent. She worked for a year, in a radio factory during the day, as a cinema usher at night. She saved $300 and is now going to Canada with her father's blessing.

BOATMEN'S HOLIDAY

Kottyam, India—(CP)—Nearly 100,000 persons witnessed the recent boat festival here in the paddy-land of North Trava where nearly every home stand. Many races were featured, with boats of all sizes, from 100-oar "Chundians" or snake boats, to tiny one-man row-boats.

MORE CARS

Registration of motor vehicles of all kinds in Canada increased nearly 15 per cent in 1949 over 1948.

Margate Holidayers See Monster With Ears Like Horse

Margate, Kent, England, July 28 (Reuters) —Two holidaymakers at this south coast English resort today reported sighting a "monster with ears like a horse," swimming 100 yards off the beach.

J. E. Handley a London visitor said: "I was swimming when the monster appeared a few yards away. At first I thought it was a whale or a shark, but it had ears like a horse.

"I only saw its head, but that was over two feet wide and looked something like a sea lion."

His report was corroborated by a woman on the beach.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

A GREAT FAMILY

Like father, like son. Years ago when the Hillcrests baseball team of Toronto was rated among the best senior squads in Canada there cavorted around the pitcher's mound a short, stocky individual named Joe Spring. Joe was just about Mr. Baseball of that era and is still acknowledged to be one of the greatest baseball players to come out of Moaner Reeves' bailiwick. We saw Joe in Niagara Falls this season while attending the Ontario Baseball Association convention, and the old fire is there if the flesh is a trifle weaker than of-yore. Joe is still a great baseball enthusiasist, and has kept up with the diamond Jones since he laid aside the war equipment.

Now up comes Joe, Junior. The second edition is a member of the Tip Top Tailors world softball champions and will be seen here next Thursday night with the team against the Belleville All-Stars. Joe is without a doubt one of the best if not the best softball clouter in Canada at the moment. His powerful bludgeon has wreaked havoc with opposing pitchers consistently and during the world championship tourney last year, he was walked purposely five times. It ruined his chances for making the world all-star squad, but it proved that even world champion pitchers have a healthy respect for his batting prowess.

Along with the Toppers will be Ed. Geraldi, a smoothie at the shortstop position, who is a great competitor and a brilliant playmaker. Then, too, there will be Goody Rosen, clouter deluxe, a former professional baseball player with the Brooklyn Dodgers, and if you think Goody cannot clout that apple, better go up and take a look at him. Bobbie Dear is a manager's dream at third base, while Lennie Gaull, the catcher, is tabbed as the greatest receiver in Canadian softball today. Manager Sam Shefsky has Ray Pulfer, Vic Goberis and Pat McCullagh patrolling the outer pastures while doing mound duty is that near-invincible trio, Tom Stewart, Percy McConner and, of course, none other than the famous Charlie Justice.

President Don Lee of the Commercial Softball League announced today that the game scheduled for Thursday night at 6.45 between Stewart Warner and Stephens-Adamson will get under way at 6.15 instead of the regular time. This will give players selected from these squads for the all-star team which will face the Tip Tops that night, time to get straightened. Mark the change of time down in your little red book.

ONE IN A HUNDRED

Diogenes, the lantern-bearing bloke who spent years searching for an honest man, would have had his labors cut short had Frankford and district been extant in those days. At least that is what George "Udy" Blazetich, former star righthander for the Napanee baseball squad when the Gibbardville nine was among the top teams in Intermediate "A" baseball in these parts, thinks.

The bespectacled "Udy" was a member of those great Napanee squads managed by Walter Gerow, and masterminded by Ernie Gibbard that boasted the famous Tommy Pointer, Hughie Brennan, Ron Card, Sweet, "Wink" Wilson and others.

In any event, "Udy," on vacation, dropped around the other day to see his old mentor, Walt Gerow. It was at an early hour and "Udy" used the outdoor telephone booth near the Arena. Some hours later while in Deseronto, he missed his wallet containing cash and valuable personal papers. It looked as though "Udy's" vacation was "shot." He returned to Belleville and in the course of his inquiry called at the police station.

It was market day, and a number of farmers and truck gardeners were in the city. Maxwell Dodds, farmer residing on R. R. 2, Frankford, had occasion to use the phone booth near the Arena, and there staring him in the face was the Blazetich wallet. Dodds quickly turned it in to the city police station thereby saving a guy's vacation and a lot of worry and headaches. Needless to say, "Udy" was tickled to death at the return of his wallet and the last time we saw him he was headed Frankford way in an effort to contact Mr. Dodds and suitably reward him. Blazeetich's appreciation of the Dodds' honesty was expressed in a letter to the editor of this newspaper yesterday.

NOT SO WRONG, PERHAPS

The professor who issued the warning a few weeks ago that some of the teams in the Commercial Softball League other than Barriage's Pipe Cleaners and Herbie Henn's Foam Dispensers might toss the well-known monkey wrench into the loop machinery may have had something at that. The other night the Doughty Dispensers met their second defeat of the schedule at the hands of the fifth-place Stewart Warner clan, and eyebrows are now being raised in various quarters. The Ramsay Paint squad has thrown scares into the leaders, too, and anything can happen between now and playoff time, to say nothing of the pay-off series. Pied Piper Peaver had better dig up a set of new tunes for his Bakelite Buglers if he intends to chant the top-flight boys to victory.

NOW, THE PLAYOFFS

Napanee and Cannifton Clippers wind up the Belleville District Baseball League schedule here on Monday night, it says here. We understand that Cannifton is out of the playoff race, and the Sixardee, Belleville Cubs, Point Anne and Napanee teams will battle for titular honors. We haven't the faintest idea as to when the playoffs will start but something should be done about it right away. Incidentally, the Belleville Exhibition holds forth from Monday, August 14, through Thursday, August 17, and that means the Exhibition Grounds will not be available that week for baseball. We also note that a COBL game between Kingston and Batawa is scheduled for August 17th. That will of necessity have to be postponed.

Yanks, Tribe Slash Tiger Lead, Detroit Loses Six of Eight As Charging Foemen Close In

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The panic is on in the American League. Detroit's lead, down to half a game, is melting before the charge of New York and Cleveland.

With Tiger pitching folding and the Yankees and Indians slashing home runs, the American jumble now is tighter than the National.

Detroit still is on top, but how much longer can they hold on? Although they braced against Boston Thursday, they bowed to Philadelphia 7-6 last night. Now they have lost six of their last eight.

Vic Wertz hit his 17th and 18th homers against Athletics but even that wasn't enough. A two-run spurt in the ninth on Elmer Valo's single, Sam Chapman's triple and an infield out gave the A's victory.

The Yankees hammered out a 4-1 edge over Chicago on homers by Hank Bauer and Phil Rizzuto and tight six-hit pitching by Allie Reynolds.

Al Rosen, never considered a threat to home-run honors, hit his 28th and 29th for Cleveland in the Tribe's 13-1 ramble over Boston. Rosen now leads the majors.

Three Homers

Larry Doby, Luke Easter and Joe Gordon smacked one homer each as the Indians climbed all over Maurice McDermott. It was Doby's first appearance since he was hit by a pitched ball Monday night in an exhibition at Brooklyn.

St. Louis pulled one out of the fire in the ninth, edging Washington, 5-4, on Ken Wood's single with two out.

The National League race was shoved into the background by the rain-interrupted struggle between Chicago and Brooklyn. It was not finished until 1.23 a.m. EDT, almost five hours after it started. Chicago won, 12-5, leaving the Brooks in fourth place, five games out of first.

Bonus Bob Miller, the Phils rookie sensation, boosted the National League leaders' margin to 2 1-2 games with a 4-1 victory over Pittsburgh. It was Miller's ninth success.

Larry Jansen whipped the second place St. Louis Cards 8-3, for his 11th win. The Giants' righthander scattered nine hits and led the attack on loser Al Brazle with his first major league home run in the second inning. It was the Giants' eighth straight triumph.

Ewell Blackwell, with fine relief help from Frank Smith, beat Boston for the first time this season 8-5. Blacky had a shutout until the eighth when Earl Torgeson sparked a four-run rally with a homer with two on.

Giants Win Over Red Wings With Pinch Homer

(By The Associated Press)

Marv Blaylock, 20-year-old first baseman of Jersey City Giants, is turning out to be quite a clutch hitter.

Blaylock, up from Trenton of the Inter-State League, last night blasted his third pinch-hit home run of the season to give the Giants a 4-3 victory over the league-leading Rochester Red Wings in the opener of a double-header. The second game was called because of rain after 13 innings, with the teams tied at 4-4.

George Copeland had the Giants beaten, 4-2, going into the seventh and final round. Blaylock, batting for shortstop ziggy Jasinski, smashed one out of the lot with pinch-runner Red Hardy on base and two out to win the game.

The Giants piled up a 4-2 lead in the finale, but the Wings tied the count with two runs in the ninth.

Baltimore's runner-up Orioles and the third-place Montreal Royals moved within 4½ games of the Red Wings. The Orioles split a twin bill with last-place Buffalo Bisons, winning the nightcap, 6-5 after suffering a humiliating 15-0 defeat in the opener. The Royals pounded the Syracuse Chiefs 10-5.

Lefty Jake Wade blanked the Orioles on three hits as the Bisons pounded four Oriole pitchers for 17 hits in the opener. Orioles trailed, 5-1, entering the eighth inning of the nightcap, then tied the score with a four-run rally. They won in the ninth when Bison pitcher Al Carrasquel walked three hitters in a row after a single by Babe Barna.

The scheduled game between Springfield and Toronto was rained out.

Teams Crowd Leaders In Commercial Loop

With two thirds of the Commercial Softball League race over, Howe and Hagerman are perched at the top of the loop with five wins in six starts for an .833 percentage. However the loop, which gets tighter each game, is still a wide open affair as far as playoff positions are concerned.

Howe and Hagerman, Brewers Warehouse, Point Anne Cementmen and Ramsay Paints are currently in the best position to capture the four playoff berths, but a red-hot Stewart Warner Club is starting to come fast, and should they sweep their final three games they would stand a good chance of edging out one of the front runners.

Standings in the A section to date are:

Team:	GP	W	L	Pct.
Howe & Hagerman	6	5	1	.833
Brewers Warehouse	7	5	2	.714
Point Anne	7	4	3	.571

Roof Collapses In Ball Stadium, Several Hurt

Seven baseball fans were injured—one seriously— when a portion of the grandstand roof at Briggs Stadium in Detroit collapsed during last night's game between Philadelphia and the Tigers. The part that fell was a heavy piece of steel which toppled into the upper deck of the grandstand as several hundred spectators screamed and scrambled for safety.

It still looks like the Australians and the United States for the Davis Cup finals.

The Aussies, with Frank Sedgman and John Bromwich carrying the load, swept singles matches of the American zone finals from Mexico in Mexico City yesterday. They need one more victory to take the series.

Winner of the Australian-Mexico series will meet the winner of the European zone final, which Sweden leads 2-0 over Denmark.

Bobby Locke is at it again.

The South African links artist moved into a tie with Ken Housfield in the 90-hole North British tournament at Harrogate, England, yesterday with a 279 after 72 holes. The fifth and final round will be held today. Locke shot a 69 to pull up to Housfield.

Toronto-born Dick Fowler, plagued by bursitis, is heading for his home in Oneonta, N.Y. for the rest of the season.

Connie Mack told the Philadelphia Athletics pitcher, winner of only one game this year, to rest up until next spring.

Entries close Monday for the fifth annual junior best-ball golf tournament of Ontario. The meet will be held at the Toronto Summit Golf and Country Club. Players must be under 19 at July 15. Entries may be made to the Ontario Golf Association at Toronto. Fees are $1 and there will be a "practice day" Aug. 1.

Sammy Snead shot into the 36-hole lead in the Sioux City, Iowa Open Golf tournament yesterday with a 131. He added a 66—six under par—to his first-round 65. He's two strokes ahead of Skip Alexander who topped the first round with a record 63.

Odds-on favorites in the featured stakes met with disaster at Thorncliffe raceway in Toronto yesterday. Malcolm Hanover favorite in the fourth and seventh races nearly ruined his faithful supporters.

In the fourth, the speedy Malcolm broke stride going down the back stretch and lost much ground. Driver Vic Rowntree got him pacing but just when he was moving to the leaders Malcolm Hanover overreached himself and broke stride again. He finished sixth.

In the seventh, he broke badly, never really reached contention although he finished a distant third to lacklock and Leyte.

Blacklock also had won the fourth, paying $12.65. The same horse paid $6.10 when he just caught the flying Leyte in the final stride.

Individual driving star of the afternoon was Harold Wellwood, who scored another double. He took the third with Mr. Oakley, owned by the powerful Wes Litt stable of Stratford. Wellwood also took the sixth with Carlisle Hanover, owned by A. P. McNiven, of Ecorse, Mich.

Nip-and-Tuck For Playoff Slot In Intercounty

(By The Canadian Press)

From all appearances, it'll be nip and tuck for that sixth and final playoff slot in the Intercounty Baseball League.

St. Thomas Legion gained a full game Friday night in their drive to overhaul Galt Terriers, currently occupying the coveted sixth spot. Legion defeated London Majors 4-2 while Terriers were dropping an 8-7 heartbreaker to Stratford Nationals.

The two decisions moved St. Thomas to within a few percentage points of Terriers.

Tony Delaurentis threw a brilliant two-hitter at New Toronto Simpson Fords as Oshawa Merchants won a 9-1 Viaduct League decision. Merchants took full advantage of eight hits and four Ford errors.

Atkins Learns it Doesn't Pay To Sock Referee Especially When the Official is Dunlop

By GEO. H. CARVER
(Sports Editor)

Mr. Fred Atkins, of Australia, tabbed by press agents as the "hard rock from down under" learned two lessons in Memorial Arena last night.

First he discovered that one big man can't lick two huskies, and secondly you can't even in the best of pachydermic circles, bash a referee in the noggin, toss him out of the ring and expect to get the laurel wreath.

Mr. Atkins was in a more or less berserkian mood last night. And therein lay his downfall. When the smoke had cleared and a wildly shouting populace had decided it was all over, the "hard rock" lost two falls and the match to Yukon Eric via the disqualification route.

In the first place Referee "Bunny" Dunlop was in no mood to be pushed around. The rotund ex-wrestler made it definitely plain that he was not going to stand for any Australian high jinks and backed it up on occasions with solid smashes to the Atkins jaw.

Eric Not Fooling Either

The ponderous slow-moving Eric was in like mood. He took some severe punishment from Atkins when that gentleman insisted on thrusting a rock-like forearm against the Yukonian jugular vein and leaning his 264 pounds against it. This the refree objected to, and repeatedly warned Atkins of his near-strangulation methods. After ten minutes of the first fall, Dunlop disqualified Atkins, a feat that did not improve the Australian's temper to any appreciable extent.

But it did not change his method of attack in the second fall. Again he surged in and pinned the Yuke against the ropes. Again he was warned, and being tossed around the ring by Eric plus a few solid smashes to the back and head did not help matters.

Finally, he lost what temper was left and pinned Yukon against the ropes slamming and punching and turning a cold ear to Dunlop's orders to "break it up". Dunlop slugged Atkins and he retaliated by tearing the piece of rope that Yukon wears for a belt, and attempting to wrap it around the Eric's jugular vein. Dunlop sailed in fists flying. Atkins threw a right to the official's jaw that stretched him on the canvas and as the official in turn tore into him, he heaved the rotund Bunny through the ropes, while a howling crowd gathered around the ring.

Dunlop crawled back into the war zone and immediately awarded the fall and match to Yukon Eric. Atkins again flew to the attack by a couple of cuffs to the jaw from the Yukonian fists settled him down and he strode to the dressing room followed by a jeering crowd.

Ended Suddenly

Hi Lee and Seli Samara a colored "Mutt" and a towering "Jeff" staged a rapid-fire semi-final that ended in rather dramatic fashion. Samara, a fine wrestler looked rather puny against the towering Lee but what he lacked in size he made up in agility and ability. He took severe punishment from the elongated Ozarkian and after twenty minutes was tossed out of the ring.

Lee refused to allow him to return and battered him back to the plastic three or four times before the end came suddenly. Samara poised outside the ropes, heaved himself over the top strand as Lee came charging in, struck the Ozarkian squarely amidship with a high-flying charge and dropped him to the canvas for the count.

Toar Morgan and Abe Zvonkin former football star staged a spirited preliminary that went the limit of thirty minutes. Zvonkin using everything but the city hall, the police station and the rink rafters had the Lindsay ex-marine in difficulties several times, but the Canadian weathered the storm and towards the last of the bout paid like for like. Clifford Fox officiated in the first two bouts.

Tommy Pointer Draws Suspension

Cobourg, July 29.—Tommy Pointer, veteran coach of Port Hope Ontarios, was suspended for one month last night at a meeting of the Lakeshore Baseball League.

Pointer is alleged to have struck Umpire Norman Allin of Oshawa, at a game between Port Hope and Bowmanville on July 12. First meeting of the league executive since produced contradictory evidence but all witnesses agreed Pointer had to be restrained by seven of his own players in the mixup which occurred when Allin ordered pitcher Iron Arm Woods of Port Hope, to stop rubbing a new ball in the dirt.

Louis' Decision For a Comeback Splits Opinion

New York, July 29 (AP) — Joe Louis' decision to make a comeback at the age of 36 drew mixed comment today in boxing circles.

"Say it ain't so, Joe," was the reaction of many with treasured memories of the Brown Bomber of the late 1930's. They didn't want to see another disillusioning performance by the Louis of the two Jersey Joe Walcott fights.

"Joe isn't in bad shape as has been reported," said Marshall Miles, his manager. "He's also in the fight frame of mind and we feel that he will be able to give a good account of himself."

"I thought he looked real good when he was in there two weeks ago," said Jim Norris, president of the International Boxing Club. Norris announced Louis' comeback decision yesterday after a phone conversation with the former champ.

"The champ and I have been friends for years," said Ezzard Charles, the N.B.A.- recognized heavyweight king whom Louis will fight. 'I never had any particular desire to box Louis but always wanted to be undisputed champion."

"I say I am the heavyweight champion now and whomever I fight I'll be in there to hold the title and fight to the best of my ability. I won't say I can take Louis, but I never enter a match without confidence. I welcome the opportunity."

"Wish Him Well"

Abe Greene, National Boxing Association Commission, said he was "sorry to see Louis coming back—because I still remember him as the superb fighter he was."

"But if Joe decides that he does want to come back," Greene continued, "anything he does is perfectly satisfactory to me, as it will be to all men in boxing. I wish him well."

Eddie Eagan, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, preferred to make no comment. He said he is "sure" the Louis-Charles winner will be recognized in New York as the heavyweight champ. New York never did crown a successor to Louis.

Charles, just turned 29, is the heavyweight champion in all 47 N.B.A. States. Lee Savold is British champ by his win over Bruce Woodcock.

Louis, beset by income tax problems, said through Norris that he was going into training immediately in an attempt to regain the title he surrendered March 1, 1949. He held the championship longer than any heavyweight in history and defended it most often.

The Brown Bomber will fight Charles at New York's Yankee Stadium or Chicago in late September.

Tony Matlock Leads Big Field In Seagram Test

Sudbury, July 29 (CP) —Kitchener's Tony Matlock, Ontario amateur golf finalist, fired a four-over-par 72 over the Sudbury Golf Club Friday to lead a record field of 125 in the qualifying round for the Seagram Cup.

Matlock put together rounds of 34 and 38 over the nine-hole course for a one-stroke margin over Art Riley of Sudbury and Bill Franklin of Kitchener. A field of 16 qualified for the championship flight of the tournament, a gruelling 54-hole medal play test.

Four players, Dave and Bill Morland of North Bay, Ernie Johnson of Hamilton, and Johnny Poupore of Idlewyld, trailed with 74's, Bobby Fair of Toronto last year's winner, shot a 75, as did Manse Robinson of Idlewyld.

Other qualifiers were Vic Turunen, Sudbury; Merv Stoughton, North Bay; Ron McAlpine, Hamilton; Milt Plomke, Kitchener; Bill Little, Parry Sound; Dr. C. W. Irwin, Ridgetown; Ed Patterson, Idlewyld.

Joe is rated one of the best first-basemen in softball and is regarded as the hardest hitter in topflight circles today. He will be seen here next Thursday night when the Tip Toppers play an all-star squad drawn from the ranks of the Commercial Softball League in an exhibition match sponsored by the Belleville Optimists Club. With Joe will be such famous softball luminaries as Charlie Justice, brilliant hurler; Eddie Geraldi, Sam Shefsky, Art Upper, Bobby Dear, McConner and other stars in the fastball firmament. The game will be played in the Exhibition Grounds starting at 8 o'clock.

Some Thoughts on Luminous Lures

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

(Noted Sportsman, Author, and creator of Solunar Tables.)

For the past year or more we have been hearing a great deal about luminous lures. As is true of nearly everything connected with fish and fishing, there are many and varied opinions concerning the efficacy of these new "fire" lures when compared with established, conventional types.

Far be it from this reporter to accuse anybody of a tendency to pop off about something with which he's not completely conversant. That would indeed be a case of the pot and the kettle.

The fact remaines that there should be some way to create order out of chaos in this complete hodge-podge of contrary opinions about luminous lures.

Not New Idea

The idea of luminous lures is by no means new. More years ago than I like to remember there were lures on the market decorated with phosphorescent paint. These, if exposed to sunlight during the day, gave off a satisfactory glow after dark. And they caught fish.

At least thirty years ago certain British anglers, notably the late G.E.M Skues, did considerable experimenting with natural colors in fly-tying materials in the attempt to discover which of them possessed most of that desireable attribute, luminosity.

These men had learned that undyed materials were more effective fish-getters than dyed materials and, while trying to find out why, somebody found out that many of the naturals were slightly fluorescent.

Seal's fur, they learned, had more than its share of natural glow and it is for that reason that so many British fly patterns stipulate that the body be made of seal's fur.

Going one step further, both British and American angler-scientists tried unsuccessfully to activate certain fly-tying materials with ultra-violet light.

Gantron Fire-Fibre

A few years ago a gentleman from California, Mr. John O. Ganter, Jr. of Gantner and Mattern's, San Francisco, came out with Gantron Fire-fibre. This material was first used, I believe, to illuminate signal flags and shoulder patches during the war.

Mr. Gene Burns, also of California, saw this material, so after the war he secured some of it from the makers and began experimenting with its use in fish lures.

He turned up some surprising results. Then, unwilling to trust his own findings, he sent samples of the material to 200 able anglers scattered all over the world. urging them to test the material and then report their findings.

Of these, 153 replied. No need here to go into the conflicting opinions in these reports. One thing stood out clearly—Gantron proved to be most effective when the day was cloudy and overcast, in the early morning and in the late evening—in short, duing the "shadow hours" of the day.

Underwater Vision Theory

Burns pondered on this and on his own observations, back over the years. Then a great light dawned. His theory of underwater vision makes more sense than any I have seen. This is about the way he adds things up.

The eye of the fish has a large pupil which is fixed and incapable of adjustment. In addition, its color range is wider than that of the human eye, enabling the fish actually to see the ultra-violet — something that we cannot do.

The enlarged eye permits a disproportionate amount of light to enter. On a sunny day, if the fish is in the sunlight, he will take yellow, black, red, green or blue indiscriminately, particularly in a surfece lure. Evidently he sees only the silhouette.

Burns pointed out that game fish almost always choose resting stations in the shade—under rocks ledges, undercut banks, logs, bushes, or what have you. His theory is that this choice of cover has little to do with escape from their natural enemies. Water snakes, turtles, otter and such hunt these very places when looking for a meal.

Shadows Better For Seeing

The probabilities are that the shadows enable a fish to see better what goes on about him, much the same as we can have a better view of a well-lighted area if we sit in a darkened room.

By the same token, fish will cruise about in the shallows during the "shadow hours" — early morning and late evening. This familiar behavior trait no doubt can be accounted for to a great extant by the existence of favorable light conditions.

This line of reasoning ties in quite well with the 153 Gantron testers who reported that the material seemed to be most effective during the "shadow hours."

Ultra-violet rays are present even though the sun may be obscured by clouds and Gantron is illuminated by ultra-violet.

My experience with the silhouette idea seems to confirm it, at least it does to my own satisfaction. One instance stands out quite clearly.

Some years ago we found that a fly called the Olive Badger was a good fish-getter on Brodhead's Creek, Penna. On sunny days this fly would really produce.

On cloudy days, in early morning or late evening, even in the shadow of a bush or a tree — any place where the fish could see color — this same fly was useless.

Material Carefully Guarded

So far as the Gantron lures are concerned, I haven't done enough work with them to express a fair opinion. The material has been carefully guarded and it is distributed only to certain professional fly-tyers.

However, I am extremely interested in the work that Burns is doing. His thinking on light and its reactions on fish seem to give us the answer to many questions that have not heretofore been explained satisfactorily.

Mr. Burns deserves a large vote of thanks from the anglers of the country for turning up some solid ideas which should give us much food for thought.

Ponder Favored Over Rivals In Turf Classic

Chicago, July 29 (AP) — Calumet farm's Ponder, 1949 Kentucky Derby winner and conqueror of Noor and Citation during the winter season, was favored over 10 rivals in today's $82,900 Arlington Handicap at Arlington Park.

This mile-and-a-quarter classic richest in its 21 runnings, closes Arlington's 36-day meeting. The Chicago racing scene Monday shifts to Washington Park for 31 days.

Ponder will carry top weight of 128 pounds over his favorite distance. If he races to form, the Calumet star will uncork his customary drive coming around the last turn. And the horses he may have to beat then probably will include Cochise and Loser Weeper, which won seven stakes between them on Eastern seaboard tracks.

Oil Capitol, one of the disappointments of this year's Kentucky Derby, will try the handicap carrying 111 pounds. Tom Gray's three-year-old Hass Been named as an entry with Hasty House farm's Inseparable.

Crawford Metals Down Energetics By 16-12 Score

Crawford Metals had their work cut out for them last evening as they outlasted a stubborn Energetic Club team 16-12 in a frenzied exhibition of softball at the Alemite Field. The winless Energetics, who tied the "Scrappers" 15-15 in their first meeting this season with a nine run rally in the last two innings had the men of Speigel plenty worried last night before they finally succumbed.

Crawfords struck for seven runs in the bottom of the first inning as eleven men came to the plate. It looked like a runaway but Energetics jumped on fastballing Lloyd Faulkner for six runs in the top of the second.

Crawfords started to march again in their end of the second with Muirhead, who got a life on an error to the third baseman, riding home on Kreh's towering home run to left field. The next three men went down in order however, as a threatened rally was choked in its infancy.

Chase Pitcher

The Energetics sizzling with vim and vigor, trampled all over their rivals again in the third frame as they chased Faulkner from the hill. Three singles and a walk was enough and Taylor came in to relieve with one away. He surrendered a single and a double before retiring the side as four runs, charged to Faulkner, gave the Energetics a one run lead.

A single by Faulkner and a 3 base error by the rightfielder in the third evened things up again. Energetics collected a lone tally in the fourth and Crawfords replied with a four run rally that gave them the lead which managed to hold until the end of the game. Milligan's triple to right field was the big blow in the uprising.

Energetics concluded their scoring with a lone tally in the sixth while the "Scrappers" added two in the eighth for insurance.

Faulkner went two and one third innings and was nicked for six hits and ten runs. Taylor surrendered five hits for two runs in relief to claim the win for Crawfords. Jim Scriven tolled the whole way for Energetics being tagged for ten hits and the loss.

Line Up:

Energetic Club: White 2b; Bell lf; Stickle 3b; Moynes 1b; A. McMillan cf; W. Townson, ss, rf, replaced by McNiven in 4th, rf; Hitchon rf, ss; Scriven p; Outingdyke c.

Father Advises Sculling Star To Pass up Race

Port Dalhousie, Ont., July 29 (CP)—The championship singles, always a final-day drawing card in the Royal Canadian Henley, has lost some of its appeal this year. It has diamond sculls winner Jack Kelly, Jr., of Philadelphia in the leading role—but no Jack Guest Jr., the pride and joy of Candaa's sculling world.

It would have been a natural for Philadelphia Jack to meet Toronto Jack this afternoon but the 17-year-old Canadian—on advice of his father one-time-sculler father—has decided to let it slide. He is too young and has had seven singles races in a week—all of them winners, by the way.

"It would be too much to ask of a youngster," the elder Guest said in an interview after watching his son win the Association singles yesterday. It was his third victory of this 68th annual regatta.

Old Days Revived at Hollywood Arena, Actors Get Best Seats

By BOB MEYERS

Hollywood, July 29 (AP)—The old days are being revived at the famed Hollywood Legion Stadium, a boxing arena where for nearly 30 years movie stars have gathered to be seen, and fans flocked into the place to see them.

And each Friday night, Hollywood's habitual "fight night at the Legion," stars and fans cram into the spick and span club and enjoy a mutual pleasure against a backdrop of sweating boxers and thuddinfists.

About two years ago movie patronage began falling off; probably because the management for some puzzling reason elected to favor others with prominent ringside seats.

Stars First

There has been a change, however. The movie people are getting back the choice pews, and the fans are again elbowing through the turnstiles.

The stadium for years has served as a barometer for a star's prestige. He or she could almost be judged by where he sat.

In the old days, Mae West, Pat O'Brien, George Raft and others bought their seats by the year—at nearly $400 per pair. You had to be famous to get them.

Faithful Lupe

Lupe Velez was perhaps the most faithful fight fan of them all.

Lupe's shrill exhortation to her favorite gladiators—"keeel the bum"—was a catch phrase.

The gallery lost a friend when she died, and there was hardly a dry eye in the place the night they tolled off 10 soft taps on the bell for Lupe Velez.

Happy and Gay

"If you wanta be happy you've got to be happy and gay." This from Gloria de Haven, who should know.

Gloria is one of the most sought after girls in Hollywood, a community loaded with beautiful females. Her date list includes cinemaland's most eligible and desirable males.

Just back from a personal appearance in New York, Gloria said she dated Joe DiMaggio there. She arranged their meeting because she is a fan of his.

Sourpuss N.G.

Nobody likes a sourpuss," she went on. "A sparkling personality is the best asset a girl can have.

"Everybody likes people who can smile easily and can bring them a little happiness. That doesn't mean you have to be a comedian. It just means being understanding and having a sense of humor. . .

"Of course, everyone likes to have someone they can tell their troubles to once in a while," she smiled. "But it is folly to go around crying on everybody's shoulder."

Personality Counts

"The same thing goes for men" she added. "I don't care about the physical appearance of a man. His personality is much more important to me.

"It's easy to be popular. But I don't go out quite as often as it gets printed.

"I seldom have a date while I'm working on a picture."

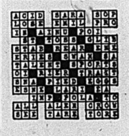
Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle:



Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows were sitting on Glasses Magee's frunt steps waiting for something to happen, which nothing kept on doing, and I said, Here comes Shorty Judge, I bet you a cent the ferst thing he does is tell us what time it is by that big new silver watch he got selling tooth paste with free tooth brushes.

Sure, and then he'll tell us again every 5 minutes, and thne he'll want us to take terns running around the block so he can keep time with that darn watch, and everything elts, Glasses said, and Leroy Shooster said, No he wont, either, because his watch has stopped going. I saw him shaking it and then listening to it disappointed, he said.

Being good news, and Sid Hunt said, Oh boy, will we have fun asking him what time it is.

Which we started to do as soon as Shorty came upfi me saying, Hay, Shorty, by the way, what time is it?

Heh? Shorty said. Why, I must of forgot and left my watch home he said, and Sid said, The heck you did, I can see the bimp in your top pockit.

Oh, I guess that's rite, Shorty said. Well, anyway, there's sutch a thing as overwerking a watch by pulling it out too often, he said, and us fellows said, Aw, what time is it, tell u sthe time, go ahead, we dare you, we duble dare you.

Which just then Shorty started to look happy, saying, Hay, listen. Hurraw, it's going, you can hear it all a ways through my pockit. Do you really want to know what time it is? he said.

And he quick took his watch out and looked, saying, Gosh, it's all wrong ,it must of ran down and I forgot to set the hands when I wound it.

The result being us fellows yelled and laffed to prove we knew the truth, and Shorty pertended he didn't even know what we were talking about.

Mackenzie's Column:

Why is Stalin Now Returning To United Nations

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Russia's reason for returning to the United Nations after her lengthy boycott is anybody's guess.

Observers at Lake Success hazard the thought that Prime Minister Stalin may be going to challenge U.N. intervention in Korea. Or may be bent on trying to get the Chinese red seated — or is getting set for further communist expansion and wants to spike U.N. action by the veto power — or might even be ready to make a peace gesture by ending the Korean upheaval.

There are other possibilities. However, the mind of the Kremlin in as inscrutable as the Egyptian Sphinx, and the world won't know the truth until Stalin gets ready to disclose it.

No Fundamental Change

There is, as I see it, only one thing of which observers can be dead sure at this juncture. This puzzling move by Moscow doesn't mean any fundamental change in the red program of world revolution for the spread of communism.

Stalin may be making a change in tactics, though. If he is, it won't be the first time by a long shot. The generalissimo has always shown himself ready to revise his methods to meet any new circumstances.

It's worth noting that this is one of the characteristics which give Stalin such a powerful hold over his followers. He is a shrewd leader, and never has hesitated to make drastic changes of policy when he saw the need for them.

Stalin is credited by many with having long foreseen the coming of the Second World War. He figured that this would give Russia the opening she wanted for the spread of communism. When the conflict finally was precipitated through Moscow's signing of a non-aggression pact with Hitler, Russia got caught in the net and had to fight for her life.

Watson Blasts Triple in 10th To Give Batawa 8-7 Victory Over Picton in Uphill Battle

Batawa Shoemen climaxed an uphill fight with the Picton McFarland Athletics last evening by hammering over two tying runs in the ninth inning to deadlock the score at 7-7, and then went on in the tenth to squeeze over the winning run as they captured the tense ten inning marathon 8-7.

Things never looked exactly bright for the Shoemen who had to come from behind at all stages of the contest before clinching the win with a brilliant bit of strategy in the tenth.

With the score tied at 7-7 and one away, Mac Watson blasted a triple to left centre field for his fourth hit in four tries. Catcher John Aquino then dumped a perfect sacrifice bunt down the first base line as Watson roared in standing up with the clincher.

The real turning point came in the ninth inning however, as the rival coaches tried to outguess each other. Picton starter lefty Denny Hayden, who had held the Shoemen to eight hits with a sinking drop and a roundhouse hook, issued his sixth and seventh walks to Watson and Bush with one away. Frank Dyer was rushed in to the rescue and coach Dick Bridgeman countered by pulling out Spencer for Art Wright. Wright worked the count to full house and then dumped one into short centrefield to plate Watson. Don Semark came in to bat for Rankin and he too crashed out a single to score Bush to tie the ball game. Peacock grounded out pitcher to first as the runners moved up and then Red Carson, who had a triple and single in four tries was intentionally passed to load the bases. Solmes broke up the suspense by popping out to short.

Peacock to Rescue

Ken Peacock who came on in the eighth to relieve starter Gord Muffitt struck out the side in order in the top of the tenth whiffing McDonald, Dean and Goyer.

Picton opened the scoring in the top of the second frame with pitcher Hayden pounding in three runs with a triple to left field.

Batawa tied the score in their half of the second with a single by Watson, errors to McDonald and Smith, and Carson's single accounting for three runs.

Picton went ahead again in the fourth on a single by McDonald, an error to Bridgeman, and a single by Goyer. Batawa evened it up again in the fourth with Carson tripling to score Spencer who had walked. Carson was thrown out at the plate on a beautiful relay from Duetta and Fitzpatrick as he tried to stretch his hit into a home run.

Gold Muffitt weakened in the seventh as Picton counted twice on a single by Hayden, an error that put Perry on, and McDonald's double. Hayden tripled to lead off the ninth but was held as Perry and Wardhaugh struck out. However, with the count at two strikes on Fitzpatrick he stole home sliding in safely as Aquino bobbled the throw from Peacock.

Batawa came up with the tying markers in the bottom of the ninth and went on to win the thriller in the tenth.

Muffitt toiled seven frames walking two, whiffing eight and being nicked for six runs. Peacock walked none, struck out six and gave up a single hit in three innings of relief to claim the win.

Hayden started for the losers and went out in the ninth. Dyer failed to hold the Shoemen and was nicked for the loss.

FRANKFORD

Frankford Wins Over Centenary 15-9 In Playoff Series

Frankford— Frankford went one up in the semi-final playoff series with Centenary, as they took a 15-9 game from the visitors from down Belleville way. Frankford batters took advantage of Aikens' lack of control in the first frame, as they coupled three hits with four walks for seven runs. Aikens then settled down for a couple of frames, but ran into trouble in the fourth when Frankford countered six more times. Aikens has a good ball, and with control would be a hard pitcher to beat. Bates pitched good ball for Frankford, until he ran into three successive hits in the final frame, which, along with two walks was sufficient to warrant relief by Hearns. Hearns was promptly greeted by a home run off the bat of Marshall, but then retired the side without further damage.

The two opposing pitchers, Aikens and Bates helped their own causes as each belted home runs. The next game in Johnstown Monday night should bring plenty of action. The first game of the series, played in Centenary, ended in a tie as the game was called for darkness.

Belleville Livestock Sales Limited

WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

Over 350 head of cattle were offered at the weekly auction at the Belleville Livestock Sales Arena on Tuesday July 25th, in addition to 200 calves and the usual large number of pigs. Prices were somewhat easier, reflecting the general softening noted at Toronto and Montreal. Good bologna bulls sold up to $23.00 per hundred with light bringing 18 to 20 cents per pound. Choice beef cows made 22¼ cents, plain to medium 19 to 21 cents, canners and cutters 15½ to 18 cents per pound. Springers made up to $250.00 according to quality, with some choice dairy cows bringing $275.00. Calves sold well with choice calves in the afternoon run bringing tops of 31¼ cents per pound. Medium calves sold from 27 to 29 cents, plain 18 to 26 cents, small made from $15.00 to $25.00 according to size and quality.

100 lb. feeder hogs brought $24.00 to $29.00, 50 to 60 lb. feeders $18.00 to $20.00, small pigs made $10.00 to $12.00 according to size and quality. Lambs sold up to 31½ cents with sheep 12½ to 18 cents per pound.

MR. FARMER — These Sales are getting bigger each week — More STOCK and more BUYERS —Another New York State packing house sent their buyer this week. YOU can't afford to miss this opportunity to benefit from the keen BUYING competition at THE BELLEVILLE LIVESTOCK SALES ARENA.

SALE EVERY TUESDAY.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT
(For Hugh Fullerton, Jr.)

New York, July 29—(AP)—It seemed like old times when the fight clan gathered above Madison Square Garden to hear that Joe Louis was coming back at a ripe 36 to battle Ezzard Charles.

Mike Jacobs wasn't there. The rare old character who ramrodded the game for a colorful decade now is in Florida taking his ease. But Jim Norris, the new head of Octupus, Inc., more than filled Mike's big chair.

He beamed, justifiably, as one visitor after another shook his large hand and congratulated him on "putting boxing back on the map" and "saving the game."

The Louis-Charles announcement followed by only 24 hours Norris' signing of Willie Pep and Sandy Saddler for a featherweight title scrap and completion of arrangements for a program of 70 or more indoor bouts during the coming season.

No Purse Trouble

"We won't have any trouble with Jake Mintz (Charles' manager). Jake will be in in about a week to talk things over. Jake knows as well as I do that a 20-per-cent cut of a fight with Joe Louis is worth a whole lot more than 50 per cent against fellows like Freddie Beshore."

"One thing about Louis," interposed Harry Markson, the Garden's director of boxing, "Joe never gave you any trouble about his share of the money. He always left you a good working margin."

"What do you think Joe can make for this fight, Jim—about 225 pounds?" a writer inquired innocently.

"Two-twenty-five?" Norris exclaimed. "He'll weigh no more than 212-13. He'll be no heavier than he was for the second Walcott fight.

The Gentle Heart

By Kay Hamilton

Mrs. Folsom took the hint and got up from her chair. "No need to get huffy, my dear," she said in her kindest manner ."After all, it's none of it your fault, and when you've grown older, you'll know there's no use whatever trying to cover up for other people. They'll undo your good works every time and leave you feeling like a fool, and a guilty fool at that. Well, I'll be running along. My train goes at seven so I might as well leave Ghillie here now. Here's the money for his keep and Ruthven will bring over his bed, and his dish, and waterpan. You know, I feed him only once a day, and not too heavily. The vet said it was better at his age, otherwise he'd get fat and asthmatic." She leaned forward, pecked Jenny briskly on each cheek and left.

Jenny stammered suddenly, overwhelmed with the suddenness of it all, "But—but I had no idea you were going right away."

Mrs. Folsom waved a nonchalant hand from the front steps. "Yes, indeed, my sister is quite sick, and if I weren't such a coward I'd fly out, so as to be there sooner. Good-bye Ghillie, be a good boy and do whatever Jenny tells you."

Ghillie sat on the top step of the porch and watched his mistress depart without any demonstration of regret. He seemed perfectly aware of the fact that he was to stay with the Mayhews now and Jenny marveled at his canine understanding. When she turned to go indoors, he trotted at her heels in contentment.

Jenny felt ashamed of the fact that she had let her annoyance at Mrs. Folsom's questions obscure the older woman's very real trouble. She should have called some message after her, should have said she hoped she would find her sister improved, or something like that. But it had all come so suddenly that she had stood there mute, rather overwhelmed by the whole episode. Now she picked up the little wad of bills Mrs. Filsom had left, counted them, and made a note of them on the desk pad. Either Mrs. Folsom must expect to be gone a long time, or else she wanted Ghillie fed on steaks.

Before she had come out of her trance, Ruthven knocked on the back door. He carried a bamboo dog basket with a green cushion under one arm, and a large crockery bowl with Doggy printed on it under the other. A somewhat flatter bowl dangled from his fingers. He spun the various objects across the kitchen floor cleverly, so that the basket came to rest by the west window and the two bowls nestled each other under the sink.

"Be-l, food, drink," he drawled. "Doghouse coming up."

"Doghouse!" Jenny cried.

"Yeah, I know. He don't really use it any more, but Miz Folsom thinks he likes to take a nap out-of-doors once in a while, so I'm to bring it over.

Ghillie, who had come to sudden life with Ruthven's appearance, made sudden little darts and rushes at the big man's feet, growling ferociously Jenny saw that he never really touched them It was an old game with him and Ruthven, who, after ignoring him all this time, abruptly stooped and made a dive for the dog, growling in his throat in a very good imitation of the scottie's voice.

For a minute or two it sounded like a dog fight, then subsided. Ruthven jerked his head toward the panting scottie. "Has to have a little excitement now and then," he said. "Keeps his arteries young." He turned and left, and Jenny, as always when Ruthven had been there, was compelled to stifle her laughter until he was out of earshot.

Ruthven was the neighborhood handyman. He had been around for as long as Jenny could remember, and had always looked the same. She wondered now how old he was His slow, New England drawl, his habit of clipping his sentences to a minimum never failed to delight her. And he was a godsend to the household of three girls, putting up screens and storm windows, digging the garden, making small repairs and mowing the lawn.

Her eye caught the electric clock over the stove and she jumped. The casserole went into the oven as fast as she could get it there. The bread sticks were popped into the bun-warmer at top speed. She whirled upstairs and was under the shower in two minutes flat.

When she came out, she spied Ghillie sniffing interestedly at her shoes Aat once he barked, loudly, demandingly. Jenny groaned.

"Natalie! Are you dressed?" she called.

"More or less," her sister answered from down the hall.

"Then wil lyou let the dog out? I'm not dressed?"

There was a moment's silence. "What did you say?" Natalie cried.

"Will you let the dog out?"

Another silence, then Nat's voice come fro mthe doorway. "Isn't that funny? I could have sworn you said, 'Let the dog out!'"

"I did." Jenny's voice was muffled She was half in, half out of her slip. "Ghillie wants to go out." Ghillie trotted out from under the bed at hearing his name, the spread draped ridiculously over his hind quarters so that he seemed to be wearing a crocheted train Natalie gasped.

Jenny explained rapidly, ending "And so we have a dog for the next—I don't know how long."

Nat burst out laughing. "Well, it's a relief to know that my hearing isn't failing, and neither are you going out of your mind—two posibilities which had occurred to me, I'll admit!" She took Ghillie with her downstairs.

Everything went with a rush in preparation for the party. Brent came early, as he had promised, to help in the kitchen. "When I was buttling for Lady Vere de Vere," he said loftily, tying on a large kitchen apron, "I only took care of the silver and wine and supervised the serving. This sort of thing," he waved a derogatory hand toward supper, "was left to the footmen."

"I know," Jenny took him up at once. "And when I was cook to His Grace the Duke of Whatsonwich I wouldn't have soiled me hands with a vegetable. Scullery maids I had for that sort of thing, slews of 'em, and an undercook for the pastry, as well."

"Your English accent is lousy," Pete Torres said from the doorway.

"Go away, you're a guest. Don't you know you're place, man?" Brent threatened him with a cake cutter.

"I'm a human guest," Pete retorted, "believe it or not, and I couldn't stand those delicious smells a minute longer without investigating."

Jenny looked down her short nose at him. "Those are not smells, my good fellow. Those are aromas!"

Elsa peered over her husband's shoulder. "If I could cook like that!" she cried, her eyes fastening on the birthday cake. "If I could cook like that - - -" she waved her hand expressively, words failing her.

"You'd have a fat husband," Pete supplied. "Perhaps it's just as well. As it is, my love, we keep our food bills down to a minimum, not having any great desire to pamper the inner man. If you could cook like that I'd have to go to work, and that would be a real tragedy."

Pete and Elsa lived in a tiny cottage two blocks away. Pete was a chess expert, and conducted a syndicated chess column for several newspapers. Jenny knew that he had a modest, independent income and suspected that it was that and Elsa's earnings which really supported them. Elsa was clever with clothes. She had built up a small designing business for the wealthy women of Westport and vicinity, and was more and more in demand. But she preferred to design for herself, or occasionally her friends, and was just as apt to turn down business as to accept it. They were happy in their easy life, and Jenny often thought they had fewer responsibilities than any other couple she knew.

Gary came with Faith and Max. He had brought Natalie a small bedside radio. Jenny wished she could have seen her sister's face when he presented it, but she had been busy in the kitchen at the time. She thought afterward that it might have told her what she so much wanted to know—how Natalie felt about him. But there was a glow on Natalie's face which Jenny was sure was not entirely caused by excitement of the party, a soft eagerness underlying her usual brisk detached manner.

There was certainly no doubt about Faith and Max, and it made Jenny happy to see them together. Faith Owen was the widow of a young officer who had died in the Pacific. She had been very much in love with her husband and after his death had retired from the world and her friends, seldom going out, burying herself and her grief in her little cottage. Then, when the war was over, Max Lord had come to see her. He had been a brother officer of Owen's, had promised his friend if anything happened to see his widow, and he was fulfilling that promise the first time he called upon her.

But Faith had wanted to hear more than he could tell her in one visit. He had come again and again. Soon he had decided to settle in Green Ridge—after all, it was not too long a commutation to Bridgeport, where his work was—and he was boarding now with Mrs. Benson. His interest in Green Ridge obviously centered in the Owen cottage, next door to the Mayhews, and since he came so often Faith had ventured from her shell and was looking young and pretty again.

It was really a gay party. They ate in the dining room—"Too many mosquitoes outside," Natalie declared—and Brent performed nobly as the butler. There was a lull when the mousse, the casserole, and salad had disappeared, and Jenny went to prepare the ice cream servings and the cake.

submarine came within three miles of shore around Chance Harbor, N.B. Once inside the three-mile limit, the sub was violating Canadian boundaries.

The question of Fundy Bay water was thrashed out in court nearly 100 years ago when an American ship, the Washington, was seized there by the British. An arbitration umpire in 1853 ruled that the Bay didn't entirely belong to Canada and neither Britain nor Canada has ever seriously challenged this decision.

Now a rash of sub-sighting reports has come from the inlets of Fundy—Chignecto Bay and now even its inlet, Shepody Bay. Naval authorities say the people along those coasts have sworn they have seen subs where subs would be left high and dry, where no sane sub commander would dream of going.

They have seen sailors popping out of the conning towers, popping back in again in time for the craft to submerge. They have even had them up in the Petitcodiac River, the narrow, muddy stream which musters the famous bore and sends it by Moncton as one of New Brunswick's prime tourist attractions.

King Leopold Bows to Opposition Forces

Prepared to Give Temporary Powers To 19-Year Son

Socialists Must Withdraw Political, Economic Demands

Brussels, July 31 — (CP) — King Leopold today said he is prepared to delegate temporarily his royal powers to his 19-year-old son, Prince Baudoin.

The announcement was made through Prime Minister Jean Duvieusart after his third conference of the day with the monarch.

The King's offer was made on conditions that the dispute between Flanders and Wallonia over his family's return ceased.

The King specified that, as a condition of his proposal, the opposition socialists must withdraw their political and economic demands and make them later through parliamentary channels.

Belgium has been torn by civil dissension, strikes and riots since Leopold III returned July 22 from his exile in Switzerland.

The violence was capped last night with the death of three anti-Leopoldists in Liege.

The Premier gave out this statement after a conference earlier today with the King:

The premier declined to say whether the hoped-for solution will be the King's formal abdication or a milder delegation of his powers to crown Prince Baudoin.

Negotiations were proceeding in a powder keg atmosphere. Approximately 2,500 anti-Leopoldists were marching in Brussels from southern Belgium— vanguard of a gigantic demonstration planned in the capital for tomorrow.

The pro-Leopold government admitted that crippling country-wide strikes were spreading. It said more workers left their jobs in Antwerp, Ghent and Brussels.

Prior to the premier's talk with the King, a spokesman had said:

SOCKEYE SEASON OPENS, EXPECT HUGE CATCH

Vancouver, July 31—(CP) — More than 2,000 west-coast fishing boats converged like seagulls near the mouth of the Fraser River today for opening of the salmon sockeye season. The fishing continues until ordered stopped by the International Salmon Fisheries Commission.

Fishermen expect a huge catch. Some day the take may top that from the 1946 sockeye run which, in the Fraser alone, was valued at more than $8,000,000 to canneries.

The same conditions that brought the sleek, silver sockeye charging up the Fraser four years ago prevail today.

This is a cycle year—one in four—when runs are greatly increased as the salmon return upstream to spawn after four years in the sea.

And the class of 1950 are the offspring of the first cycle run ever to use the Hell's Gate fishways, built in 1945.

The giant fish ladder, built in the tempestuous water of the lower Fraser Canyon at Hope, 100 miles east of here, helped 28,000 salmon in 1946 to climb to spawning ground in northern lakes.

$250,000 Fire In N.S. Village

Tamagouche, N. S., July 31 — (CP) — Fire which started in a Main Street store here Sunday night destroyed four business establishments and left two families homeless. Damage was estimated at about $250,000.

The fire departments of Truro, Pictou, Oxford, Wallace, Bible Hill and River John helped battle the fire.

The blaze was discovered at 10 p. m. Seven hours later the ruins were still smouldering but under control.

Telephone and power services in the village were disrupted, and telephone circuits with other parts of the province were not re-established until today.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS:

Toronto, July 31 (CP)—Synopsis: In the cool air which covers northern regions, temperatures this morning range from freezing to the low 40s. In Southwestern Ontario on the other hand temperatures held at 65 to 70. The boundary between cooler and warmer air is not well defined but the relative position of the two air masses will change very little today or Tuesday. It will continue cloudy with showers in Southern Ontario, gradually improving through the central regions to sunny weather in Northern Ontario.

Have No Means Of Detecting A-Bomb in Ships

Washington, July 31. (AP) —If an atomic bomb were smuggled into the United States crated in the hold of an enemy ship it could not be detected except by opening the crate, an atomic scientist said today.

Dr. Karl Z. Morgan of the Atomic Energy Commission's Oak Ridge, Tenn., laboratory told a press conference he knows of no detection instrument that would disclose a bomb hidden in a crate.

He and other scientists declined to comment on the detection possibilities in the case of a smuggled-in hydrogen bomb.

Attlee's Warning of Danger Facing Britons Given Support in Press

London, July 31 (AP) —Prime Minister Attlee's grave warning of the danger facing Britons over the Korean fighting today received widespread support in British newspapers.

The Liberal News Chronicle says Attlee's speech "brought home once again the fact that the war in Korea is part of a world-wide conspiracy against the life of the free democracies."

"It was a pity that after his eloquent warning of the dangers that beset us, Mr. Attlee did not give greater urgency to his plea for sacrifices to build up our defences," the News Chronicle added.

The Conservative Daily Mail agrees with the Prime Minister that it is essential for Britain to rearm, but observes: "There is plenty to criticize about the things that have been left undone over recent years and months."

The Times, Independent, says Attlee's broadcast "matched the needs of the hour. He expressed all the steadiness and resolution of the nation. . ."

The Daily Graphic, Conservative, urges Britons to heed Attlee's words.

"We may think that the government are not yet setting the pace sufficiently, and that they ought to do more," The Daily Graphic says. "But that is no reason for dragging our own steps."

Only the Communist Daily Worker objects.

The Daily Worker says it thinks he was too urgent, adding that he "wants a world war against communism."

FOUR BILLION ADDITIONAL AID WILL BE ASKED

Congressional Leaders Meet With Truman

Washington, July 31—(AP)—President Truman told congressional leaders today he is sending up a message asking $4,000,000,000 additional for military aid to anti-communist countries.

Chairman Clarence Cannon (Dem. Mo.) of the appropriations committee of the House of Representatives said there was "unanimous agreement" among democratic and republican leaders to expedite action on the request.

Needs Prompt Action

Cannon said there is agreement on procedure, he explained, under which the bill can be brought to the floor quickly.

He said the President said there is "an emergency" which requires immediate action to arm allies of the United States.

Support for the President's request was assured in advance.

Chairman Kenneth McKellar (Dem. Tenn.) of the Senate Appropriations Committee, one of the White House conferees, told reporters he thinks Congress is in the mood to "give the government anything it needs to win this war."

He said an increase in the $1,222,500,000 Congress already has voted to help rearm countries standing against the threat of communist aggression appears to be one of those needs.

Transplanted Cornea Give Woman Vision

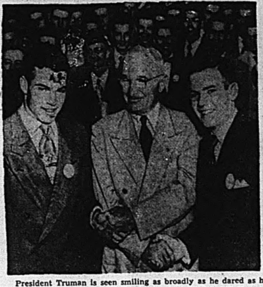
Toronto, July 31. (CP) — An operation in which a man gave a cornea to a sightless woman has turned out successfully, a hospital official said today.

The operation was performed at Toronto General Hospital about two weeks ago. The cornea, a transparent "window" which covers the eye, was removed from Cyril Mosher's eye and transferred to the eye of the woman, whose identity was not revealed.

"The woman can see now," the official said. "The operation was a success but how great a success can not be determined for several weeks."

Mosher son of A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congrss of Labor, had faulty vision in the eye from which he gave the cornea. The cornea, however, was in perfect condition. Mosher was released from hospital a short time after the transplant. Both Mosher and the woman are about 40.

CAMERA SHY BECAUSE OF A MISSING TOOTH



President Truman is seen smiling as broadly as he dared as he welcomed to Washington newly elected officers of Boys' Nation, an American Legion sponsored citizenship training program organization. Behind the president's unusually subdued smile lies a story. It seems the chief executive is undergoing some dental work and he turned up at ceremony minus a front tooth. Exchanging handshakes are George Jefferson, left, of Portland, Oregon, president of the Boys' Nation, President Truman and Boys' Nation Vice-President Thomas Rutter of Munhall, Pa. In background are Legionnaires and members of the Boys' Nation. — Central Press Canadian.

Record Amount of Atomic Explosive Produced in U.S. Radioactive Poisons Studied

By FRANK E. CAREY

Washington, July 31 (AP) — The United States Atomic Energy Commission said today that since January it has produced a record amount of the explosive which goes into A-bombs.

It also disclosed that it is studying the possibility of making an atomic poison weapon.

In a semi-annual report to Congress, the atomic agency told of a stepped-up program during the first six months of this year, involving "all forms" of atomic weapons, including the hydrogen bomb.

It hinted that this may have resulted in greater production of atomic bombs by saying that during the six-month period "the rate of current operations" on the entire atomic project had "accelerated."

In the same period, the commission said, production of uranium-235 and plutonium — the explosive ingredients used in making atomic bombs—hit "the highest rate in the history of the project." The same materials are also used in experimenting with atomic power for industrial plants and ships.

The agency made no statement as to progress on the hydrogen bombs. But it said the atomic program in general had been "recast to implement the president's directive" of last January ordering work continued on "all forms" of weapons, including the H-bomb.

"Decisions were made and plans formed for constructng the new facilities necessary to implement that directive fully," the report stated, adding that these facilities would be "substantial."

As to the third possible atomic weapon—radioactive poisons — the report said only that "studies on the feasibility of radiological substances as a method of warfare were continued."

Radiological substances send out rays which could contaminate a target area with dangerous radioactivity, forcing the surviving inhabitants to flee.

MacArthur's Visit to Formosa Arouses Much Speculation

Taipei, Formosa, July 31—(AP) —Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his top commanders flew into Formosa today for a war council with Chiang Kai-Shek on nationalist China's role in the Asian conflicts.

They began talking immediately after lunch at Chiang's mountain retreat outside of Taipei. Nature of the conversations was not disclosed.

An informed source, however, said Chiang was expected to renew his offer of 33,000 Chinese Nationalist troops to fight in Korea.

Chiang also was expected to press for a more active role in his war against the Chinese reds.

Chiang was expected to tell MacArthur of Nationalist China's needs for arms and ammunition, spare parts and new planes for his air force and stronger naval units.

In Tokyo, MacArthur's headquarters said only that the visit to Formosa was made in connection with President Truman's order to protect the big nationalist island from a Chinese communist invasion.

The reds had massed large fleets and tens of thousands of troops along the China coast 100 miles west of Formosa. An invasion was expected momentarily when North Korean reds touched off a war in the orient and President Truman drew his historic line protecting Formosa.

When MacArthur's plane, the Bataan, set down at rain-swept Sunghan airfield outside Taipei, Chiang and a host of nationalist leaders greeted him warmly.

The General strode toward Chiang's waiting limousine, patting the nationalist president again and again on the shoulder.

PLANE GIVES FIRE ALARM

Blind River, Ont., July 31 — (CP) — Mrs. H. Bell, cooking dinner in her kitchen Saturday, wondered why a Lands Department airplane kept droning over her house. She went outside for a look. A note fluttered down into the backyard. It said Mrs. Bell's house was on fire. Volunteer firemen, called by Mrs. Bell, put out the blaze. Damage was slight.

ONE OF CANADA'S TOP SCIENTISTS IN HIGH POST

Dr. E. W. R. Steacie Director of N. R. C.

Ottawa, July 31—(CP)— Appointment of one of Canada's top atomic scientists and chemists to co-ordinate all research by the National Research Council—including atomic fission—was announced today.

He is Dr. E. W. R. Steacie, 50, director of the division of chemistry at N.R.C. Who was deputy director of the British-Canadian atomic research project during the war. He will have the title of vice-president (scientific) of the National Research Council.

The announcement was made by Trade Minister Howe in his capacity as chairman of the committee of the Privy Council on scientific and industrial research. Dr. Steacie would "ensure that the work of the several divisions proceeds according to a general over-all plan and that the closest integration of research is maintained throughout the laboratories," Mr. Howe said.

One of these divisions is the atomic energy project at Chalk River, Ont., where Canada has an atomic pile and is carrying on research for peaceful purposes.

It was not indicated what, if any, changes might be made in atomic research plans as a result of the appointment.

Dr. Steacie will continue as director of the division of chemistry a post he has held since 1939. In this division, the announcement said, he has "built up a research group in chemical kinetics that has won world acclaim."

During the war he was closely associated with Dr. Otto Maass of McGill University, Montreal, in the organization of Canadian chemistry for war purposes, especially in the field of chemical warfare and in the development of explosives.

Awarded War Medal

In recognition of his war service he was awarded the Order of the British Empire in 1946.

Scientific divisions of the N.R.C. besides atomic research, which will fall within the scope of his new job include applied biology pure and applied chemistry and physics, buildings, aeronautic, hydraulic and mechanical engineering and the division of medical research which operates through extramural grants to university medical schools.

He will also have authority over the Prairie Regional Laboratory at Saskatoon and the Maritime Regional Laboratory at Halifax.

Dr. Steacie is a graduate of McGill, studied in Germany and London and is a fellow of the Royal Society of London.

He is considered one of the leading physical chemists in the world and probably the leading authority in the field of reactions of atomics and radicals. He has published a number of scientific books, some of which are considered authoritative references in their field.

Lively Puppy Cause of Tragedy In Home for Second Time in Year

Detroit, July 31 (AP) — A lively puppy played a part as tragedy cut into James Cooney's little family for the second time in a year.

It was last September that the Cooneys' 10-year-old son, Wayne was knocked from his bicycle and killed by a car.

To keep daughter Ilene, three, out of the street, Cooney bought her the pup a week ago. He put it on a leash and tied it in the back yard.

While playing with the dog last Wednesday night, Ilene thought up a new game. She freed the pup and put the collar around her own neck—then stumbled and fell while romping.

Her parents found her hanging from the clothes-line to which the leash was attached. Nearby the pup whimpered.

Ilene died Saturday of a fractured vertebrae and pneumonia that followed.

The Cooneys have one other child, five-year-old Brian.

Americans Take Up New Positions 50 Mi. From Pusan

Fresh U.S. Reinforcements Rushed to Sagging Front

Tokyo, Aug. 1 — (Tuesday) — (AP) — Fresh United States troops landed with tanks in South Korea Monday and sped forward to help brace sagging Allied defence lines.

General MacArthur's headquarters said the North Korean reds in force are shifting their pressure from the central sector to the west and southwest.

The communists captured Chinju, 55 miles west of Pusan, vital United States base. An Associated Press correspondent, Hal Boyle, reported from outside Chinju that the Americans withdrew from the coastal anchor to new positions less than 50 miles from Pusan.

The newly-landed forces were of the United States 2nd Infantry Division, under Maj.-Gen. Laurence B. Keiser.

Transported in Trucks

Arriving direct from the United States, many of the new troops headed out in trucks to plug holes punched by North Korean reds along a rectangular front before Pusan, on the southeast coast.

Up to 200,000 men were reported in the big red surge against the shrinking defensive area.

In the central front new pressure was put on Kumchon. But a U.S. 1st Cavalry spokesman there said the city "will be held at all costs."

He said the troops had been forced back slightly to the east, however. Kumchon is 32 miles northwest of Taegu, rail city northwest of Pusan.

As the decisive battle raged, Gen. MacArthur and his top advisers flew to Formosa to talk with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, nationalist Chinese leader. Chiang has offered 33,000 soldiers and some air force units to MacArthur, United Nations commander.

Visit Follows Raid

His visit followed a Chinese nationalist air raid on 500 communist Chinese junks assembling for a possible blow at Quemoy, nationalist island near Amoy.

The Korean fighting now is spread over a rough rectangle. It extends 80 miles north along the east coast from Pusan to Yongdok, thence west 70 miles to Hamchang and 100 miles due south from Hamchang to the vicinity of Chinu.

Spread thinly through the mountains and valleys are three U.S. divisions—the 1st cavalry and the 24th and 25th infantry divisions, the U.S. 5th air force and South Korean units.

Dispatches from the front said many communist dead were strewn on the battlefield. Their own trucks raced over the bodies, trying to reach new positions against the defending forces.

At least two North Korean divisions led the flanking movement around Chinju. Lt.-Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of the U.S. eighth army in Korea, two days ago ordered his men to fight or die in their present positions.

BARRISTER DIES

Ottawa, July 31 (CP) —Edmund Foster Burritt, K.C., 83, prominent Eastern Ontario lawyer and a senior member of the bar in Ottawa, died at his home here Saturday night.

CANADIAN SHIPS, PLANES ARRIVE AT KOREAN FRONT

Tokyo, July 31—(CP)—Canadian ships and planes have arrived in the Korean war zone to strengthen the allied naval and air forces in the battle against the communist aggressors of North Korea.

Three destroyers, the Athabaskan, Cayuga and Sioux, sailed into Korean waters today to join the forces operating under vice-admiral Charles T. Joy, commander of allied naval units in the Far East.

A few hours before, a flight of three R.C.A.F. North Stars of the 426th Thunderbird Squadron landed at a Tokyo airfield. It was the first shuttle trip for the Canadian planes which will fly the supply route from McChord Field, near Tacoma, Wash., to Tokyo.

Mrs. V. Massey Dies at Home In Port Hope

Port Hope, Ont., July 31 (CP) —Mrs. Vincent Massey, wife of the Chancellor of the University of Toronto, died at the Massey home here Saturday after a short illness.

Mrs. Massey, the former Alice Parkin, was daughter of the late Sir George Parkin, former principal of Upper Canada College and first organizing secretary of the Rhodes Scholarship Trust.

During Mr. Massey's term as Canadian High Commissioner to the United Kingdom, Mrs. Massey was widely known for her work on behalf of Canadian servicemen overseas and their families.

Mrs. Massey was born in Fredericton. She received her education in Canada, England and Switzerland, and married Mr. Massey in 1915 when he was on the staff of the University of Toronto.

During the Second World War, Mrs. Massey was chatelaine of the Canadian Officers' Club in London, and directed its services for six years. She also turned Garnons, the Massey Country home in England, into a convalescent home for Canadians.

During the war, Mrs. Massey wrote letters of sympathy to the families of many service men killed in action. She was also keenly interested in the Beaver Club and maintained an office in Canadian military headquarters in London.

TENDERS CALLED FOR NEW HIGHWAY

Tenders for the completion of the three-mile stretch of Highway No. 62 extending from the L'Amable project to the village of Bancroft have been called for by the Department of Highways, Elmer Sandercock, M.L.A. Hastings West, announced today.

Construction work on the highway near L'Amable is expected to be completed in the immediate future and department officials expect the entire works project from there to Bancroft will be finished this year.

MILK PRICES UP CENT A QUART IN WELLINGTON

Milk prices went up one cent per quart in the village of Wellington today, according to an announcement made by Mr. Alfred Ogilvy, proprietor of The Maples Dairy.

Villagers will pay 16 cents per quart for their milk as from today.

SPLENDID CONCERT GIVEN BY BAND

Another splendid performance by the Belleville Municipal Band greeted a large enthusiastic audience at the East End Playgrounds last night. Under the baton of Bandmaster Ted Robbins the band offered a variable program that included, the March, "El Capitan" by Sousa; Sketch, "Down South" by Middleton; "American Patrol", by Meacham; March, "American Service" arranged by Hinchey; Novelty, "Musical Switch" by Alford and the selection "Cole Porter's Songs".

The concert had to be curtailed owing to the absence of lighting which again gave evidence of the necessity of proper facilities with which the band can give its best, and the public enjoy the music under favorable conditions.

TRUCK STRIKES CAR AT REAR, EXTENSIVE DAMAGE

Damage amounting to $225 was done to a car and a truck Saturday at 4.40 p. m. in a collision on Dundas St. E. The trunk and left rear fender of a car driven by Mrs. Lydia Brant of Deseronto were damaged to the extent of $200 when a truck owned by J.A. Cooke, 142 Front St., came into collision with it.

Police said that both vehicles were in a line of traffic going east on Dundas St., and when the car stopped, the truck slid into the rear of it. Damage to the truck was limited to the left front fender and bumper, amounting to approximately $25.

Police Constable Chas. Lockwood investigated.

BICYCLE RIDER SLIGHTLY BRUISED

Eleven-year-old Charles Ryan escaped with scrapes on his elbows, one hand and one ankle last night, when his bicycle came into collision with a car driven by Emerson Patterson of Toronto.

Police said that both bicycle and car were proceeding west on East Moira St., and that when the car pulled out into the centre of the street to pass the boy on the wheel, Ryan in some manner ran into the side of the car. The accident happened at 6.30 p.m.

The injured lad was treated by Dr. W. B. Beattie, and the accident was investigated by Police Constable Foster.

PARTRIDGE BROODS NOT AS LARGE AS LAST SEASON

Conservation officers of the Department of Lands and Forests, Tweed branch report that partridge broods are scarce this year. The broods, the officers stated, do not average over three or four birds per flock. It is believed that cold weather last Spring interfered to some extent, with hatching.

District Bowling Champs Decided At Campbellford

Campbellford, Madoc and Kingston swept the lawn bowling championships of District No. 15 P.L.B.A. held in Campbellford last Friday. Belleville bowlers were runners-up in two of the events.

The junior doubles title was won by R. Moon and Jack Hatch, Jr., of Madoc who defeated the Trenton pair.

The Kingston duo of W. Duncan and John Donnelly, won the senior doubles from G. Watkin and Fred Harper of Belleville.

Campbellford defeated a Belleville foursome in the Men's rinks. The winning team was composed of J. P. Archer, A. D. Bennett, W. Brady and W. S. Wiggins.

Campbellford took its second district title, when E. Sloggett won the singles event.

The winners qualified for the zone finals which will be held in Kingston on August 9th. Districts 13, 14, 15 and 16 representing Toronto East, Peterborough, Belleville and Ottawa will be represented at the zone finals. The winners of the zone championships will qualify for the provincial tournament scheduled for Ottawa on August 21.

Bowlers from Belleville, Madoc, Kingston, Trenton, Stirling and Campbellford competed in the district championships on Friday.

Chutist Jumps Despite Badly Bruised Leg

A badly-burned leg, caused when he became entangled in his chute ropes during a jump held in Bancroft last Wednesday did not deter Charlie Murphy, demon parachute jumper of this city, from thrilling a new-record crowd at Crystal Beach near Madoc on Sunday with another spectacular leap from an aircraft.

Jumping from a height of 3,000 feet, Murphy used an ordinary umbrella last Wednesday until he reached the 300-foot mark when he opened the chute. The umbrella lasted approximately three seconds before it was ripped to shreds.

On Sunday, Murphy again used an umbrella but it was disintegrated by the slip-stream a second after he leaped. He jumped from 8,500 feet and opened his chute at 500, landing safely in the water.

Murphy stated today he will attempt to wrest the Canadian chute-jumping title at present held by the president of the Canadian Parachute Jumpers' Association. Arrangements are under way to arrange for an aircraft and Murphy will leap from a height of 20,000 feet. He will use smoke signals while the aircraft will carry a special sealed altitude meter.

BURDEN OF WAR

All Korean civilians have been ordered out of fighting zones southeast of Taejon in a move aimed at stopping infiltration behind American lines of communist soldiers and saboteurs in civilian dress. The order followed almost two weeks of harassment by snipers, saboteurs and spies who filtered through combat lines. Once an area is cleared of civilians, anyone found in civilian clothing may be shot. This South Korean, like many others, is carrying the household item he values most. — Central Press Canadian.

Two Arraigned On Shopbreaking Charge in Custody

Two Toronto men appeared in Belleville court today charged with shopbreaking in connection with the break-in of a safe at Belleville Livestock Sales some time last Saturday night. Amount of money taken is believed by police to be approximately $100.

The men, Clifford Blanchfield and W. G. Windsor, both 29, were remanded to August 2 when they appeared before Mrs. Kay Cooper, Justice of the Peace, this morning. They were picked up about 11 p.m. Sunday night by provincial police officers, near Napanee.

The safe, which was smashed to pieces by the robbers, was believed to have contained not more than $100. It was not carried away from the premises, and the car used by the robbers was spotted by passersby, who turned the license number over to the police.

The men were brought from Napanee last night by provincial constables John Hurrie and James Driscoll. Constable Hurrie left early this morning for Ottawa with fingerprints and footprint molds taken from the site, to speed identification.

Anglers Flock To Muscote Bay, Complaints Made

Oh! the power of a picture. Word from Muscote Bay this morning was that the fishermen flocked to the spot this weekend where two Hamilton men got 22 large mouth bass at the first of last week.

The lucky fishermen were evidently the forerunners of a cavalcade, Mayor Jack Allin said this morning. He heard about the crowd through some people who complained that the anglers were taking small illegal fish. The mayor, who has just come back from a holiday himself, said that one cottager in the fishing area told him that there must have been 50 boats fishing the grounds at one time over the weekend.

Mayor Allin said that he had received two complaints already this morning about the length of the fish that were taken by some anglers.

Huge New Terminal Opened For Liners' Use

Southampton, England July 31 — (AP) — Britain laid a lavish welcome mat at its biggest tourist door today with the official opening of a new £1,000,000 ($3,100,000) passenger terminal for ocean liners.

Prime Minister Attlee participated in the opening ceremonies.

The building is about a quarter-mile long and was built especially to handle traffic to and from Britain's huge queen liners, the Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mary.

Monument to Sir Mackenzie Bowell Will be Erected on Armouries Lawn

Work on the construction of the monument to Sir Mackenzie Bowell to be erected in this city by the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada, is well under way and the monument will be ready for erection during the late summer.

The monument will be erected on the Armouries lawn, for which approval has been given by the Department of National Defence.

W. C. Mikel, K.C., Local Master, has been primarily interested in the erection of a monument in the city to the late Sir Mackenzie Bowell, one time prime minister of Canada. Mr. Mikel approached the late Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King with respect to the erection of the monument and Mr. King readily approved of the proposal and gave instructions to the Historic Site and Monuments Board of Canada to proceed with the matter.

It is expected that the city council, the Board of Education; military organizations, service clubs and citizens generally will join in the unveiling of the monument which will take place not later than early in September.

Mounting Evidence Indicates Russian Advisers Aiding Koreans

With the U.S. Eighth Army in Korea, July 31 (AP)—There is mounting evidence that Russian officers are in the field giving tactical advice to the north Korean communists.

This has been suspected by military men since the war started. The conduct of the entire communist campaign has had the stamp of expert direction.

What evidence the army has of Russian military advisers comes from north Korean prisoners.

Capt. Walter C. Clarke of Fort Worth, Tex., is the chief of an American team that questions prisoners of war.

"There is no doubt in my mind that Russians are advising the north Koreans on their tactics against the American troops," Clarke said. "Prisoner after prisoner has told us of seeing Russians. Our information is that there are four or five Russians with each division—ranging in rank from captains to lieutenant-colonels."

Clarke named the north Korea 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th and 5th infantry divisions as the cream of the red army.

"They are the veterans who have had one or two years of combat experience in Manchuria" he said. "They are well trained and well equipped."

Clarke said prisoners had given this story of how the north Koreans recruit manpower from the south Koreans:

When a village is overrun the men of fighting age are called to a meeting where they are lectured on the glories of the communist cause. Then the communist military police give each man a gun. They are sent into combat groups where they either: fire or are shot by their officers.

Windsor Youth Given Further Remand on Count

Windsor, July 31—(CP)—David Carswell, 18, of Windsor, charged with procuring an illegal operation which resulted in the death of 16-year-old Margaret Jean Smith, was given a further remand of eight days when he appeared in court today.

Carswell, free on $5,000 bail, has not yet entered a plea on the charge.

The bound and weighted body of the girl, a high school friend of Carswell, was found in the Detroit River July 12. She had been missing from her home for a week.

Disgusted Cherry Grower Orders Trees Cut Down

Traverse City, Mich., July 31— (AP) — A Michigan cherry grower is plum disgusted.

Because he was offered only four cents a pound for his crop of Michigan sour cherries, Fred E. Reed of Sutton's Bay gave his pickers axes and ordered 'em to chop down the 250 trees in his orchard.

"I'll clear the ground and raise strawberries," Reed declared.

Last year's crop of Michigan sour cherries brought nine cents a pound. Packers are offering four cents for this year's early crop but promise the growers additional payment (possibly up to three cents a pound) later if the price of the processed pack warrants it.

"When I can't raise cherries and make a profit without depending on price supports I'll quit growing them," Reed declared.

The only trees Reeds plans to leave standing are a few for his personal use.

Foundation Makes $100,000 Grant

Toronto, July 31—(CP)— The Atkinson charitable foundation has made a $100,000 grant to help launch a two-year nursing course at Toronto Western Hospital, it was announced today.

The first 80 students start the course in September. They will work in a new building with classrooms and laboratories. After two years as student nurses, they will spend 12 month as interne nurses at about $100 a month.

The Atkinson Foundation, set up by the will of the late Joseph E. Atkinson, publisher of the Toronto Daily Star, will contribute $20,000 a year for five years. Training grants will be made also by the federal and Ontario health departments.

DUPED BY THIEF

For 25 cents, seven-year-old Joseph Murphy, of Corinth, near Woodstock, Ont., gave his father's 1949 model car to a friendly stranger and set off a province-wide kidnap scare. While waiting beside his father's car in Woodstock, for return of his mother and sister from a holiday in Kingston, a man approached the vehicle and jumped in saying he had permission from the boy's father to take the car. To be on the safe side, Joseph got in and drove away with the man. At the outskirts of Woodstock, the driver deposited his passenger, gave him 25 cents and told him to buy ice cream and candy, and that he would pick him up in 20 minutes. He never showed up, much to the distress of Mr. Murphy.—Central Press Canadian.

STEEPLEJACK DIES

Kingston, July 31 — (CP)—A steeplejack died in hospital here Saturday after falling 70 feet from a church roof Thursday. William Vacheresse, 26, of St. Catharines, was working on the roof of St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church at nearby Centreville with Robert Ingram of St. Catharines when both fell from the roof. Ingram still is in serious condition in hospital.

DENOUNCES L.P.P. ON KOREAN STAND

Leading member of the Labor Progressive party for 20 years, T. G. McManus, has renounced his affiliation with the party and his secretaryship of the Canadian Seamen's Union which he led through years of bitter strikes. Reason for quiting the party and union, he said, was their support of the communist role in Korea. —Central Press Canadian.

Obituary

MRS. SARAH JANE BAKER
(Belleville - Woodstock)

Mrs. Sarah Jane (Jean) Baker, widow of Dr. E. N. Baker, for many years Principal of Albert College in this city, died in Woodstock General Hospital Sunday following a number of months of ill health.

The late Mrs. Baker was born in Fingal, Ontario, and after her education in Ontario schools and Colleges she became principal of Alma College at St. Thomas. She came to Belleville in 1913 with her husband, and until she moved to Woodstock, Mrs. Baker entered into the activities of Bridge Street United Church and Albert College, and was associated with many societies and clubs in these institutions. She was particularly active in the Missionary Society of the church and served for a time as president. She was also actively engaged in the work of temperance and served as president of the W. C. T. U. She worked diligently in the schools in the cause of temperance and also throughout the district.

When her husband died, Dr. Howard, the incumbent principal of Albert College, organized a women's guild and the late Mrs. Baker became its first president. She was highly regarded in the community especially in the work of the Church.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. (Dr.) Outerbridge, who is in Japan, and four sons, Dr. Herbert W. Baker of Woodstock, Dr. Fred Baker of Detroit, Michigan, Harold Baker of Houston, Tex, and Charles Baker of Toronto.

Resting at the residence of her son, Dr. Herbert Baker, 139 Light Street, Woodstock, funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

NORMA DRUMMEY
(Shannonville)

Nora Drummey, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Drummey, R.R. 2, Shannonville, died at her home Tuesday, July 25, following a long illness.

She is survived by her five sisters, Mrs. P. Krell, Toronto, Ontario; Mrs. J. Whalen, Marysville; Irene, a nurse at the Hotel Dieu Hospital in Kingston, and Mary and Patricia at home.

She attended the church of the Holy Name of Mary, at Marysville.

The funeral took place July 27 to St. Mary's cemetery, following Mass at the church of the Holy Name of Mary, Marysville. Reverend Father I. S. Donoghue said Mass and recited the prayers at the graveside.

Pall bearers were Gerald Brennan, Raymond O'Sullivan, Justin McGurn and Edmund Walsh.

MRS. FRANCES J. COURTNEY

One of Rawdon's most esteemed residents, Mrs. Frances Jane Courtney, beloved wife of William A. Courtney passed away at her residence on the eighth concession of Rawdon Township on Sunday evening, July 30th. The late Mrs. Courtney was in her 75th. year.

Daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Tanner. Mrs. Courtney was born in Rawdon Township and resided there all her life. She had been in failing health for a number of years and a few days ago fell seriously ill.

Surviving are her husband, one son, John, at home, one sister, Mrs. Charles Jeffrey, Tweed, and one brother William J. Tanner, Rawdon Township.

The late Mrs. Courtney was a member of St. Thomas Anglican Church, Rawdon and when health permitted was active in many of its organizations.

The funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.

WALTER LEE HOULDEN
(Sidney)

Walter Lee Houlden, of the fifth concession of Sidney, died at his late residence, Wednesday, July 26, following an illness of one year's duration.

Born on the fifth concession of Sidney the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Mark Houlden, he spent his whole life in Sidney.

He is survived by his wife, the former Pearl May Sharpe, two daughters, Mrs. Reta Chard, Frankford, and Mrs. Jean Wentzell, Toronto; and one son, Mark at home.

Also surviving him are his brother Max Houlden, and a sister, Mrs. Claude Sharpe, Meaford.

Mr. Houlden was a member of the United Church.

The funeral took place from the home on July 28th., to Stockdale cemetery. Reverend Roy McEachern of Frankford was the officiating clergyman.

Pall bearers were Charles Bennett, Smith Osterhout, Joe Carr, Francis Murphy, Clayton Appleby, and Fred Ashby.

DANIEL McCRIMMON
(Madoc)

Madoc—A resident of Madoc for the past three years, Daniel McCrimmon died at his home on Sunday after an illness of two years' duration. He was born in Belleville 81 years ago and during his early life he followed the the occupation of mining, in the Cobalt district, later coming to Malone, where he engaged in farming. He retired some years ago and moved to Madoc to live in retirement.

He was a member of St. Peter's Presbyterian Church and held in high regard in the community. Surviving are his wife, the former Eliza Richardson and one son George McCrimmon at home.

Resting at the Duffin Funeral Home, Madoc, the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. ALICE MAUDE (WILLIAMS) BELL
(Toronto)

Mrs. Alice Maude Bell, an aged and highly respected resident of Picton and Belleville for many years died at her home, 31 Walmer Road, Toronto, on Saturday after an illness that had extended for some years. She was born in Picton, 89 years ago, being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Parsons and practically all her life was spent in the vicinity of Picton and Belleville. She married twice, her first husband being the late George Williams and her second the late William B. Bell.

While a resident of Belleville, she was a member of Christ Church and when health permitted was active in all work of the parish.

Surviving are seven grandchildren and 14 great grandchildren.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street; the funeral announcement will be found elsewhere in this edition.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 31 (CP)— Leading industrials brightened slowly in the dullest session in recent months on the Toronto stock exchange today. Key issues chalked up small fractional advances to continue last week's moderate gains. Volume for the first three hours was 399,000 shares.

Papers and utilities paced the mild upturn in industrials. Several liquors and textiles also brightened while refining oils tended lower. Abitibi Paper attracted attention following release of a semi-annual report showing increased warnings.

Base metals were dull and slightly weaker. Waite Amulet was a bright spot for a gain of 45 cents at $9.50.

Golds slipped from early firmness. Junior producers showed losses ranging up to about 10 cents and seniors were steady.

Western oils barely moved. Piccadilly, a penny issue, was comparatively active for a slight change.

Warship Harasses Salvage Men

Penzance, Cornwall, England, July 31 (Reuters)—The "never-say-die" hulk of the worn-out battleship Warspite foiled harassed navy salvage men again.

For three years the 30,000-ton veteran of the Royal Navy has rested on the jagged rocks of the Cornish Coast, defying all attempts to get her floated and away to the scrap yards. The Navy released her for scrapping after the Second World War ended.

To day engineers made a new effort to get the hulk off its perch. They had worked day and night pumping air into the hull to give it a false bottom of pressurized air and patching up the damage parts.

Three tugs strained and whistled as the Warspite slipped free on the high tide. Thousands of people waved from the clifftops.

But the voyage was short-lived. The stubborn old ship developed a leak in a boiler room and had to be beached about four miles away.

Ever-optimistic engineers said they anticipated little difficulty in refloating her next time.

94 MEN ENLISTED

Ottawa, July 31—(CP)— The army, in its first report on the new recruiting drive, said today 94 men were enlisted from July 20 to 29 out of a total of 1,590 applicants.

A spokesman added, however, that "many others" were accepted in that period but had not been formally sworn in by July 29. The drive was launched July 20.

The army is after 3,000 to 4,000 men. It has lowered its admission standards slightly in an effort to get them.

Champion Steer Chalks Up Many Records Before Being Slaughtered for Prime Steaks

Chicago, July 31 (AP)—The champion is dead.

Before he went, though he chalked up some records which will take some beating.

It was up from a ranch in Pecos county, Tex., that he started his big surge to fame. His name was "Judge Roy Bean."

He became grand champion steer of the 1949 International Live Stock Exposition. And then he became the costliest beefsteaks and roasts in history—about $30 for a pound of roundsteak, for instance, or $25 for a pound of chuck.

On the way up, the white-faced Hereford has bested rivals in several lesser meets.

Then, from the show ring in which he gained the highest title possible, he did as many another champion has done. He went on a personal appearance tour.

He covered 30 states in seven months, flying some 8,000 miles in a special plane. He was seen by an estimated 4,000,000 persons.

When the tour ended back in Chicago where he earned his peak success, he was slaughtered to become beef dinners for an automobile concern.

Dearborn Motors Corporation, Detroit, paid a record $11.50 a pound for him—all 1,240 pounds. Total outlay for the animal was $14,260.

This was quite a penny for 20 months of life. The Judge had been calved on a 47,000-acre ranch in Pecos county, Tex., Feb. 10, 1948. He was sired by a registered Hereford range bull, mothered by a registered Hereford cow.

He was named after Roy Bean, a justice of the peace who was "the law" west of the Pecos river a century ago.

Early in his career the Hereford was sold to two Odessa bankers at $1.50 a pound, but instead of being slaughtered, he was resold to two unnamed "public-spirited ranchers" who in turn sold him to a county farm club as a likely entry for the international.

The club consisted of 43 boys and seven girls. They placed their prize animal on a feed farm and gave up taking a long-planned trip to Yellowstone National Park and instead stayed to feed their entry for the big show and payoff.

New Business For Canada Says Industrial Expert

Ottawa, July 31 — (CP) — The huge $5,000,000,000 United States air force aircraft production order is going to mean new business for Canada, a government industrial expert said today.

The American air force gave 200 U.S. manufacturers the go-ahead signal on the production of new aircraft and parts Saturday.

Extent of orders for parts which may be placed in Canada will not be known until the American aircraft industry has found out how much U.S. industry can handle, the expert said.

But it appeared a certainty, he said, that Canadian plants will eventually be asked to gear their production for the output of American planes and parts, in addition to production to meet the requirements of the R.C.A.F.

Second Child May be Born Around Aug. 12

London, July 31 — (AP) — Court circles speculated today that Princess Elizabeth's second child may be born about the end of next week — probably around Aug. 12.

The King and Queen, who usually go to Balmoral in Scotland for a summer vacation about Aug. 9, are not expected to leave London before Aug. 15.

Princess Elizabeth is at her London home, Clarence House, with the Duke of Edinburgh, now on a month's leave. He returned last week from Malta where he has been serving as a lieutenant aboard the Royal Navy destroyer Chequers.

IN EXPLORER'S FOOTSTEPS

Victor Franco, 20-year-old French student, has set out from Quebec City to follow the path of Pierre de la Verendrye, 18th-century explorer. Franco pedalled to Montreal with an itinerary that included visits to Ottawa, North Bay, Sudbury, Saulte Ste. Marie, Duluth, Minn., and Winnipeg. He planned the trip after joining a France-Canada youth organization at home. — (CP Photo.)

Admiral Joy also announced today the arrival of naval units of three other countries — France, The Netherlands, and New Zealand.

France sent the frigate La Grandiere; The Netherlands the destroyer Evertsen; and New Zealand the frigates Tutira and Pukaki.

Prime Minister St. Laurent announced June 30 that the three Canadian destroyers would be made available to the United Nations' command in Korea. They sailed from Esquimalt, B.C., July 5 for Pearl Harbor, arriving at the U.S. Hawaiian base July 12. Two days later they left to join units of the U.S. Navy, Royal Navy and Australian Navy operating off Korea.

The three ships carry 50 officers and 750 ratings. The Cayuga is commanded by Capt. J. V. Brock; The Sioux by Cmdr. O. D. Taylor; and the Athabaskan by Cmdr. T. R. P. Willand.

Two more North Stars will be added to the air lift run, and another two will commute between McChord Field and Montreal, the unit's home base, to carry supplies for the squadron.

The naval and air units are the Dominion's initial contribution to the United Nation's call for aid in the Korean struggle.

AMERICANS

Great Outnumbered

The newly-arrived U.S. units piled into trucks, after their unopposed landing, for the ride to the fighting lines.

They walked ashore at a moment when the outnumbered 8th army and South Korean divisions were fighting for their lives. They were trying to turn back a giant red flanking movement in the south powered by at least two divisions and headed straight for Pusan.

The allied defenders were outnumbered everywhere. The threat against them on the south coast appeared more serious now than the big red smash at the centre of the line.

Gen. MacArthur's headquarters has estimated the North Korean fighting strength at 200,000 men. The United Nations force, even with the reinforcements, is far below that number.

FOUR BILLION

Another of the conferees, chairman Millard Tydings (Dem. Md.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said yesterday that crucial as the Korean fighting is, the important thing is to keep the nations of western Europe strong.

Assistance For Europe

"I strongly believe," he said, "we should keep after them to constantly increase their defences in western Europe and that we should give them arms wherever it is desirable."

Despite this show of unanimity in the Senate, there were signs that house members were not entirely satisfied with the conduct of at least one European member of the North Atlantic Alliance.

BRITISH OFFICERS HELD

London, July 31 — (Reuters) — Polish police are holding three British Merchant Navy officers on suspicion of assisting a Polish woman to leave the country illegally, the Foreign Office said today. Poland has informed Britain of the arrests.

SOCKEYE SEASON

Another good omen for the men who yearly dot the Fraser with chugging seiners and gillnetters was the record salmon run in up-coast inlets.

Record Catches Reported

Record and near-record catches also were reported in the Skeena and Naas areas, some 400 miles to the north, three weeks before the south run was due.

Since 1946 the Fraser River run has dropped in volume and then picked up. Last year the catch was 69,991 cases, valued at about $2,000,000 to the packers.

The fleet will probably increase to 5,000 boats—biggest concentration of fishing boats anywhere in the world—as the season progresses. Fisherman with luck will clean up between $2,000 and $3,000 in the next six weeks.

For the first time since the war, Japanese fishermen will be gillnetting on the Fraser. There will be about 350 of them, compared with around 2,000 before the war.

Supply companies estimate about $3,000,000 is invested in gear, gas and supplies during the short season, not counting cost of boats.

Fishery scientists estimate that some 10,000,000 sockeye will enter the Fraser on their way to streams in the interior.

PREPARED

The grim-faced opposition party president called on the harassed monarch for the first time today in his guarded palace in suburban Laeken. Before going he reminded reporters that previously he had said he would visit Leopold only in connection with his abdication.

A spokesman said Premier Jean Duvieusart later today would announce either what solution had been reached or the state of the negotiations with the king and the country's political parties.

The spokesman indicated that by "solution" he meant either abdication or the delegation of the king's powers to his son and heir, 19-year-old Prince Baudouin.

The spokesman added:

"We seem to be approaching an easing of the situation, probably today."

Duvieusart and three cabinet ministers interrupted a cabinet meeting to visit Leopold before dawn today and reportedly asked him to make a definite decision on the abdication demand.

Most of the cabinet is understood to favor Leopold's abdication. But some ministers are reported to feel the king should make the decision himself.

Tension Reaches Peak

Tension which has been rising since Leopold's return from exile nine days ago reached a peak last night with the killing of three anti-Leopoldists by police who fired on demonstrators at historic Liege.

Following the violence Socialist leaders warned civil war would break out unless the King abdicated.

Leopold's return from exile in Switzerland touched off a widespread wave of sabotage and strikes. Opponents of the Monarch planned a mass motorized march on Brussels from the southern strike-bound Walloon section of the country tomorrow.

In Liege, where the anti Leopold tide has surged strongest, demonstrators ripped down the national tri-color and hoisted the yellow flag and red rooster of Wallonia.

Yesterday's shooting occurred in the Grace Berlour suburb of Liege.

One version said the shooting occurred while socialist parliamentary deputy Simon Pague was addressing a group of striking metal workers from the balcony of a house overlooking the open square. Pague broke off the meeting when a dozen gendarmes arrived in a truck, but they arrested him on the sidewalk and tried to push him into their truck.

Arthur Sanson, mayor of Grace Berleur, tried to intervene, the account continued, but also was arrested.

The government version of the shooting issued in Brussels said Pague was addressing some 500 to 600 persons, although during the current crisis gatherings of more than five persons are illegal.

"Eleven armed gendarmes intervened to end the meeting," the account said, "a listener threw a brick at a squad leader and seized his machine gun from him."

The government statement said the crowd rushed police after the squad leader had shot one man and that two others were killed by police fire.

A socialist party executive charged that the gendarmes fired upon the demonstrators when they already were in flight and that all three of those killed were shot in the back.

SAGA OF HEROISM RECALLED

There will be unveiled at Chatham, England, in August a bronze tablet to the crew of the 190 officers and men who lost their lives when the merchant cruiser Jervis Bay was sunk in the North Atlantic by a German pocket battleship, the "Admiral Scheer," while the British vessel was defending a 38-ship convoy on its way from Canada to Britain in 1940.

Those who were old enough at that time recall the story of the courage of the officers and crew engaged in their most important task in shepherding the convoy. The captain of the Jervis Bay ordered the ships to scatter and headed straight for the German raider, sending out smoke to cover the withdrawal of the ships in the convoy.

The captain engaged the German battleship in a fight to the death and enabled the merchant ships to escape with their vital cargoes under cover of the smoke screen into the gathering darkness.

The Jervis Bay had been badly hit and was on fire but still the gallant cruiser and her crew continued to keep the raider fully occupied until her last gun was silenced. The Jervis Bay then went down with her colors flying.

Those who in that engagement died saved the convoy which was so vital to the people of Great Britain. They did their full part to bring the ultimate victory over the sea raiders and to make their contribution to the victory which finally came with the triumph over Germany.

In the trying days of 1940 when the close of the struggle was five years away the sacrifices that this ship and her men made brought untold results. The action will remain one of the most important events in British sea history. It inspired the hearts of the peoples of the Allied powers. It was in reality a symbol of the sacrifices that Britons were to make for mankind. It was a triumph of human courage and sacrifice.

ROMANCE IN PRESENT AGE

Boys who have read stories of the explorers venturing into the seas and lands in every part of the globe and especially those tales or reports dealing with exploration into the polar areas cannot but feel proud that a 17-year-old Briton was the first boy ever to fly over the North Pole. Flight-Sergeant Arthur Cox was one of the crew of a plane which recently made a test of the special system of grid navigation for Arctic flying.

Boys of today in a very real sense have opportunities which appear so much greater than those who were boys a generation ago or more were given. Modern knowledge of navigation, the arrival of the airplane and many inventions which have been associated with the development especially of the airplane have brought to many men and to some very young men and in this case to a boy just budding into manhood the opportunity to go on exploration, the like of which has never been seen before in all the ages of history.

Youth must feel the inspiration which comes in this new age of wonders. Before boyhood and young manhood spreads a vast field of opportunity, which appears to have no bound.

If modern lads have an unusual opportunity they are ready to grip the opportunity which offers itself to them when science opens a vista the like of which few could have dreamed of a mere decade ago.

Probably there never was a more interesting age to the boyhood and youth of the world than this period of history with its vast opportunities for discovery in the sciences which are getting close to the heart of nature and are bringing forth discovery after discovery. Inventions are rapidly transforming many of the phases of living.

Boys in every age like to achieve and the twentieth century has offered them many opportunities which if followed make theirs very successful lives.

Boys in every age like romance, they like to achieve and in every age there are those destined to render service of the richest importance to the future of the race. Wonders are yet to be unfolded in the spirit of adventure.

GUIDED BY NOTES OF MUSIC

A ship which will automatically obey orders sent to it by music was demonstrated off the south coast of Britain recently. The vessel is a motor launch 68 feet long which will be used by the R.A.F. as a target at sea. It is the first radio-controlled boat of this kind ewer produced. It is guided by musical notes of varying pitch sent to it from a control ship.

Each portion of the launch's mechanism responds to one particular note which it picks up and obeys — eight different orders can be given in this way.

To feel for others and little for ourselves; to restrain our selfish and exercise our benevolent affections, constitutes the perfection of human nature. — Adam Smith.

JUST FOLKS

THE BETTER SIDE

That there are evil men about
The crimes reported leave no doubt.
But all the sin and lust is less
Than love and faith and graciousness
And everything that's fine and good
That mark the humblest neighborhood.

More people to the churches go
Than those who seek the places low;
More people strive to do what's right,
To keep their homes aglow with light,
Stay clean of hand and pure of heart
Than those who think that sin is smart.

The many who the high road choose
Are not a source of startling news.
'Tis not the many, but the few
Who shame mankind by what they do.
Despite what cynics write or say
But few are they who go astray.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

July 31st., 1930.

Mr. Clarke Kinnear of the staff of the Dominion Bank, here, has left on a motor car trip through New Ontario.

Mr. Fred D. Diamond went to Montreal today on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Robinson of Ottawa, formerly of Belleville, are visiting friends in the city.

Miss Dora Osborne has left to visit her brother, Mr. E. C. Osborne, in Winnipeg.

Mrs. Jack McIntosh and Mrs. Russell Smith were the tea hostesses at the Belleville Golf club this afternoon.

Mr. Norman McLeod of Detroit, Mich., is a visitor in town.

Miss Maud O'Hara of Detroit, Mich., is here to attend the Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion.

Miss Helen Williams of Toronto is a visitor in town.

Miss Jean Holland, Charles Street, is visiting friends in Walkerville.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bateman, Mrs. R. Bateman and Mr. E. Bateman, have returned home after a motor car trip through New York State.

30 YEARS AGO

July 31st., 1920.

Mr. and Mrs. George Reid are now occupying their new house on Queen Street. Two months from the day ground was broken for the foundation the family occupied the completed house. Mr. Reid, having had considerable experience in building, superintended the construction himself and he certainly got results. It is probably the record for quick construction work in these parts.

Belleville women in the local branch of the Navy League of Canada have the proud distinction of having furnished more "comforts" for the sailors during the war than any place between Toronto and Halifax in proportion to population.

Mr. Walter H. Reeves of London, England, is spending a few days in the city.

40 YEARS AGO

Mr. Harry Davis editor of the Daily Ontario, is spending his vacation at his home in Palmerston, Ontario.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

A gold rush is generally a complete fraud for almost everybody who joins in it. The Klondyke gold rush in 1898-9 was no exception. It is credibly estimated that there were 50,000 men camped in the Yukon by 1900, and Dawson City was said to have had a floating population of 25,000 more.

Now, the figures are on record for the number of ounces of gold brought out of the Klondyke. In 1898-9, $26,000,000 was taken. And in 1900 $22,000,000. For the three years of terrific struggle and venturing amid sub-arctic rigors, those 50,000 men, not counting Dawson City's population at all, divided $48 million among them. That comes to a measly $960 each. For three years.

It would be safe to say that half of them took that much with them into the Klondyke in equipment and food. Companies and syndicate spent huge sums on hydraulic machinery, engines, boats and housing. Mining engineers were paid magnificent salaries to go up there to work. The money for all these things did not come from the Klondyke. It came from outside.

A few fortunes may have been made. But if so, they cut down that $960 average for all the poor dopes who fought like heroes and maniacs over the mountains to get into the gold fields.

Millions have been made out of the Klondyke, but not by the people who went there. Novelists, story writers, publishers, motion picture producers have found the Klondyke a far richer gold mine than the miners ever did. Add together all the money made in telling about the gold rush, and it would vastly exceed the value of the gold dust found.

But if there is another gold rush tomorrow, we can count upon the usual stampede. It may be gold that men imagine they want. What they really want is action. At any rate, that's about all they get.

Baptists Hold Corner Meeting As Scheduled

La Sarre, Que., July 31 (CP) —The Baptists Evangelists held their meeting as they said they would but the tiny street-corner service Saturday was drowned out by a crowd of some 300 persons, shouting and blowing car horns.

The meeting was held by five Evangelists who were arrested last Saturday and charged with disturbing the peace after a meeting was broken up by a shoving, shouting crowd.

There was no violence. The town constable and a Quebec Provincial Police officer stood by during the half-hour meeting. Later, police escorted the group of 13 away from this northwestern Quebec mining town.

Charges against the five were dropped on instructions from the town council Friday night after the arrest was protested by Baptist officials and the association for civil liberties.

It was the fourth consecutive Saturday that disturbances had marked the attempts of the tiny Baptist group to hold open-air services in this predominantly Roman-Catholic community.

After the brief service, L. G. Barnhart, pastor of the Baptist Church here, said the meetings will continue.

A loud-speaker van, playing "Home on the Range" and "Ave Maria" drowned out the hymns of the group.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By Billy Rose

MANHATTAN JAM SESSION

This story begins as so many show business stories do, with Jules Glaenzer, the New York jewelry merchant, who has a big crush on theatre people and who, for the past quarter of a century, has been the most lavish party-pitcher on that pie-eyed pike called Broadway. There's a pair of grand pianos in his one-flight-up apartment on Lexington Ave., and many's the wee morning that their ivories have felt the nervous fingers of the Gershwins and Cole Porters as they sat up at Glaenzer's opening night shindigs, waiting for the reviews of their new musicals.

A couple of years ago, Richard Rodgers, the composer who plays Sullivan to Oscar Hamerstein's Gilbert, got a phone call from Jules.

"Judy Garland is in town for the opening of her new picture" said the diamond nabob, "and she's dining with me tonight. She's a big fan of yours and I know she's be delighted if you could join us."

Well, it took no great urging to get Dick over to Lexington Avenue, and after dinner he and Judy adjourned to one of the pianos. Garland, larynx and memory a-twitch, began to sing some of his old songs, and it turned out she knew not only the Hit Paraders he had written with Hammerstein but virtually every one of the tricky ditties he had collaborated on with the talented Larry Hart—"Manhattan," "Blue Room," "You Took Advantage of Me," etc.

Shortly after this nostalgic jam session started, the doorbell rang and when Glaenzer went downstairs he found two couples on his stoop — pleasant-mannered kids who looked as if they had just sneaked off the Ohio State campus.

"We heard the piano going and somebody singing," said one of the youngsters with an embarrassed grin. "I know this is awfully fresh, but if you're having a party—well, could we invite ourselves in?"

"It really isn't a party," said Glaenzer, always the perfect host "but you're welcome to come up and listen."

The kids followed him up the stairs and seated themselves quietly while Dick and Judy, hardly noticing, went right on with their game of "Do you remember this one?" And it wasn't until a few minutes later, as Judy went into "My Heart Stood Still," that one of the girls recognized her and went splotchy around the gills.

"Gee!" she whispered. "That's—why, that's Judy Garland!"

"Quite right," Glaenzer whispered back, "and the clap at the piano is Richard Rodgers who wrote the songs you've been listening to."

Then, figuring the teen-agers needed it, he went out and mixed them a pitcher of martinis.

For the next hour the kids sat and listened, stiff and waxy-eyed as the exhibits at Madame Tussaud's. And twenty tunes later, when they finally stood up to go, they were still as pale as a ghost who has just seen a ghost.

"Anything else you'd like to hear?" asked Rodgers.

"Name it and I'll sing it," said Judy.

"Thanks, but we've butted in long enough," said one of the girls.

"I guess," said Glaenzer as he showed the quartet to the door," "you'll have something to tell your friends about."

"We'll tell 'em all right," said one of the boys, "but who the heck is going to believe us?"

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

ON THE ROAD TO VICTORY

Jonathan Edwards, the greatest theologian that the Church in America has produced, was finally driven from his pulpit in Northampton, Massachusetts, and compelled to accept a little church in the Indian village of Stockbridge. It must have seemed both to Edwards and to his friends that a brilliant and promising career had definitely come to an end. But it was while he was doing his humble work in an Indian village that Edwards wrote some of his greatest books on theology and philosophy.

He would never have had time to write such works had he been tied down to the compelling duties of a large church. The apparent misfortune, which at the time almost broke his heart and discouraged his supporters throughout the nation, proved to be one of the greatest blessings in the life of this great man and in the spiritual life of the country.

So let us not get too discouraged when we find ourselves defeated in some endeavor or turned back from achieving some great goal. If we have done our best, we can be sure that God is using a circumstance to some better triumph than we ever dared to hope for in our happiest hours

What appears to be defeat for us is often God's preliminary step in bringing us to triumph.

500 Bottles Of Good Wine Found in Castle

Clayton, N.Y., July 31—(AP)—Buyers of Calumet Castle, once a millionaire's summer mansion on one of the St. Lawrence River's Thousand Islands near here, received an unexpected dividend.

Workmen fixing wiring in the basement of the stone building discovered several hundred cases of imported wines dated from 1895 to 1900. The wine was hidden in a cave of solid rock.

Calumet Castle was built at a reported cost of $250,000 by Charles Goodwin Emery, who made a fortune in the tobacco business.

This spring a local business group bought the structure and the small island it occupies and opened it to the public.

A spokesman for the Calumet Castle corporation said 500 bottles of good wine had been uncovered thus far, with another 1,000 unfit for use. He estimated another 1,500 bottles remained in the cave.

He said he and friends sampled a bottle and declared:

"It's the kind that will make you talk."

BULGARIA PROTESTS

London, July 31—(Reuters) — Bulgaria has protested to Yugoslavia against alleged visits to prohibited zones by the Yugoslav military attache and other embassy officials in Sofia. A Bulgarian News Agency message received in London last night said a note handed to the Yugoslav Embassy warned that "the Bulgarian government will be forced to take most energetic measures" if the Yugoslav officials committed any similar "infringements."

Korean Upheaval In Way Blessing In Disguise

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

One recoils from examining war as a possible agent of good.

Still, the trend of events does suggest that the Korean upheaval may in some ways prove to have been a blessing in disguise. For the very crudeness of this assault is drawing right-minded countries together in the interests of peace and justice.

The outstanding demonstration of this trend, of course, has been the action of the United Nations in applying military sanctions against the invaders of Southern Korea. That was unprecedented move—one which was evaded by the League of Nations, with fatal consequences to that organization.

This strong-arm move by the U.N. probably has done more to strengthen the U.N. than any other event. It means that the non-communist members of the peace organization have been drawn closer together. Take a specific case for illustration:

Turkey has offered 4,500 fully armed troops for the Korean fighting whenever the U.N. asks for them. Now that was a mighty courageous decision for the government to make—a historic gesture.

Why? Well, Turkey sits right under the big guns of Russia. The two countries have bitter differences over control of the Dardanelles waterway. And the sending of Turkish troops to Korea to fight Moscow's North Korean protege might easily draw from Moscow the charge that it was an action unfriendly to the Soviet Union.

So Turkey, the lone wolf, is drawn closer to the western world by the Korean imbroglio.

Then take the case of the Atlantic Pact partners. These 12 countries, spurred by the danger displayed through the attack on Korea, are working feverishly to construct a unified army out of the individual armed forces of the western European states. They are putting the finishing touches on a far closer collaboration than they had envisaged at the outset of their venture. And that collaboration not only is military but includes other fields.

Thus it would seem that good can result from the Korean war. It may have the effect in the long run of drawing up closer to the ideal of world unity.

LEFT-HANDDEDNESS AND STUTTERING

Our son was four years old and naturally left-handed, and our friends and relatives kept urging us to make him use his right hand. We began to do so, and soon he was stuttering badly. Then we read in your column that forced use of the right hand in preference to the left in naturally left-handed children might cause stuttering. From that moment onward our son used which ever hand he wanted, and his stuttering stopped in a little while. (D. L. M.)

Just what I said about the effect of forced right-handedness upon the left-handed child would take a tedious search of the files to determine, but anyway the history in a great many instances is that the child begins to stutter soon after parents or teachers begin to "break" the child of the habit of using the left hand for such skilled or fine movements as writing, drawing pictures, painting etc.

From long study and observation I believe that forced transfer of handedness in childhood, whether it gives rise to a speech impediment or not, tends to impair nervous stability.

The brain centre for the control of speech is close to the centre for the control of finger and hand movements in writing, painting and other fine skills.

Some of the greatest artists have been ambidextrous, able to use either hand for drawing, painting, sculpturing. A pianist necessarily must be more or less ambidextrous.

The speech control centre is in the left third frontal convolution of the brain. In applexy (cerebral hemorrhage) the blood vessel rupture and bleeding into the brain substance most frequently occurs in this area. The resulting paralysis involves the right side of the body, one or both extremities, depending on the extent of the hemorrhage. In cases where the capacity to write is impaired, along with the capacity to express thoughts in words, it is a boon to one so paralyzed or partially paralyzed if he or she has had ambidextrous training. Aside from the question of handedness it is recognized that paralysis, paresis or impaired use of muscles on one side responds better to a course of treatment which includes regular supervised exercise of the corresponding muscles on the unaffected side of the body.

Dr. Isaac W. Garlin of the Speech Clinic of Jewish Hospital, Brooklyn, expressed what is probably the consensus of most authorities:

"...the relationship between handedness and stuttering. There would appear to be no reason to believe that there is any. However, every child with a speech disorder should be encouraged to develop his dominant hand, be it left or right ..."

While the authorities are trying to make up their minds about this, why not give the left-handed child a break? After all, one out of every twenty-five individuals is naturally left-handed.

The correction of stuttering by breathing and voice exercises the stutterer may follow in privacy is the subject of the pamphlet on Stuttering, available on written request (no clipping, please) if you inclose stamped self addressed envelope.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Sensible Young Woman

I am 17 During menstrual periods I go swimming, dancing, cycling, play tennis, in short I live as I do at any other time. Many friends think I am asking for trouble. I have never had pain, cramp or other discomfort such as they complain they have. (M. J. A.)

Answer—You are right and they are deplorably misinformed about physiology and hygiene. Pamphlet available to any reader who asks for it in writing (I do not reply to clippings) and provides stamped self-addressed envelope: Hygiene for Girls and Health for Women .

Yoghurt

Make two quarts of yoghurt every day. Very fond of it. Please tell me about its health value. (H. S.)

Answer—Wholesome food if you like it. Same health value as sour milk, buttermilk, skim milk. No magic effects.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE DAY IS FOR WONDER

The day is all vitality. Movement, insects, animals, birds, man—all astir, in tasks of life, hurrying, seeking for food and recreation, change, the extracting of a little joy, and the fulfillment of duties in the hope for security and happiness as age creeps on.

The day is for the ripening of grains, the cultivating of products from vast lands. It is for strengthening the body, and clearing of the mind in healthful outdoor observation. The day is for wonder over so many manifestations of the Supreme Will over all—even the tiniest of creatures. A purpose behind all.

The day is for the Sun to get in its life-giving work, for the clouds to form, and for the winds to cool the atmosphere. It is for the show of shadows, color, and the proud display of all beauty. It is the song-time for birds. The day is for translation of Nature's language into poetry and living prose.

There is so much to every day—its opening after our hours of restful slumber its promise and its hope. Look to the day with an armor of faith. Enter it with gaiety of mood and inward purpose. Let yesterday rest forever in its little groove. You have your day. Keep it full to the brim with the wonder of existence!

Darken not your day with fears and regrets. Note the best and the wholesome about you and make a picture of it within your heart. Radiate each blessed emotion, and cream it so that each shall be attractive, giving zest and joy to every human contact. Keep giving yourself away! Only thus can the day be full of wonder, and the night approach with velvet draperies to bless your soul.

Oh, there is so much of beauty, grandeur, and hope hidden for discovery in every day of our lives. All we have to do is to keep in high heart, to keep our eyes set upon every opportunity to serve and be useful. Living is earning, and what you earn and give away is the sum total of your success.

Seven Toronto Yachts Make Night Stop-Over on Trip to Lake Simcoe

Trenton — (Special) — Seven yachts of the Toronto Power Squadron left Trenton this morning on the second leg of their 350-mile cruise from Toronto to Lake Simcoe via the Trent Canal system.

When the squadron left Toronto Saturday morning, there were 15 boats in the fleet but the rough weather Saturday night separated eight of the yachts and the seven which left Trenton this morning pulled into Port Hope Saturday night, to wait for the weather to clear.

"We are just out for good seamanship and to teach the practice of good common sense on the water," said Ken Halladay, skipper of the Betty Jane who is in charge of the cruise. The squadron is proud of its record of never having had "an accident of any description on any squadron boat."

The annual two-week cruise is a family affair as most of the skippers are accompanied by their wives and families. Last year, the squadron spent their two weeks' water vacation cruising on the south shore of Lake Ontario and the year before that, they went through the 1000 Islands.

A civic reception is planned at Peterborough and the squadron will be presented with a key to the city. Peterborough is apparently going all out to make the squadron welcome, as cruise members with infants aboard have been promised a baby sitting service.

Several of the eight craft who were separated during the rough going Saturday night continued up the canal yesterday and the seven who tied up at the Trenton docks Sunday night, started off about 9.30 this morning.

The Canadian Power Squadron's emblem is a red maple leaf on a background of five blue and four white vertical stripes. The fleet will contine up the Trent system to Lake Simcoe and return to Toronto via Trenton and Lake Ontario.

Trenton Pitcher Throws No-Hit No-Run Game

Trenton (Special)—Harry Farr held Frankford hitless Friday night, as the Trenton Chevrolets defeated the Merchants 8 to 0 in Frankford. The win, virtually clinched first place in the Trent Valley League for Trenton, as the Chevrolets are now two full games in front of the second-place Frankford team.

In turning in his no hit, no-run effort, Farr struck out 14 and walked eight, and was particularly effective with men on base. Ernie Curtis paced Trenton's seven hit performance with a pair of singles.

STOWED AWAY

U.S. Marine Pte. Edwin Hassel, 18, of Chicago, didn't like the idea of being stationed in Honolulu while the fighting is going on in Korea so he stowed away on a Korea-bound navy transport at Honolulu. Just before the ship was set to sail, Admiral W. Arthur W. Radford, commander-in-chief of U.S. naval forces in the Pacific, inspected the ship and the would-be stowaway was flushed out. Explaining he wanted to get into action, Hassel was transferred to a unit slated for Korean duty. — Central Press Canadian.

Tree Fruit Will Be Less Plentiful

Toronto, July 31 — (CP) — Apples, pears, plums and peaches will be less plentiful this year in Ontario.

Farmers say the decline in tree fruits can be traced to an unseasonably cold spring. The bees didn't feel like working and did not spread the pollen — the fine, powdery fertilizer which makes the fruit grow.

The Ontario Agriculture Department estimates the following declines in 1950 crops as compared with 1949: apples, 23 per cent; pears, 31 per cent; plums, 32 per cent; peaches, 10 per cent.

One bright prospect, however: what fruit there is should be excellent.

For some reason, the bees treated cherries, strawberries, raspberries and grapes more kindly. Cherries show a slight decline over 1949, but strawberries, at an estimated 6,857,617 quarts, are up about 3,000,000 qts. on last year. Raspberries are expected to yield 11 per cent more fruit and grapes, 30 per cent.

Quality and condition of more vegetables is good. Tomatoes are ripening and an excellent crop is expected.

Course Rough But Regatta Program Carded

Marmora — A crowd estimated at one thousand attended the Regatta at Glen Allan Park, Crowe Lake, on Saturday afternoon. Due to high waves, only two instead of three laps of the course were run in the speed boat races while only one heat was run in the free-for-all. Mr. Len Taylor of Tweed was the announcer and starter of the boat races and Rev. G. D. Young supervised the swimming contests. The bait-casting competition was supervised by Forrest Dennis and Clayton Neal.

The I.O.D.E. operated a souvenir stall and refreshment booths were operated by Vern Caverley.

The speed boat races resulted as follows:

On Extended Vacation

Sun Valley, Ida., July 31 (AP) —Actress Judy Garland, her four-year-old daughter and a nurse are staying at this mountain resort for what her studio calls "an extended vacation and rest."

The 29-year-old singing star made the trip on advice of MGM President Louis B. Mayer, although she is still under suspension by the studio. She arrived here Sunday as a studio spokesman said she is over the despondency which caused her to scratch her throat with a broken glass June 19.

Her husband, director Vincent Minelli, remained in Hollywood.

Brothers Suffer Painful Burns In Gasoline Blast

Gatineau, Que., July 31—(CP) —Two young brothers are in hospital today, slowly recovering from serious, painful burns suffered when their father's automobile burst into flames in this village, four miles northeast of Ottawa Saturday night.

In hospital are Ronald Charbonneau, 16, suffering burns throughout the left side of his body, and his brother, Bernard, 8, with burns to his face and left arm.

The accident occured when the family car stalled and Mr. Charbonneau asked the older boy to pour some gasoline from a can into the engine carburetor.

The action touched off a sharp explosion, which set the engine and the car on fire.

Mr. Charbonneau, sitting at the wheel, escaped injury.

50 More Motorists Pay for Speeding

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 31—(CP) — Fifty motorists were picked up by Provincial Police in this area during the weekend on speeding charges. Among them was W. J. Mahoney, Buffalo Senator, who paid $15 for travelling at 75 miles per hour Saturday.

WILFULLY DAMAGED SHIP

Devonport, England, July 31—(Reuters) —John Bradbury, a Royal Navy seaman today was sentenced to two years in jail and was dismissed from the service after admitting that he wilfully damaged the steering engine of a wreck-disposal ship, the Damsay. He said he was depressed by his home life and did the damage in the hope of getting out of the service.

Toronto Gets Heavy Rainfall, More to Come

Toronto, July 31—(CP)—More than an inch of rain fell here in the 24-hour period ending at 9.30 a.m. EDT today and meteorological officials said more was on the way.

Forecasters said skies probably would remain overcast for at least two days with electrical storms and heavy rain hitting scattered sections of the province during that period.

A stationary weather front extending from Montreal west to northern Lake Michigan will cause thunderstorms in the Toronto district this afternoon, the public weather office reported today. Another weather disturbance lying about 700 miles west of Lake Michigan may reach the Toronto area late Tuesday or Wednesday.

Thunderstorms and heavy rain hit scattered sections of Ontario Saturday and Sunday causing brief power cutoffs in some areas and crop damage in others.

C.N.R. Places Order For 22 Diesels

WELSH MINERS TO STRIKE

Cardiff, Wales, July 31 — (Reuters) — Notice was given today that all the 100,000 coal miners in South Wales, one of Britain's most important mining areas will strike Aug. 14.

The miners object to increases in the fares charged on the buses that carry them to work.

The ministry of labor has announced it will set up a committee to investigate the dispute.

Mackenzie King Once Thought of Entering Ministry

Ottawa, July 31 — (CP) — As a young man, the late W. L. Mackenzie King contemplated entering the Christian ministry, Rev. Ian Burnett disclosed Sunday in a memorial service for the former Prime Minister in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Memorial services for the statesman who died July 22 and for whom a state funeral was held last Wednesday, also took place in St. Stephen's Presbyterian Church, St. John's Anglican Church and St. Matthew's Anglican Church.

Mr. Burnett, who officiated at the state funeral service in St Andrew's on Wednesday, recalled that Mr. King had been a member of the church for almost 50 years, coming from St. Andrew's in Toronto in 1901.

He was a faithful attendant and Mr. Burnett said "as a minister I used to find it a little disturbing to have such a hearer in my congregation. But no one could have been more appreciative of what his minister did."

As a young man, Mr. King had considered entering the ministry himself. Later in life he said that if he had, his favorite text would have been St. Paul's words: "Let this mind be in you that was also in Christ Jesus."

"Although lonely, he was surrounded by an inner circle of loyal friends and companions and when he gave his friendship he gave it royally," Mr. Burnett said.

King Greatest Canadian of Century--Claxton

London, July 31 — (Reuters) — Defence Minister Brooke Claxton of Canada, writing in the Sunday Times, says the death of former Prime Minister Mackenzie King removed "the greatest Canadian of the century, a man whom the people had somehow come to feel was their greatest friend."

In a lengthy article headed "William Lyon Mackenzie King, An Appreciation," his colleague credits him with keeping the Dominion united during the Second World War.

"The task of Canadian statesmanship as he saw it," the cabinet minister writes, was "to weld Canada into a free nation that could speak with a strong and united voice at the council tables of the world.

"His opponents under-rated him thought him soft, indecisive, a master of delay, an evader of issues. Yet Canadian public life is strewn with the corpses of the adversaries he defeated."

CHAMPION BIRLER

Blind River, July 31 (CP) — Bill Cyr is king of the lumberjacks along the north shore of Lake Superior. At the Blind River community day he birled five challengers into the water from 16 foot logs in less than five seconds each. Now 46, he's been at it for 30 years.

WEDDINGS

RITZ—FRASER

The marriage of Miss Joyce Kathleen Fraser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Fraser, of Toronto, to Mr. William Norman Ritz, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ritz, of Corbyville, took place on Saturday, July 15, at two-thirty o'clock, in Danforth Avenue United Church, Toronto. Pink and white gladioli and white lilies with pink snapdragons formed the setting for the ceremony which was performed by Rev. H. Stanley Bland, of Toronto.

Mrs. Murray Holmes was the organist and Mr. Leslie Mills sang "Through the Years", during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white embroidered organdy gown, with scalloped neckline and three-tiered full-gathered skirt. She wore a matching embroidered organdy cloche cap, with tulle illusion veil and carried a nosegay of pink roses, white sweet peas and carnations.

Miss June Fraser, the bride's sister, as maid of honor, wore a mauve nylon marquisette dress with matching cap. She carried a nosegay of yellow and white carnations with white sweetpeas.

Miss Audrey Ritz, the groom's sister, as bridesmaid, wore a Nile green nylon marquisette dress with matching cap and she carried a nosegay of pink and white carnations with white sweetpeas.

Mr. Donald Shields, of Sherburne, Ont., was best man and the ushers were Mr. Darrel Dolson of Shelburne, and Mr. Donald Hubble, of Belleville.

The bride's mother wore a cocoa lace and crepe dress, with pale pink picture hat and gloves and corsage of pink carnations. The groom's mother chose a blue lace and crepe dress, with white picture hat and gloves and corsage of white carnations and cornflowers.

For a motor trip to Manitoulin Island, and Muskoka, the bride chose an aqua Irish linen suit, with white accessories and cloche cap. Her corsage was of Talisman roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Ritz will make their home in Montreal, Que.

JACKSON—LLOYD

Christ Church was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, July 29, at 2:30 p.m., when Donna Mildred, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Lloyd, of Belleville, became the bride of Donald Marvin, Belleville, son of Mr. Thomas Jackson, of Deseronto, Ont. The Rev. Canon J. Grant Sparling, rector of the church, officiated before a background of pink and white gladioli.

Dana Cook, church organist, provided the wedding music, and Mrs. Gordon Roblin, soloist, sang before the ceremony, "The Lord's Prayer", and during the signing of the register "Because".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a charming gown of white eyelet organdy over taffeta, featuring a fitted bodice with cape effect collar; the full skirt falling into a slight train. Her fingertip veil of scalloped tulle illusion was caught by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried an arm bouquet of red roses with lace streamers, and wore matching elbow-length mitts ending in points at the wrists.

Miss Betty Mastin, of Belleville, was maid of honor, wearing a lime green gown of taffeta with short sleeves and matching mitts and halo hat. The gown was fashioned with molded bodice and flared skirt. She carried a shower bouquet of yellow carnations.

Miss Jean Lloyd, of Belleville, and sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, gowned in pink taffeta, featuring fitted bodice with Peter Pan collar, and flared skirt, with matching hat and mitts. She carried a shower bouquet of mauve carnations.

Miss Carol-Ann Davidson, of Belleville, was flower girl, sweet in her floor-length frock of yellow embroidered taffeta with short, puff sleeves. She carried a nosegay of green carnations.

Mr. Laurence Dent, of Belleville, was groomsman, and Mr. William "Bill" Leeming, and Mr. Donald Mitchell, both of Belleville, were ushers.

The reception was held at the bride's home, which was tastefully decorated with gladioli, and pink and white streamers. The bride's mother received the guests, wearing powder blue, tissue faille, white accessories and corsage of pink roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's stepmother who was gowned in grey crepe with white accessories and corsage of red roses.

For travelling to points west, the bride chose navy blue nylon with white accessories, and corsage of red roses. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson will reside in Belleville, upon their return.

Guests were present from Madoc, Campbellford, Demorestville, and Deseronto.

WANNAMAKER—MACKEY

Grace Chapel Church, Stirling, Ont., was the setting recently for a pretty wedding when Erith Lorraine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Mackey, of Boulter, Ont., was united in marriage to Orval Frederick Wannamaker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan R. Wannamaker, of Stirling, Ont. The Rev. W. E. Belch, of Belleville, Ont., officiated at a double ring ceremony before a background of pink and white peonies, Summer blossoms and ferns.

The wedding music was rendered by Mrs. George Butcher, of Stirling, Ont., and the soloists, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Broadworth of Stirling, sang before the ceremony "The Wedding Prayer", and during the signing of the register, a Hymn.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her bridal gown of white brocaded satin fashioned on princess lines with nylon and lace molded bodice with pearl trim, the full skirt draped gracefully into a slight train with an inset of lace forming a half hoop in front. Her veil of lace-edged nylon tulle held in place by a coronet headdress encrusted with pearls, fell into a beautiful train. She carried a crescent shaped bouquet of pink roses and gladioli petals.

Miss Elva Mackey, of Belleville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, gowned in pale blue sheer with matching mitts and heart-shaped headdress which held her fingertip veil. She carried a crescent shaped bouquet of roses and petals tied with matching ribbon.

Miss Lorna Mackey, of Boulter, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, gowned in yellow sheer with matching mitts, heart-shaped headdress, which held her fingertip veil. She carried a crescent shoped bouquet similar to that of the maid of honor, tied with matching ribbon.

Miss Donna Towes, of Frankford, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl, dressed in pink brocaded nylon with matching hat and mitts. She carried a bouquet similar to the maid of honor and the bridesmaid.

Mr. Leo Wannamaker, of Stirling, Ont., brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman and Mr. Don Crowe, and Mr. Harry Fisher, both of Frankford, were ushers.

Following the reception, which was held at Wallbridge Orange Hall, the bride's mother, gowned in navy taffeta with white accessories, and a corsage of red roses received the guests assisted by the bridegroom's mother, gowned in navy sheer with white accessories and a corsage of red roses.

The young couple left on a honeymoon to Toronto, Niagara Falls, and other points in the United States.

For travelling the bride chose navy sheer with white accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

They will reside in Frankford, Ontario.

PIPHER—CONBOY

A lovely double ring ceremony was performed on Saturday, July 29, at 3 p.m., by the Rev. H. Gill Steers, before a background of evergreens, ferns, gladioli and summer flowers, in Kingston Road United Church, Belleville, when Joan Anne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred N. Conboy, of Belleville, became the bride of Leonard Everett Pipher, of Oshawa, Ont., son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett L. Pipher, Oshawa.

Traditional wedding music was rendered by Mrs. M. J. Ryan, and the soloist, Miss Shirley Ann Parker, sang before the ceremony, "I Love You Truly", and during the signing of the register, "Because".

Owing to the illness of her father, the bride was given in marriage by her grandfather, Mr. Leslie Beecroft, of Oshawa, and was radiant in her bridal gown of white slipper satin, featuring a tight-fitting bodice with nylon yoke outlined with pearls; long, tight-fitting sleeves ending in points over the hands: full skirt with seed-pearl embroidered front panel, and bustle effect back. Her fingertip length veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a halo of seed pearls interwoven with orange blossoms, worn by her mother at her wedding. She wore a necklace of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom, and carried a white Bible surmounted by red Sweetheart roses, with cascade of satin streamers and tiny red rosebuds.

Miss Kathleen Conboy, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, becomingly gowned in ice-blue nylon sheer, and carried a nosegay of pink Sweetheart roses and sweetpeas.

Little Miss Carol Conboy, sister of the bride, was flower girl, demure in her frock of pink sheer rayon. She carried a nosegay of pink rosebuds and sweetpeas.

Master Roy Conboy, small brother of the bride, was ringbearer, nattily dressed in blue blazer and long white flannels.

Mr. Emerson "Bud" Pipher, of Oshawa, was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Kenneth Pipher, and Mr. Norris Conboy.

At the reception which was held at the home of the bride's parents, the bride's mother, gowned in forget-me-not-blue silk jersey, with navy accessories, and corsage of pink Sweetheart roses, was assisted in receiving by the bridegroom's mother, who wore turquoise nylon sheer, with navy accessories and corsage of pink Sweetheart roses.

For travelling to Eastern Ontario, the bride chose a powder blue ensemble with white accessories, and corsage of pink roses Mr. and Mrs. Pipher will reside in Toronto, upon their return.

Out-of-town guests were present from Mountain Grove, Fernleigh, Toronto, and Oshawa, Ont.

The bride's gift to her bridesmaid was matching pearls and earrings; to the flower girl, locket and chain; to her soloist, blue pearls, and to the organist, a compact.

The bridegroom's gifts to the groomsmen and ushers, were personal gold tie clips, and to the little ringbearer, game accessories.

The bride, prior to her marriage was the recipient of many lovely gifts at showers given in her honor; Mrs. Fred Newton, assisted by her daughter, Yvonne, of Toronto, entertained at a miscellaneous shower; Mrs. Harold Cornish, of Oshawa, assisted by Mrs. Bert Parker and Mrs. Leslie Beecroft, at a linen shower; Mrs. M. J. Ryan, of Belleville, assisted by Miss Emma Ellis, girl friend of the bride, at a cup and saucer shower.

At the home of Mrs. Clarence Scott, a miscellaneous shower was held for Thornton's Corners; Mrs Ken Walkom and Mrs. Ken Reid presented the bride-to-be with a beautiful chenille bedspread and bathroom ensemble, on behalf of the Kingston Road W.A. and friends and neighbors.

Mrs. Frank Luke, assisted by Mrs. Joe Kelly, entertained at a miscellaneous shower, and the girls of the Conduit department of the Fittings, made the presentation of an automatic iron and linen.

Slim-Lined Dress With Fur Neckhole Main Feature

By FLORENCE MILLS

Paris, July 31 (AP) — If you buy yourself a necklet of fur — mink or rabbit will do equally well—you won't need to buy yourself any new clothes next fall.

For the simple, slim-lined dress with a neckhole rimmed in fur is the main feature of the fall fashions paraded by the French couturiers here.

They have lowered hemlines a little and brought back the curved silhouette so we are right back where we started last fall.

The slim skirt is still favorite but it's either cut a little wider, made wrap-around or treated to tiny kick pleats or flounces near the hemline.

There are more full skirts than last year but except for cocktail and evening wear all fullness is restrained and unevenly placed.

Bodices are simple or swatched into a cross-over effect which often develops into a loose hanging panel threaded through the waist-belt to dangle to hem level at one side.

Neckholes whether high and round or deep cut, are trimmed with fur. Sleeves are set-in, long and tight-fighting and usually cuffed with fur to match.

The black-and-white color scheme is widely used, particularly with white ermine or mink collars, set on black dresses and suits. Apart from this, colors mainly used are cigar or nut brown, shades from amber to burnt orange and lot of olive and drab green.

Collars are not important this season. They are either non-existent or brief turn-down affairs. Dior, however, shows a few that stand up in draped effect to the ears.

The short evening dress is still being shown but the full-length dress seems more popular. Hobble numbers slit up the front have vast overskirts, sometimes puffed with a bustle.

The graduated hemline—ankle length in front—dipping down at the back—is widely shown.

Wellington on the Lake

THE COUNTRY CALLS

Close to the heart of Nature,
To Mother Earth's kind breast,
The weary and worn are turning,
Seeking a place of rest;
The whispering wind in the hemlocks,
The splashing waves on the shore
Bring balm to the weary spirit,
To hearts that are heavy and sore.

How soothing the sound of the waters
As they splash on the rocky strand!
And sweet the restful silence
That broods o'er the summer land!
Here cares of the world are forgotten,
The city's turmoil and strife,
And close to the heart of Nature
Is felt the throbbing of life.

—Helen B. Anderson.

Wellington, beautifully situated on the shore of Lake Ontario, is an attractive holiday village, and many seeking vacation find rest and solace here. Many former residents return for the summer.

Mr. Sanger Harris, Toronto, is enjoying holidays here, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris.

Mr. C. D. McCulloch and daughter, Toronto, are occupying a cottage here for two weeks.

Mr George Ferguson spent the weekend in Oshawa guest of his son, Mr. Norman Ferguson and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Carley visited the huckleberry fields and returned with well-filled baskets.

Miss Gladys Lumb accompanied by Mrs. G. Ferguson, Miss Mary Lumb and Mrs. W. H. Anderson, enjoyed a motor trip on Sunday afternoon along the lake shore to the Point.

Rev. Mr. Robbins is taking the services in the United Church during July while Rev. Mr. Poulter is on holiday.

Rev. Rural Dean and Mrs. Heaven, spent a week at Lake Simcoe.

Several family parties enjoyed picnics in Wellington Park on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Donald Jolley, who suffered injuries to his leg while busy at his summer cottage, is now on the road to recovery.

The friends of Mr. Milton Wood, Ameliasburg, were sorry to hear of the injuries he received while cultivating in the field. He will be laid up for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Kinnear, of Vineland, were in the county for the funeral of their aunt, the late Mrs. Rebecca Norton, of Bloomfield.

WELLINGTON CHURCH W.A.

A pleasant and profitable time was spent on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Frank Harris when she entertained the members of the W.A. at their July meeting. The president Mrs. Boyce Wiltsie, occupied the chair and Mrs. C. Tice gave the devotional. Mrs. C. D. McCulloch, Toronto, a former member, was called on for a few remarks.

An interesting number was the presentation of a life member pin and certificate to the secretary, Mrs. Ida McFaul, in recognition of her valuable services. Mrs. F. Harris made the presentation and closed with a poem, "The Faithful Few" by Edna Jaques. Mrs. McFaul made suitable reply. Reports of the W.A. convention were given by Mrs. Arnold Foster and Mrs. C. Tice. A thoughtful and timely paper, "The Harvest" was read by Mrs. Ross. An old-time poem "The New Organ" read by Mrs. Alyea caused many a smile. At the close of a social hour with refreshments was enjoyed. The August meeting will be in the form of a picnic in the park.

Miss Celia Striker has purchased the home of Mr. Rabbi and will take possession in August. It is also reported that Mr. W. Baverstock has purchased the home of the late Mr. McConnell, Maple Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Raynor have returned home after enjoying a trip to Calgary and Banff.

Mrs. Frank Huff, West Lake, is spending this week in Wellington, guest of Mr. and Mrs. Rex Huff. She was tea-hour guest of Mrs. Arthur Good Murphy on Tuesday.

Miss Marjorie Blakely is spending a week with friends in Toronto.

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about Food ... What's Cooking?

Although some carp have been known to reach the age of a hundred years, there aren't many fish who enjoy this kind of longevity.

Sportsmen have always snubbed the carp because the latter are no game fish and because carp eat the same underwater plants which wild ducks eat. Water fowl hunters consider ducks natural objects for their love and interest. When they shoot a wild duck, they want it to be a plump well fed bird who enjoyed the best of all possible living.

In spite of the low esteem in which carp are thus held by sportsmen, they are a popular eating fish, and rank third of all commercial fresh water fish caught in the U.S.

The flesh is not rich tasting, and for this reason, carp are usually served with a well seasoned stuffing or a lively sauce.

In this recipe carp are first fried and then baked slowly with a paprika flavored gravy. Choose carp that have bright eyes, red gills and firm meat.

Baked Carp, Paprika Gravy
Serves 4.

Have the fish dealer clean and cut a 2 1-2 pound carp into filets or into 1-inch thick slices. Wash pieces of fish.

Season carp with salt, celery salt and pepper. Dip in flour. Melt fat to a depth of 1-4 inch in a large frying pan. Brown carp on both sides. Remove from fat. Drain on absorbent paper. Place carp in a baking dish or casserole.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

In a heavy saucepan melt 2 tablespoons fat. Add 1 large onion, 2 cloves of garlic, 1 medium size green pepper, all chopped fine. Simmer over a low flame until onions and green peppers are tender but not browned. Add 1 cup of water, 1 medium size carrot thinly sliced, 1-2 teaspoon paprika and 1 bouillon cube. Bring to a boil. Pour over a carp in baking dish. Set baking dish in oven. Bake 30-40 minutes.

Remove fish from vegetable mixture. Add 1-2 cup sour cream to vegetable mixture. Add salt and pepper to taste. Do not cook cream or liquid will curdle. Pour vegetable mixture unstrained over fish on serving plates.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON

Healthy scalp; lustrous hair

Beauty shops flourish throughout the land and the main business has to do with making women's heads attractive. Now and then a woman will have a facial, frequently a manicure, but hair washing, waving and dressing consume most of the operator's time. The hair must carry the professional touch. No money is spared along these lines, that often are a drain on the good looks budget.

That's all right. Fine and dandy. A well-groomed head is demanded these days. But what about hair health? Little thought is given to the care of the scalp, upon which the vitality of the silky threads depends. Five minutes of hygienic attentions at bedtime, after you have anointed your complexion with a fragrant cream, will do wonders to make your hair look alive, carry shining lights...

When you feel tired and low, your hair looks sick

Brushing increases the growth of hair by stimulating the circulation in the scalp, and removing dandruff if it is present. The bristles of the brush should be firm enough to exercise but not scratch the scalp. Brushing removes dead shafts that are ready to fall, to be replaced by little understudies. This form of grooming gives your mop a daily house-cleaning that will prove beneficial.

Brush a strand at a time, holding the hair up and away from the head.

The scalp should be thoroughly massaged after the brushing. Grasp the flesh with both hands and endeavor to loosen it from the underlying parts by pressure and by rolling the tissues between the fingers. There will be a sense of warmth which shows that the circulatory streams are active. Every little shaft lives on the blood; when circulation is sluggish they lack the nourishment that is necessary for growth and well-being.

If the scalp is dry and the hair brittle, apply a little mineral oil before starting the treatment. Part the hair at various places and apply the lubricant with a medicine dropper; the shafts will not pick up much of it if it's frictioned in quickly, so your locks won't look oily.

The hair, like the skin, can reflect very definitely the general condition of the body. No doubt you have noticed that when you feel tired and low, your hair looks sick. It loses lustre; the wave slinks out. You cannot expect your glorious crown to carry on if you are highly nervous, or if you are beset with digestive disturbances.

Perhaps it is not necessary to remind you that comb and brush must be kept scrupulously clean. Both should be kept away from the dust. There are cute little plastic cases that can be used for this purpose. When washing comb and brush, add a little ammonia to the water.

Charm School Teaches Men Smooth Way to Attract Women

By VERNON BUTLER

Atlanta, July 31 (AP)—You shy bachelors who haven't been making much headway with the gals should acquire a "flexible larynx."

Nothing so drastic as throat surgery is required. You can get yours adjusted by three lovely instructors who supervise the "techniques for attracting women" course at the Atlanta Academy of Charm.

Doris Waters, Dotty Ledford and Ruth Harris—a blonde, brunette and redhead, respectively — have a lot of other ideas besides the larynx business. Enough, in fact, for 15 lessons.

For instance: A really smooth worker doesn't say, "you look wonderful today," to his girl friend. The Charming Charm School teachers say that implies that she looked terrible other days. Instead, he says, "you're always so lovely, dear," in a low, caressing voice.

It's also a good idea, the girls advise, to make a woman feel that she is something of an enigma. Even if you have a whale of an ego, don't let your one and only think you can read her like a book.

Just sneak up on her with a softly spoken bell-ringer like this: "There's something mysterious about you, sweetheart, something that's hard to understand—."

See what we mean about the flexible larynx?

When they have satisfied themselves that his subtle compliments are properly modulated, the girls guide the awkward male gently through such complex matters as proper dress (fat men should avoid rougher fabrics), posture (women don't like men who slouch), color harmony, style sense, poise, personality, "dangerous" and "alluring" masculine perfumes.

Another point emphasized by the Charm School specialists is the "keep-a-woman-wondering" technique. They maintain it's better to make a girl wonder why you didn't kiss her. On this point there is some disagreement between students and teachers. Some of the more advanced pupils feel that the woman can wonder just as well about something else.

Black Lace Lingerie Favorite With Men Says Store Owner

By GLORIA YARBROUGH

Hollywood, July 31 (AP) — "Men like their women in black lacy lingerie," says Juel Park, whose lingerie shop has more male customers than women.

"The few guys who don't like black, go for red. I suppose it's because those colors have somehow got the reputation for sexiness."

One of Juel's best male customers is Van Johnson, who likes to buy his wife, Evie, fancy under-duds.

"It's true that movi actresses buy several thousand dollars worth of lingerie," said Juel. "But that's because they buy a whole year's supply at once.

"Mae West was in here just recently and bought $3,700 worth of lingerie. But I probably won't see her again until next year.

"Most of the stars like ultra feminine underwear. Even though you might see them in chic tailored suits, you can bet your boots they are dressed frilly underneath."

She held up a garter belt, a wisp of a creation in silk and lace. "We make these special for Marlene Dietrich. She likes very lacy things and she likes them in black or boudoir beige." (She pays $35 for the garter belt).

Blonde glamor girls Lana Turner and Betty Grable like blue and pink and white undies. Betty sleeps in blue finger-tip gowns. Ava Gardner wears exotic—in any unusual color—lingerie.

The biggest seller in the shop is panties, and the men buy most of them. Juel sells about $25,000 worth each year. They range in price from $16 to $75 a pair.

"Men don't like girdles on women," she explained. "They like them to look natural!"

She also makes lingerie for the movies. But "we have to take special precautions," she said. "We don't cut the nightgown quite so low, and we line it with heavy crepe."

Peterborough Bait Factory Damaged

Peterborough, July 29 (CP)—Fire early today broke out at the rear of the Lucky Strike Bait Works and swept through most of the buildings. Officials said damage may amount to $20,000.

The paint shop containing costly spray guns, jigs and dyes was destroyed. Tons of brass sheeting were destroyed by the intense heat.

Fire doors prevented the blaze from spreading to the stockroom but the water damage there is heavy.

Cause of the fire has not been established. It is possible that children ignited a large pile of sawdust and wooden blocks which smouldered till the early hours of the morning.

SAY HITCH-HIKER HELD

Toronto, July 29 (CP)—Two Toronto youths who hitch-hiked to Texas said Friday a third member of their party is held in jail there for entering the United States illegally and they are appealing to the Canadian government for help.

The youths, Gordon K. Burnell and Charles W. Worth, both 21, said their friend, Fred N. West, 19, of Havelock, Ont., has been in prison at Houston for five months awaiting deportation. They are seeking his release "before he is carried out feet first."

BEER AS SECURITY

Pittsburgh, July 29 (AP)—The liquid assets of the Brookline Savings and Loan Company will be increased literally if a couple fails to pay off a $2,000 loan. A chattel mortgage filed yesterday disclosed that Edward and Mary Ann Coennen put up 750 cases of beer as security for the 60-day loan. Coennen is a beer distributor.

Wallbridge S.S. Holds Picnic

The Wallbridge Sunday School of Sidney circuit held their annual picnic at Sarles' Beach on July 26. After lunch the races took place with the following results:

Girls and boys 4 and 5 years — Shirley Wannamaker, Peter Evans; Girls 6 and 7 years — Dorothy Brown, Marion Woods; Boys 6 and 7 — Gary Sine, Clare Lough; Girls 8 to 10 — Carole Reid, Dianne Rikley; Boys 8 to 10 years — Roy Sine, David Waddell; Girls 10 to 12 — Betty Nicol, Margaret Rose Sine; Married Women — Olive Woods, Betty Sinc; Intermediate boys — Eric Anderson, David Waddell; Three-legged race — Peggy Evans and Marie Kingston, Betty Sine and Gary Sine; Men's Race — Frank Phillips, George Brown, Lawrence Ketcheson; Kick-the-shoe race — Neilie Ketcheson, Ethel Nicolson, Marion Phillips, Iva Rikley; Ladies Free for all — Irene Chisholm, Hazel Wannamaker; Beginners — Nancy Phillips, James Fair, Mary Reid, Patsy and Carol Shorey, Lana and Louise Woods, Freddie Phillips, Jean and Joyce Woods, Marjory Wannamaker, Billy Donaldson, Marje and Valeria Chisholm, Sandra Fisher.

Catches Husband Falling From Third Floor Ledge

New York, July 29 (AP) — Mrs. Rose Lazzeri was sweeping a concrete courtyard beneath a window of her home yesterday when she heard her 12-year-old daughter scream.

She looked up to see her husband, Alfredo, hanging from a third floor window by his finger nails.

He became dizzy while sitting in the window to cool off—and as his wife gasped, he dropped.

She raced to the spot and reached it just as his body hit a clothes line and flipped off.

She caught him in her arms and they both tumbled to the pavement—unharmed.

Lazerri, 42, weighs 125 pounds. His wife, 38, weighs 115.

FREE RIDE TO CHURCH

Jacksonville, Fla., July 29. (AP) —"I'm going to church" is all a person here haos to say to get a free ride on a city bus tomorrow morning. Then he says, "I have been to church" and gets a free ride home.

It's a goodwill gesture to the community, said Wiley Moore, bus company president. If anyone cheats it will be on his conscience and may get him to church anyway, Moore added.

KOREAN HILLS PROVIDE COVER FOR DEFENDERS AND ATTACKERS

The tough nature of the terrain over which American troops are fighting in Korea is dramatically pictured here as a U.S. Battalion Combat Post takes up a new position in the hills. The rugged country becomes a natural barrier for the retreating forces as they moved east and southeast to carry on a delaying action against North Koreans pushing toward Pusan. — Central Press Canadian.

AIRSTRIP BUILT IN FEW HOURS

Korean laborers work under American supervision at the job of laying out an airstrip in South Korea. The base of the strip is of steel mesh. The strip was completed and in operation in a few hours. — Central Press Canadian.

WINNING A SMALL-SCALE BATTLE

Lieut. Robert Freeman, of Watertown, N.Y., is shown firing his carbine at enemy snipers as he and members of his tank crew enter a small village somewhere in Korea infested with red snipers. The reds retaliated with heavy mortar fire and Freeman ordered his tank to become a stationary pillbox, spreading his men behind a ditch when the tank's guns were put out of commission. Using small arms, the tank crew fought until they drove the reds out of the village. — Central Press Canadian.

C.I.O. AND A.F.L. CHIEFS DISCUSS MERGER

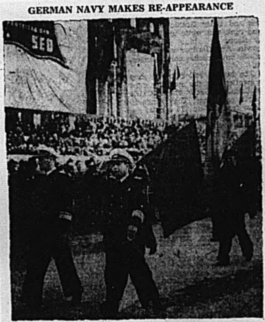
WARN OF ANTI-LEOPOLD REVOLUTION

This scene was made during one of the many riots throughout Brussels caused by the return of King Leopold. More than 50,000 workers in Belgium's southern industrial belt are on strike in protest against the King's return from exile. Ex-premier Paul Henri Spaak, leader of the anti-Leopold faction, warned of revolution if Leopold insists on remaining. Martial law may be proclaimed. — Central Press Canadian.

WAITING FOR A SURE TARGET

Delaying tactics, to this U.S. gun crew in Korea, consists of waiting around the bend of a road and if an enemy tank appears they fire at point-blank range. This photo was taken a few miles from Yongdong which the reds occupied after a fierce fight. — Central Press Canadian.

GERMAN NAVY MAKES RE-APPEARANCE



When East German communists concluded their party congress with a mass "peace demonstration" in the Soviet sector, these East German naval-police troops marched for the first time in public. The officers' uniforms are patterned exactly as those worn in the wartime German navy. — Central Press Canadian.

ANNOUNCING NEW DEALERSHIP

Studebaker Appoints M. Stanley Keon As Automotive Dealer in This District

Studebaker Corporation, for nearly 100 years pioneers in the best in transportation, are happy to welcome Keon Motors Limited into their growing family of automotive dealers.

M. STANLEY KEON, president of Keon Motors Limited, Studebaker Sales and Service headquarters in Belleville, brings years of experience in the automotive trade to his new enterprise.

Mr. Keon, a native of Saskatoon, came to Belleville following the war after serving for five and half years in the R.C.A.F. Overseas. He was a prisoner in a European prison camp for two and a half years.

Mr. Keon is married and the father of two children.

It was 99 years ago that the five Studebaker brothers began their epic record in the field of transportation. Starting with a $68 investment in a blacksmith shop, they become owners of the world's largest wagon and carriage works; their wagons, playing a vital part in the opening up of the vast mid-western and western areas of the United States, becoming intimately linked with the growth of North America.

Always in the forefront of new developments in the business of transportation, Studebaker switched from wagons to automobiles at the turn of the century to found "the great independent" of the automobile industry, incorporating in their new enterprise the best traditions of nineteenth century business expansion and most progressive methods of manufacturing and personnel relations.

Inherent in all that Studebaker has ever undertaken is the abiding belief that lasting prestige and pride of ownership must be solidly supported by good value, and that soundness of styling and good taste are inseparably linked to dependability. This belief is the backbone of the Studebaker tradition of superior craftsmanship and accounts for their firmly established reputation as leaders in the automotive field.

The most valuable asset in the building, selling and servicing of Studebaker products is favorable public opinion. Keon Motors Limited is pledged to the maintenance of the high ideals of Studebaker Corporation, and to the maintenance of the enviable Studebaker reputation, so that they may warrant their customers' confidence.

For the utmost in graceful styling, combined with rugged dependability, Studebaker invites you to visit Keon Motors Limited, where 100 years of leadership in transportation awaits you.

Service manager of the new Studebaker agency in Belleville, Keon Motors Limited, is MR. HUGH E. LUTTRELL, for twenty-five years actively engaged in the selling and servicing of automobiles.

On completing his education Mr. Luttrell started to work with an automobile dealer in Toronto. He moved to Belleville in 1941.

During the war he was loaned to the American government as a mechanical supervisor in the automotive field and was stationed in Newfoundland. On his return to Belleville he operated a service station on Front Street and recently was employed by J. B. Boyce and Sons.

Mr. Luttrell is married and the father of one child.

Now a new Studebaker dealer is "at your service" in Belleville

MORE SELECTIONS!

Walt. Gerow gestured with his hand at a panoramic picture of a baseball team that adorns a wall of his office in Memorial Arena.

"That team," he said, in answer to a request for his opinion as to which was the best baseball aggregation to represent this city in the good old Central Ontario Baseball League days, "is in my mind, the best to come out of this city."

"They won the league championship and later in one of the toughest series I have ever seen, went on to win the Ontario title from the powerful Walkerville Chicks."

Walt rubbed his chin. "Let me see," he said. "that was back in 1928 and the team was the old Nationals. Hoot Gibson was one of the best pitchers around these parts in those days and when we went to Walkerville for the first game of the titular series, we saw placards asking the fans there not to miss seeing Gibson."

"I crossed those good people up and did not use Gibson in the game. I wanted to save him for the game in Belleville. And you should have heard the Windsor fans scream. They beat us 17-3 in Walkerville; Gibson beat them 3-1 here and we took 'em in Guelph 8-2."

Members of that famous team were: "Peeny" Mills, catcher, Hoot Gibson, Vinny Utronkie and Alex Weir, pitchers, Harry Mills, first base, Vern Weir, second base, Harry Blakely, shortstop, Bob Scott, third base, and Stan. Hagerman, Wicky Ross and Sonny Green, outfielders.

And up pops "Cap" Smith, now associated with the Moira Fuels who steps to bat with his selection. "Cap" figures the 1911 edition of the team was the best to represent the city and names the players thusly: — Freddie Goyer, pitcher, Art. Hagerman, catcher, Walt, Gerow, first base, (that guy gets in on all the all-star selections), Cap Smith, second base, Morrison, third base; Herb. Mitchell, shortstop, Maurice Leboy (it sounded like that), Sammy Symons, Somerville, Art. McGee and Scotty Knott.

And here is Jack (Doc) Robertson with his selection. Jack spices his choice with some interesting comment and here is what he has to say:

"Strength through the centre powered this team. You must start out with that solid man, Willie "Peeny" Mills, possibly the best handler of pitchers and certainly one of the steadiest stickmen that ever waved a bat in the COBL.

"On second base I'll put Frank (Soup) Goyer, no fancy dan but who had a pair of hands like hams and those weren't loud fouls that ripped off his bat.

"In centre field I'll put Wick Ross, a nice man to have at the top of the batting order — a picture fielder and an arm like a Lee Enfield.

"The Indian, Jack Williams. He could throw the ball from a rocking chair and do it all day. Hoot Gibson was a spot pitcher who had control and a breaking curve. What more could you ask for?"

"Before we name the best," went on John, "how about these underestimated utility players, Alex. Weir, Sonny Green and Speedy St. Louis? These lads could hit any time and if you wanted any bricks made or a house wired, they could look after these little chores in their spare time."

"Then there was Nicky Sero, a ground coverer and a punch hitter, also Frank Bennett. The woods seemed to be full of good ball players in those days, a sad contrast to the present day set-up."

Walter Gerow owned the first base position, John said. He made the hard ones look as easy as the soft kind. He was a fluid hitter". (Just whaddya mean by that remark, John?)

Jack "Crock" Williams was another Robertson selection. Says John: "He had a snap throw that could travel along a clothesline and he generally managed to get a piece of the ball."

"I'll wind up with Harry Blakely, perhaps one of the best of all. What was to be done — well — the Doc did it. What more can be said?" Robertson concluded.

DON'T MISS THIS!

Tonight there is going to be softball high jinks at the Canadian National Railways Athletic Association's new Recreation Grounds. The Brewers Warehouse team of the Commercial League will match wits and sticks with the cream of the crop of the CNR Interdepartmental League in an exhibition tilt scheduled for seven o'clock. The I. L. of the CNR boasts some eight squads, the Extras, Motive Power, Express, Yard Office, Stores, Firemen and Yardmen, and we are informed that the boys of the Iron Road are turning in some neat performances in their regular schedule. Just how their best will stack up with Herbie Henn's Suds Deliverymen remains to be seen, but it should provide some high-class entertainment.

The CNR laddybucks proudly claim their diamond is the fastest in the city and subsequent reports substantiate their claim. The new field is to be officially opened in the near future, but in the meantime the kiddies' playground and softball diamond are busy every night, or nearly so.

AT THE FAIR GROUNDS

At eight-thirty tonight, the Cannifton Clippers play their last scheduled game against Napanee in Exhibition Park. Since yesterday we have learned that Cannifton and Napanee have two or more postponed games to play and there is a mathematical chance of Point Anne's third slot position being in danger. However we cannot confirm that.

FIRST ERROR IN 58 GAMES

New York, July 31—(AP)—Red Schoendienst, flashy second baseman of St. Louis Cardinals, was charged with his first error in 58 games yesterday when the Cards whipped New York Giants 6-3. He had handled 320 consecutive chances before making the miscue, bettering his own former National League record of 285 chances and 44 games.

The Major League mark was set by Bobby Doerr in 1948 when the Red Sox second-sacker handled 414 chances before committing an error.

Don't Overlook Del Ennis When Voting For Most Valuable Player in National

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

When the time comes to vote for the National League's most valuable player don't overlook Del Ennis.

You'll never get manager Eddie Sawyer to admit it, but the muscular Philly outfielder has been the most vital performer among the host of good looking kids on the husling Philadelphia club that is on top of the heap today by three games.

Every Philly has done his bit. The three bonus pitchers — Robin Roberts, Curt Simmons and Bob Miller —own 36 victories. Roberts won his 13th game yesterday as the Phils swept a double header from Pittsburgh Pirates, 10-0 and 4-2.

But in the final analysis, it has been Ennis and his big bat that has put the Phils in first place—and is keeping them up there.

In the Phils' last eight games, of which they've won seven, Ennis has clubbed enemy pitchers for 13 hits in 30 times at bat. He's driven in 21 runs. His base knocks included five home runs — two with the bases loaded in three days.

Although his average is only .293, he leads the league with 89 runs batted in and is tied for second with team-mate Willie Jones in home runs with 22.

Except for driving in seven runs with a pair of home runs, a double and a single, Ennis had a somewhat mild afternoon Sunday. His grand-slam homer in the eighth inning of the opener was added dressing as Roberts coasted to his third successive shutout with a four-hitter.

But Del's other four-base clout —also in the eighth inning — decided the second game. It climaxed a four-run rally that overcame a 2-0 lead. Jim Konstanty, who relieved Ken Heintzelman in the seventh, was the winner.

Yankees Move Up

While the Phils were increasing their National League lead, New York Yankees moved to within two percentage points of the American League's pace-setting Detroit Tigers. The Yankees swept both ends of a doubleheader from Chicago White Sox, 15-7 and 4-3.

The Tigers came from behind to outlast Philadelphia Athletics, 12-10. They spotted the A's a 7-2 lead, then came up with eight runs in the fifth. Vic Wertz banged his 20th homer for Detroit.

Cleveland's third-place Indians fell two games off the pace, splitting a doubleheader with Boston Red Sox. The Indians won the opener 6-5 in the 10th. Home runs by Bobby Doerr and Walt Dropo helped Rookie Willard Nixon and the Sox win the nightcap 6-3.

Washington swept a twin hill from St. Louis Browns, 9-5 and 13-8. Home runs by Sam Mele and Irv Noren featured the Nats first-game triumph. An eight-run uprising in the ninth won the nightcap.

Three National League contenders, St. Louis Cardinals, Boston Braves and Brooklyn Dodgers all won. The Cards snapped New York's nine-game winning streak, whipping the Giants, 6-3.

The Braves wrested third place from the Dodgers by three percentage points with a double victory over Cincinnati, 4-2 and 10-0. Home runs by Earl Torgeson, Luis Olmo and Bob Elliott helped Vern Bickford rack up his 12th triumph in the opener.

Brooklyn beat Bob Rush for the ninth straight time as Don Newcombe hurled a five-hitter over the Cubs with a 7-2 victory. Pee Wee Reese and Roy Campanella homered for Brooks.

Mack's Oldest Sons Obtain Option to Buy

Philadelphia, July 31 — (AP) — Connie Mack's two oldest sons, Roy and Earle were reported today to have obtained a 30-day option on the Philadelphia Athletics.

The Philadelphia Inquirer in a special dispatch from Detroit said the option has an additional 45-day period of grace in which to pay off the Shibe-MacFarland interests, along with those of Mrs. Mack and Connie Mack, Jr., representing 56.5 per cent of the stock of the Philadelphia American League baseball club.

The option carries a stipulation, the Inquirer reported, that if Roy and Earle are not prepared to take possession at the time of the final settlement, the Shibe-MacFarland Mack combination will step into control.

Prop Trouble Still Follows Miss Canada IV

(By The Canadian Press)

Trouble again jinxed Miss Canada IV Saturday.

The temperamental powerboat, taken for a test run over Lake Muskoka by driver Harold Wilson and mechanic Charlie Volker hit 135 miles an hour.

She refused to go faster. Wilson said her new steel propellor seemed too heavy and may have to be shaved down before she can make any attempt to crack the world's water record of 160.3 m.p.h.

The propellor was made in Owen Sound, Ont., during the winter after tests with bronze props showed to tended to buckle and lose pitch under the terrific power generated by Miss Canada's engine.

The tests are to determine whether the Canadian boat is capable of smashing the world mark, set recently by Stan Sayres of Seattle in his Slo-Mo-Shun If Wilson is satisfied he can crack the record, he plans to make official time trials, possibly at Picton, Ont., Aug. 7, where a measured mile course has been laid out for a regatta there.

Calumet farm's stretch-running Ponder bounded out of 10th place Saturday to win the $75,000-added Arlington Handicap by three-quarters of a length at Arlington Park before a sweltering crowd of 26,000.

Aegina, owned by Hal Price Headley, Lexington, Ky., finished second. Inseparable was third and Cochise, one of two eastern invaders in the race, fourth in a field of ten.

A record-smashing performance by a 16-year-old Toronto girl highlighted the Ontario women's track and field championships at Pantry Park in Toronto Saturday.

Pretty, blonde-haired Mildred Grosse set an Ontario mark of 7.7 seconds in the junior 60-metres sprint while her club, Toronto Malvernettes A.C., edged out East York Track Club for the club championship, by three points with a total 48. Hamilton Olympic Club, winners last year placed third with 33 points.

Miss Grosse's record is 1-10 of a second faster than the old mark of 7.8 set by Adelaide Adams of Toronto in 1935 and is only 1-10 of a second slower than the Canadian mark of 7.6 held by Isabell McKean of Toronto.

President J. C. McLeod of the Ontario Lacrosse Association yesterday slapped an indefinite suspension on Bob Hilson, Brampton junior for hitting a referee.

Hilson struck referee Bill Fitzgerald of St. Catharines during a Brampton-Mimico game in Mimico Friday night. Hilson hit the referee when he was given a five-minute misconduct penalty after jostling the official during a dispute over a Brampton goal.

Mahers of Toronto and Montreal's North End Hakoah are tied 1-1 in a best-of-five interprovincial soccer series for the right to represent eastern Canada against the winners of a Manitoba-Saskatchewan playoff.

Hakoah won the opener of the series 5-3 in Montreal Saturday night after 30 minutes of overtime following a 1-1 deadlock at the end of the regular 90 minutes of play.

Mahers came back Sunday to down the Montreal squad 1-0.

Paddlers from the Gananoque Canoe and Motor Boat Club Saturday easily won the aggregate championship of the Canadian Canoe Association Northern Division regatta.

The host club piled up 31 points before a rain-soaked crowd of 1,000. Ottawa's Rideau Canoe Club was second with 24, Carleton Place C.C. had 19, and Ottawa New Edinburgh, C.C. had 17.

My Sweetie, still Detroit's top-ranking powerboat, won her second major triumph of the speedboating season Saturday by taking all three heats of the Memorial Trophy race on the Detroit River.

Such Crust I placed second to My Sweetie, and Tempo VI, driven by bandleader Guy Lombardo, ran third in the 45-mile race.

Favorites advanced without serious trouble Saturday in first round matches of the Ontario tennis championships at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club.

The firing was largely confined to Toronto entrants. The big guns—first-seeded Bren Macken of Montreal and brother Jimmy, seeded second—swing into action today.

All seeded and out-of-town players will see action today. Play also begins in the junior events, with players from Ontario, Quebec and the United States competing.

Jack Burke, Jr., won the Sioux City Open golf tournament Sunday with a 268 total.

Skip Alexander, the Knoxville, Tenn., professional, took over second place at 271.

Sam Snead, the top money winner along the P.G.A. circuit, faded in the stretch and had to accept a four-way tie for third position.

Australia and Sweden will meet for the right to play the United States for the Davis Cup.

Australia's tennis team wound up with a 4-1 victory over Mexico City Sunday while Sweden made it a clean sweep over Denmark in the European zone final.

Tony Matlock Best Golfer in Sudbury Open

Sudbury, July 31 — (CP) — Tony Matlock of Kitchener posted rounds of 72, 72 and 74 for a 54-hole total of 218 here Saturday to capture the Seagram Cup in the 14th annual Sudbury Golf Club invitation tournament.

Bernie Johnson of Hamilton finished with 219 for second place, and Bobby Fair of Toronto, winner of the Seagram last year, took third place with 220.

Trailing the leaders in the championship flight were Bill and Dave Morland of North Bay, who posted scores of 223 and 225 respectively. Milt Plomske of Kitchener and Merve Stoughton of North Bay both shot 226.

Completing the title flight were Bill Franklin of Kitchener with 227, Bill Little of Parry Sound with 230, and Hamilton's Ron McAlpine with 233.

Stu Watson of Sudbury Idylewylde shot 227 to capture the first flight. Toronto's Ken Jacobs was second with 232. Honors in the seniors flight went to 56-year-old Roy Herne of Sudbury, a former Seagram Trophy winner, with a 36-hole score of 153.

Ted Flanagan of Sudbury Idylewylde shot 162 to win the second flight, nosing out club - mate Gordon Browning by one stroke. Don Redmond of Sault Ste. Marie posted a 167 low in the third flight, and Idylewylde's Bill Pitt captured the fourth flight with 179.

Three-Way Fight For Last Spot In Playoffs

(By The Canadian Press)

Now it's a three-way fight for the Intercounty League's final playoff berth.

Guelph's never-say-die Maple Leafs entered the picture with a vengeance Saturday. They trounced the seventh-place St. Thomas Legionnaires 9-3, while the sixth-spot Galt Terriers were dropping an 11-4 decision to Brantford Red Sox.

The result: All three teams are but a few percentage points apart, and it's anybody's fight for that sixth-place position.

Lefty Marty Philp turned in a brilliant three-hit pitching chore for Maple Leafs for his fifth win of the season. He was in frequent trouble due to nine walks and a couple of errors, but with the exception of the sixth inning kept Legion well in check.

Philp aided his cause with a pair of timely hits. Walt Jefferies and Chuck Watson knocked out a pair each too.

An inside-the-park grand slam homer by Johnny Lockington of Brantford sent the Galt Terriers down to defeat and kept Sox in second place. Alf Gavey threw an eight-hitter for Sox, but he too was plagued by wildness.

Galt may have lost more than the ball game. Goody Rosen, ex-big-league outfielder, was forced to retire in fifth after pasting one of Jim Bagby's pitches for a triple. He had also hit a single for two hits in three times at bat.

Divide Twin Bill

Kitchener and Stratford divided a heavy-hitting Saturday twin bill, Kitchener winning 11-6 in Stratford, and the Nats taking a 14-7 win in Brantford.

Flashy Freddie Thomas continued his sensational intercounty League play with two home runs in Kitchener's winning effort, and a triple and double in his squad's loss to the Nats.

The Kitchener game was marked by sloppy play all round, the losers making no less than six boots while Nats had two. Nat veteran Irish Miskimmons, besides hitting three for three, robbed Thomas of another extra-base clout with an unbelievable catch in right field.

The league-leading Waterloo Tigers saw their margin shrink a bit over the week-end as they dropped a 4-3 game to London Majors. Steady Ted Alexander went the route for Majors, and although he gave up 12 hits, was miserly in the pinches.

Gave Five Hits

Cy Bricker gave up only five hits to Majors in his eight-inning stint on the Tiger mound, and young Mike Kvasnak polished up with one hitless, runless inning. But Bricker walked five, and a costly miscue by second-baseman Jim Muldoon in the sixth brought home the winning London run.

In a viaduct Major game in Peterborough, the host Marines downed Toronto Dovers 7-4 behind Bill Edger's five-hit pitching. The victory strengthened the Peterborough club's hold on the league's third spot.

In the Niagara District League, the last-place Cheektowaga Alcoves squeezed a 6-5 win over Niagara Falls Fords. Jiggs Rufrano of the Fords was tagged for 10 hits after 31 runless innings—five of them in the game with Alcoves.

HOMERED IN EVERY PARK

Pittsburgh, July 31 — (AP) — Ralph Kiner, Pittsburgh Pirates slugger, has hit a home run in each National League park this season. He has belted 18 in Forbes Field, home of the Pirates.

On the road, Kiner hit three in Brooklyn, two in Cincinnati and one each in Chicago, St. Louis, New York, Boston and Philadelphia.

Merkle Cheered At Old-Timers Game in New York

New York, July 31 (AP) — "I didn't want to come here," the heavy-set, grey-haired man sitting in the rear seat of the bus said. "Now I sort of hate to go back."

"It makes a man feel good," Fred Merkle continued, "to hear such cheers after all those years. I don't think I'll forget it. I expected so much worse."

Merkle sat far back in his seat as the bus carrying the 30-odd Giants and Cardinals of yesteryear continued its trip downtown to a restaurant where they were to be feted by the Giants' management.

Most of the former baseball stars had participated in a three-inning old timers' contest for the benefit of 35,000 cheering fans at the Polo Grounds. Among them were such famous names as Mel Ott, Carl Hubbell, Joe Medwick, Pepper Martin, Travis Jackson, Fred Lindstrom, Hughey Critz, Ripper Collins, Bob O'Farrell, Tex Carleton and a host of others. The score? Oh yes, the old Giants won 2-1.

Merkle did not play. He and Larry Doyle, another of the famous Giants under John McGraw, had been invited as special guests. Neither put on a uniform as the '33 Giants renewed their rivalry with the famous "Gashouse Gang" of St. Louis.

Never Allowed to Forget

Merkle has never been allowed to forget that disastrous afternoon Sept. 23, 1908 when the Giants lost a pennant because of an alleged blunder pulled by him.

As a refresher, it was Merkle who neglected to run from first to second on a ninth inning single by Al Bridwell that apparently scored Moose McCormick from third with the winning run against Chicago Cubs.

The game was declared a 1-1 tie and ordered replayed. The Cubs won it and beat out the Giants for the flag by one game. New York fans blamed the loss on Merkle. Wherever he appeared after that he was called "bonehead" Merkle.

The fact that neither McGraw nor the other players blamed Merkle did not alter the opinion of the fans. Even after he helped the Giants win pennants in the years 1911-12-13, they still referred to him as "bonehead."

Umps Just Technical

"The fact of the matter is," Merkle said ruefully, "what I did was common practice in those days. The same thing probably had been done a half dozen times during the season but nobody ever was called on it. The umpires decided to be technical just when I did it."

At the end of the 1927 season, he quit the game for good.

For 23 years Merkle exiled himself from big-league baseball. Living in Florida, the now 61-year-old retired business man hadn't attended a big-league game let alone come to New York.

But in that one moment at the Polo Grounds on July 30, 1950, when 35,000 people cheered wildly all the bitterness of more than four decades was washed away. 1908 seemed far, far away now.

Regina Squad Adds More Power, Depth to Team

Regina, July 31 (CP)—Executives of the Saskatchewan Rough Riders are confident this is the year they'll end their long famine in the western Interprovincial Football Union.

They have added more power and depth to the team which last year came within a point of dethroning Calgary Stampeders in a thrilling play-off. A title would be their first since 1936.

United States college graduates carry much of the club's hopes in 1950. Coach Fred Grant signed the five newcomers to go with starry holdovers Del Wardien and Mike Cassidy for the Riders seven-man import cast.

Quarterback and passing duties in Grant's T-formation will fall on the sturdy shoulders of Jack Hartman, 24-year-old passing sensation from the Oklahoma Aggies. Hartman's performance in nightly drills has been impressive.

Blond Andy Pavich, powerful 200-pound battering ram from the University of Denver, will operate from the fullback spot. Another new backfield import is Al Bodine, captain last year at the University of Georgia.

Strong Additions

Additions to the strong Rider line are Jimmy Kynes, six-foot three, 215 pound centre from the University of Florida, and 240-pound Max Druen from Tulane.

To help Grant during the training grind, executives have brought in Lew Bostick, line coach from the University of Alabama and a former coach of Grant's when he played at Alabama. Bostick must return to Alabama by Sept. 1.

Riders retained end Matt Anthony, tackle Jim McFaul and guard Dean Bandiera—all brought in from the east last fall.

They have added Nelson Greene, chunky backfielder, who was named Ottawa Rough Rider's rookie of the year in 1947.

Riders' officials are happy at the two-for-one trade with Calgary which brought lineman Bert Iannone in exchange for youthful backs Bob Early and Wilf Godfrey. Iannone who started his grind career with Winnipeg Blue Bombers, boasts a record of five straight western titles, three with Winnipeg and the last two with Stampeders.

Coaches Grant and Bostick will get their first look at their charges under game conditions when they stage an inter-squad tilt at Moose Jaw Aug. 3.

ON HOME RUN BINGE

Chicago, July 31—(AP)—Major League batters, paced by Gus Zernial of Chicago White Sox, went on a home run binge again yesterday, slamming 36 round-trippers in 13 games. Zernial clubbed three homers as the Chicagoans dropped two games to New York Yankees.

Greatest Scullers May Meet First Time Next Year

Port Dalhousie, Ont., July 31—(CP) — Watch out for the 1951 Royal Canadian Henley.

That's the advice of experts. It may be a bit premature but they could be right—North America's two greatest scullers are scheduled to meet then for the first time.

If everything goes according to the books, Toronto's Jack Guest, Jr., son of a Diamond winner, will be in one lane. In the other will be Philadelphia's Jack Kelly, Jr., a two-time winner of the game's greatest prize.

The event will be the championship singles, co-feature with the Hanlan Memorial senior eights, on the four-day program.

Kelly, winner of the championship singles Saturday final day of the 1950 Henley, expects to be back to defend the title. Guest, who automatically jumped into senior company after his Association singles triumph last week, plans to challenge.

The 23-year-old Kelly and the 17-year-old Guest could have met Saturday but the Toronto Don Rowing Club star passed it up on the advice of his father, Jack Sr., who won the Diamond Skulls 20 years ago.

"He'll be around in the championship singles next year," the elder Guest said.

Wins By Five

Kelly sculled easily and effortlessly to finish five boat lengths ahead of Bobby Williams of Hamilton Leanders. In third-place was Joe Angyal of the New York Athletic Club. Angyal, a railway fireman won the event last year.

Kelly's victory came just before what was probably the most thrilling finish in the meet—when three shells finished a scant four feet apart in the senior eights.

Twenty-five yards from the pole, New York A.C. was a couple of yards ahead of Toronto Argonauts with Buffalo westsides fighting hard. When it was over, no one was sure who won. The verdict was Buffalo by a foot over New York with Argos a yard behind.

It gave Westsides a whopping 80 points and put them in second place with 220 in the final team standings. St. Catharines won with 336. Argos with 72 were well down in third spot followed by New York A.C. with 54.

Guest's age was all that kept him out of the senior singles this year. But he was the only triple winner among the 600 oarsmen there — he won the high school and open quarter-mile in addition to the Association singles. And he teamed with his younger brother, Don, to win the high school doubles.

Fight Features Smiths Falls, Picton Game

Tempers flared and fists flew in a player-spectator rhubarb in Picton Saturday night when the Picton McFarlands defeated the Smith Falls Royals 5-3 in a Central Ontario Baseball League fixture.

The blow-up came in the sixth innings when MacDonald, Picton shortstop charged heavily into Smith, Royals second baseman while attempting to beat a double-play throw. Smith crashed heavily to the ground and came up fighting. Players of both teams joined in the melee and spectators poured on the field and got in the fight. No damage was done and no penalties inflicted by Umpires O'Brien and Young.

The Falls, league leaders for the past six weeks dropped into second place by virtue of the defeat, with Kingston Disneys taking over the top spot.

Picton was leading 5-3 at the end of the sixth. The Royals tied the score in their half of the seventh but a deluging rain stopped the game and the score reverted to the end of the sixth.

Frank Dyer went the route for Picton allowing six hits while Kapaschuck for Royals was touched for 9 clouts for six innings. Duetta hit a triple and single for Picton with MacDonald and Perry getting two each. Stalmack and Majec hit two singles each for the Royals.

Tom Poholsky Setting League Afire With Hurling

(By The Assocated Press)

If the St. Louis Cardinals desire another starting pitcher for the stretch run in the National League, they need only to look to Rochester, where 20-year-old Tom Poholsky is setting the International League afire with his blazing righthanded curve balls.

Poholsky, who failed with the Cardinals last spring, is the leading pitcher in the loop with 14 victories and only three losses. He has started 17 games for the Red Wings—and completed all but one.

Poholsky registered win No. 14 yesterday as the league leading Red Wings swept a doubleheader from Jersey City 7-5 and 5-0.

Rochester supported Poholsky's seven hit hurling with four home runs, all off loser Red Hardy. Don Bollweg, Hal Rice, Ed Mierkowicz and Russ Derry hit the homers.

Larry Ciaffone led Rochester's 11-hit attack in the opener with a single and two home runs. Neal Watlington and Pete Pavlick hit homers for the losers.

Baltimore climbed into second place by one-half percentage point, shading Buffalo 6-5. Catcher Clyde Kluttz clubbed a home run for Baltimore, while Herb Adams hit an inside-the-park homer for Buffalo.

Montreal, which split a double-header with Syracuse, slipped to third place. The Royals, however are five games behind Rochester, while Baltimore is 5 1-2.

Kent Peterson stopped Montreal with three hits in the opener to win 2-1.

Jack Banta pitched five-hit ball in the nightcap as Montreal rebounded 10-3.

Toronto scored eight times in the sixth inning in 13-4 romp over Springfield Cubs.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A short suit lead may worry you. It does me, too. It always has. But as long as I follow an order of preference it is doing right. Even if it does not turn out right.

In the order of choice of leads, a top comes first; a long suit second; a short suit third. And in the category of short suits are three cards, two cards, one card; from either lead the highest.

But from these three types of shorts which is most preferable to lead? The singleton lead is undoubtedly the choice. It offers the best chance for the biggest reward in most cases.

But as between the lead of a doubleton or tripleton, which is preferred? Your guess is as good as mine. Of these two, however, I prefer the tripleton lead for which I have a good reason.

Why do I prefer a tripleton lead to a doubleton lead? There is no mathematical proof to uphold this choice of mine. It is simply an opinion that has to do with partnership confidence. The reasoning behind this will be told another time.

South is declarer at four spades after he and his partner had bid nothing but spades. It is your opening lead from the west hand you see here:

♠J 9 6
♦9 6 3
♣K 7 4 3 2

What is your correct lead? Not the club suit. Because you should not lead away from a king against a suit contract. So, you have only the other two unb id suits to lead from. Which red suit should be led?

Most players, I believe, are in favor of leading the doubleton heart. My preference is for the lead from the tripleton in diamonds. Maybe I should never have brought up this subject. Because I have no proof for my choice. Only a good reason.

There is something else in bridge for which I do not have a good answer. It is: "What do you lead from a void suit?"

DEBENTURES PRESENTED

Hamilton, July 31 (CP) —Two £100 debentures—the last of an 1894 issue—have finally been presented for redemption after having been missing for 33 years. They were found earlier this year under the concrete floor of a house in England but it's not known how they got there. The issue was originally called for redemption during the First World War.

Movie Column

By HUBBARD KEAVY

Hollywood, July 31 (AP) —We had an opportunity last night to hear about movie kissing from Hollywood's foremost authority on the history of the subject, Carlisle Jones.

The outstanding fact that impresses Jones after 20 years of osculatory investigation in the studios is that screen love has been slowed down while everything else in pictures has been speeded up. In the early days, he recalls, the leading lady bounced in and out of the hero's arms at a dizzy rate. It was Valentino, the lingering Latin, Jones says, who introduced the more deliberate technique of screen kissing. John Gilbert followed the pattern with Greta Garbo, as did John Barrymore with Dolores Costello. Those were men who took their time with kisses.

Kiss No Thrill

Something that still astounds Jones is that the screen kiss holds little thrill for the kissers. Too many people are involved in getting that kiss onto film — dozens of technicians and aides as well as the players themselves.

This led to the discovery, which Jones kept secret for many years, that screen lovers often came out of a clinch with pains in their necks due to the cramped positions they holu for the cameras.

Kiss Statistics

When I asked the kiss historian how many kisses are exchanged annually in pictures, he replied quickly: "About 10,000. But only 10 percen. .. them appear in the final footage." Only the script clerks keep a record of the actual number of kisses between players.

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows were walking along just walking along, and I said, Oh boy, diamonds.

Meening a lady's chest pin in the middle of the sidewalk just waiting to be picked up. Which I quick did, and Shorty Judge said, Wowie, I bet there's about 30 diamonds in it. I bet some lady is feeling sad somewheres, he said.

She'll put an add in the paper offering a big reward, I said. All I have to do is wait and watch and see, I said, and Puds Simkins said, yeah, but how about if she thinks some theef stole it? She wont put any add in any paper then, he said.

She'll tell the police, that's what she'll do, Skinny Martin said, and Shorty said, Hay, look out, there's a cop down at the corner now.

Which there was, being a big one, and I said, Heck, do you think I better stick it in my pockit?

You better not, Puds said. Maybe he saw you pick it up, and if he sees you trying to hide it, he'll get sispicious for sure, he said, and Glasses Magee said, Just hold it rite out when we go passed him, and if he says anything, we'll be your witnesses.

Making me kind of nerviss, but the cop looked rite at me going passed holding the pin out and he didn't say a werd, and when we came to a joolry store we all went in and showed the man the diamond pin, saying, How mutch is this werth, mister? and the man said, Well, it's not werth anything retail, but you could get quite a good deel for it wholesale if you found enough more to weigh a hundred pounds and melted the brass out.

The result being I asked some little colored gerl if she wanted it, and she said she did and I gave it to her free.

STRANGE PRODUCE FOR A RICE PADDY

This South Korean farmer is shown in the middle of his flooded paddy, uncertain as to what to do about the damaged U.S. jet fighter which made and emergency wheels-up landing in the middle of his rice field. A burst of flak knocked out the plane's hydraulic system, and the pilot made a safe landing though he was unable to lower the landing gear. The uninjured pilot was picked up by a transport, and flown back to his home base in Japan.—Central Press Canadian.

MUST WIN WAR

Chicago, July 29. (AP)—Fleet Admrial Chester Nimitz said Friday that the surest way to have a Third World War is to lose the fight in Korea.

The retired admiral, wartime commander of Allied Naval forces in the Pacific, said:

"If we—and I mean the United Nations—lose, I don't think we can hold off world war three."

RUSSIAN DELEGATE TO RETURN TO SECURITY COUNCIL AFTER BOYCOTT

U.S.S.R.
UNITED KINGD

Sir Gladwyn Jebb, the British representative to the U.N. Security Council, is shown in his place at Lake Success, N.Y., beside the empty chair of the Soviet delegate as the 11-nation council met for the 29th week without the Soviet Union. Jebb would have assumed chairmanship of the council for the month of August had not Soviet Delegate Jacob A. Malik touched off a diplomatic explosion by informing Secretary General Trygve Lie that Russia would take over in accordance with the rotating system. The presidency of the council rotates each month according to alphabetical order of member nations. All Security Council members except the Soviet delegate were scheduled to meet privately to review the sudden turn of events and prepare for emergency U.N. moves, depending on what Russia intends to make of reversal of her six-months boycott of Nationalist China representative to U.N. — Central Press Canadian.

"ARMED" FOR ACTION AT PETAWAWA

An army and air force program which featured an attack, defence and destruction display, drew some 5,000 spectators to military camp at Petawawa, Ont. Vampire fighters and paratroopers like John Lalaise, left, of Royal Canadian Regiment, were very active during manoeuvres. Firepower demonstration, seen at right, caused by a flame thrower, kept spectators active.—Central Press Canadian.

28 are Killed In East Canada During Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

Weekend mishaps—including the death of three persons in a train-car collision near Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.—killed 28 persons in eastern Canada.

Reported to the Canadian Press during the weekend were 11 deaths from traffic accidents, nine from drownings, three from falls and five more from varied causes.

Fifteeen of the deaths were in Ontario, nine were in Quebec, three in Nova Scotia and one in New Brunswick.

In Ontario, seven were killed in highway accidents, five were drowned, one committed suicide, one was killed by a fall and one was asphyxiated.

In Quebec three were drowned, two each killed by falls and traffic accidents, one was electrocuted and one hit by a train.

The three killed near Sault Ste. Marie died when a car struck a freight train near Northland, 30 miles north of the city. The driver of the car, Robert Archibald, was held by police but was not injured. The dead are his daughter, Isabelle, 6, Lawrence Giroux, 4, and Howard Wright, 54.

Traffic Smashes

Michael Thompson, 2, died in hospital in Sarnia and Clarence Hall, 56, died in hospital in Oakville, both from traffic accidents. Eldon Lonsdale, 33, of Buckingham, Que., was killed in Niagara Falls, Ont., when his motorcycle crashed into the back of a truck and Vytautus Ivanauskas, 26, was killed in Toronto when he lost control of his car and it crashed into a telephone pole.

The drowning victims in Ontario were Napoleon Dusome, 25, at Penetanguishene; Donald De Saulnier, 25, in Burlington Beach canal near Hamilton; Mrs. John Cooley, 38, of Buffalo, near Port Colborne, William Haslett, 17, of Toronto; and an unidentified woman was found in Lake Ontario near Toronto.

At Kingston, William Vacheresse, 26, of St. Catharines fell from the roof of a church and was killed, and near Uxbridge an unidentified youth apparently killed himself by piping carbon monoxide into his car. Mrs. Cecile Cairnduff, 29, was asphyxiated by a gas stove in her kitchen.

KILLED IN AMBUSH

Asmara, Eritrea, July 29—(Reuters)—A band of 40 pro-Ethiopian Shiftas Friday killed a British army corporal in an ambush near Obel—first British casualty in the campaign against the Shiftas.

He was killed along with three native guards when 40 Shiftas, roving guerrilla bands, ambushed their truck.

Two British police officers riding in the truck were surrounded and robbed before the Shifta band withdrew to nearby hills.

DRIVER ARRESTED

Lindsay, July 29. (CP)—Alleged driver of a stolen car, John Francis White of Toronto, was arrested here last night following an accident. Police discovered that White was driving a car owned by James Bond of Peterborough, after it crashed into the rear of an automobile and trailer driven by Everson Fisher of Newcastle. White, who had not attempted to leave the accident scene, was turned over to the Peterborough Provincial police.

WAR IS OVER FOR THESE COMMUNIST PRISONERS

North Korean communist prisoners of war are seen sitting with bowed heads and folded arms in a stockade somewhere in Korea, guarded by South Korean army soldiers. The treatment being accorded them by U.N. forces after their capture is in striking contrast to reports coming in of inhuman treatment of American and Allied soldiers caught in the northern drive, many of whom have been shot in the back by their captors. — Central Press Canadian.

Wartime Director Public Relations For Army, Dies

Montreal, July 31 — (CP) — Col. F. X. (Frank) Jennings, 59, newspaper man and wartime director of Public Relations for the Canadian Army, died yesterday.

The slim, grey-haired veteran of two wars and countless deadlines was stricken while relaxing on a holiday weekend. With his widow and daughter Edith, he was visiting friends at nearby Riviere Beaudette when he suffered a stroke in mid-afternoon.

With Sunday night off, he had been due back tonight at his desk at the Montreal Gazette, where as telegraph editor for the last two years he selected and edited the world news report that pours into a metropolitan daily.

Col. Jennings divided his career between newspaper work and war service. Just two years after starting as a reporter in his native Saint John, N. B., he enlisted in 1914 with the Canadian Field Artillery, winning his commission overseas in 1917.

He returned to the Saint John Evening Times-Globe and its morning counterpart, the Telegraph-Journal, after the war. He was successively news editor, assistant editor, managing editor and editor-in-chief of the two daily papers, holding the latter position for 10 years.

In 1943, he left to become director of Public Relations for the Army. There he worked under J. W. G. (Joe) Clark, Director-in-Chief of the Tri-Service Public Relations, in the exacting job of helping the Canadian people get all the war news that would not prejudice security. He later was chief of War Assets Corporation's Public Relations before joining the Gazette.

Heavy Storms Cause Damage In West Ontario

London, Ont., July 31 — (CP) — Thunderstorms, accompanied by lightning, rain and hail, swept over Western Ontario during the weekend, destroying a barn near St. Marys and causing some hail crop damage in the Palmerston area.

Crop damage generally was light, hail being restricted to a few areas. However, heavy rains fell in the Brantford, St. Thomas, Tillsonburg, Drumbo and Strathroy areas.

Lightning caused a break in the hydro in the Drumbo area Saturday afternoon.

The rural area Hydro Electric Power Commission office in London reported a line down Saturday on the Springbank road and numerous reports of transformer fuses blown in the rural areas around London. All damage was believed caused by lightning.

The barn of Blanshard township veterinarian Dr. Page was destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon when it was struck by lightning.

At Blackwell, five miles north of Sarnia, the storm was described as a miniature tornado. It uprooted trees and hailstones hit crops.

ATTEMPTED MURDER CHARGED

Toronto, July 31 — (CP) — Police charged 20-year-old John Bigelow Saturday with attempted murder in the stabbing of John McRae, 38, a professor at the University of Ontario.

McRae, stabbed several times in the stomach and chest, is expected to recover.

Bigelow and McRae met in a downtown hotel earlier Saturday, police said. They went to McRae's summer home for "a few drinks."

Police said an argument developed and Bigelow seized a knife from the kitchen and stabbed McRae several times.

Ottawa Hurler Dies of Injuries In Car Accident

Watertown, N.Y., July 31 (AP) —Pitcher Bob Larkin of the Ottawa Nationals baseball team died today of injuries suffered in a collision between an automobile and an army truck.

Four other members of the class C Border League team were injured in the accident.

Larkin, 23, died in Mercy Hospital about two hours after accident. Others in the car were Otto Kossuth, 23, James St. Clair, 23, Pete Karpuk, 21, and Frank Schwarz, 23. The hospital said Kossuth probably would be admitted, but that the others were expected to be released after treatment.

The car and the two-ton army truck carrying National Guard troops to the United States Army base at Pine Camp, N.Y., collided about midnight on route 12, two miles north of here.

The Ottawa team was en route home after winning a doubleheader at Watertown last night.

One National Guardsman, Pte. Harold Barow of the 172nd Infantry, from Germont, was treated for lacerations. He was the only Guardsman injured.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT
(For Hugh Fullerton, Jr.)

New York, July 31 — (AP) — The talk had reached the watermelon course in the Giants' scoffing room above the Harlem River when the man from Cincinnati demanded —"Yes, but who's going to win the National League?"

"Why?" responded one of his companions reasonably. "I'd say it's a pure toss-up between the Phils, Dodgers and Cards. Just take your choice and you might hit it."

"Hah," jeered the man from Cincinnati: "And I suppose you're going to leave those Braves out of it. Don't kid yourself—those guys are tough. They've murdered us - - - -"

Those Young Phils

"You've got to like those Phils," commented a Giant writer. "Somebody's doing a really wonderful job with those young pitchers. Maybe it's George Earnshaw, but whoever it is he's a genius for my dough - - - -"

"They'd all better watch those Cards," warned another of the group. "Long as they hold together and that Musial keeps hitting the way he's been they'll be rough. They've still got plenty of pitching."

"I still want to know who's going to win it," interjected the man from Cincinnati. "What about the Brooks? Can they swing it again?"

"Not the way Shotton's been handling those pitchers of his lately," said a new voice. "One time he'll jerk a pitcher before he's hurt and the next time he'll let an old-timer like Roe stay in there and get his lumps when everybody in the park can see he's lost all his stuff."

"Okay," said Cincinnati, "but that still isn't telling me who's going to win the pennant. We might as well go down to the dugout."

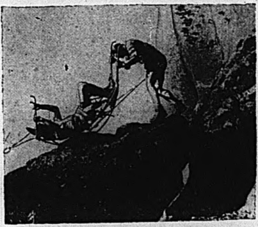
LATEST DEVICE FOR ALPINE RESCUE WORK



The newest invention of Westl Mariner, of Frankfurt, Germany, a stretcher-like rocking chair is a notable novelty for Alpine rescue squads. An injured person is laid in the chair which, hanging on a wire rope, can be transported over rocks and slopes. When necessary the chair can also be equipped with a wheel, or by means of wire rope, can serve as a funicular railway in case gorges must be crossed. —Central Press Canadian.

Brampton In Second Place Of Lacrosse Loop

Brampton, July 31 — (CP) — Brampton Excelsiors took over second place in the Ontario Senior Lacrosse Association Saturday with a 19-8 victory over Hamilton Tigers. A crowd of 1,000 witnessed the game, held in Brampton's new Memorial Arena because of inclement weather.

Paced by Blain McDonald, Jack Dorney and Norm Shortridge, Tigers took an early lead but wilted before the all-out Brampton offensive. McDonald finished with three goals to his credit, while Dorney, Shortridge, Mervy McKenzie, Alex Edmonds and Bill Hogan had singles.

For the winners, Gord Cruickshank had four and Nick Ferri three. Harry Graham, Archie Browning and Whitey Severson had two apiece.

Shriners Put on Hamilton Show

Hamilton, July 31 (CP)—One of them drove down main street with a hen and a bottle of wine under his shirt. Another borrowed a policeman's motorcycle.

All of them—some 2,000 Shriners who descended on Hamilton Saturday for the city's first international Shriner's day—appeared to have enjoyed themselves.

Leading the group were Mayor Frank Van Lare of Rochester and other Rochester civic officials. Delegates came from Detroit, Rochester, Buffalo, Oshawa and Toronto. In other years, the annual gathering had been held in Cobourg, Ont.

The Gentle Heart

By Kay Hamilton

Eventually the dancing ended and they settled down to two tables of bridge. "Just like a bunch of old folks," Pete said scornfully. "That's all you sere and withered creatures are good for. You ought to get a little exercise once in a while. Why, look at Natalie, bending over a drawing board all day long. She's a year older than she was yesterday at this time. Work ages you fast!"

"Oh, hush," his wife scolded him. "It's yours to deal, Pete, and you're holding up the game."

"What of it? Bridge!" he scoffed. "Any moron with a couple of college degrees can play bridge! Now, chess . . ."

After that the room quieted. But the friendly atmosphere was still there, the happy air which had settled over the party from the first arrivals. Jenny smiled to herself. It had certainly been a success, and she was glad. Natalie did work so hard; her few rare holidays in New York were always largely business in the background. They needed more real fun like this. If only Diane had been here.

Diane arrived after eleven. The bridge game had settled down to serious playing, and no one had made a move to go home. The quiet was unbroken except for the occasional slap of a card or a low-spoken comment, when suddenly Ghillie, who'd lain quiet through all the noisier part of the evening, began to bark loudly. He raced to the door, hurling himself at it.

"Watch it!" Gary made a dive for him. "That screening can't stand much of this sort of punishment, old boy." But Ghillie continued to bark, even while wriggling in Gary's arms, and struggled to get down.

"There's someone out here," Gary said, peering into the night. "A car. Oh, it's Diane and Tyson." He switched on the porch light and waited for them.

Diane was flushed and excited. Her eyes seemed twice as large as usual, and she pulled the willing Tyson after her into the living room.

"Hello, everybody! Oh, I'm so glad I could get back while you were still here! I simply hated missing your party, Nat, but it was worth going in for, wasn't it Jack?" She glanced at Tyson, her manner implying some knowledge that they shared. "He was simply marvelous, Nat. You've no idea." She perched briefly on her sister's chair. The others laid down their hands in resignation. There was no going on with the game now, but Diane did not seem to notice. She rattled on.

"Pruitt is the most fascinating man. Dynamic and—an—oh, what is the word I want? — inspiring. That's it. Inspiring. I'm so thrilled! I'll never be able to thank you enough, Jack, for introducing me to him. Why, just meeting him was an experience. And, of course, there was so much more than that. He told me so much, and, darling, you'll never guess! He said he'd give me a tryout. He thought I had what it takes. Of course, I have to go through the usual rigmarole—you know photos and all that sort of thing, and registering. But I have had experience, and that will be a help. Won't it be wonderful?"

Gradually she subsided into a chair. The others abandoned their tables, and the group reformed, with Diane dominating it now. She was intoxicated with excitement and success, and her beauty flamed in the room like a living thing. Small wonder that the men could not keep their eyes from her

Tyson sat back, smiling widely. This new Diane was his creation, and his air spoke of his pride. When Faith said hesitantly, "But, Di, won't Fred mind your having to be in town at all hours?" there was a momentary break.

Diane's smile froze. She said, after a breathless moment, "Of course not," and went on quickly to something else. But Jenny was shocked to see how little the question had pierced her armor of self-complacency. If Diane made a success of her new career, would that mean the end of her marriage? It would have to, unless Fred proved to be meeker and more subservient than Jenny had read him.

She was so lost in her thoughts that it was not until some time later that she was aware of a new current in the room. Diane, piqued by something that Pete had said, was turning her charm full upon him. And Pete was succumbing to it. He said now. "It will be a relief to see someone as really beautiful as you are, Diane, in the ads. For goodness' sake, see if you can't persuade them to leave your mouth closed in some of them. Not that you haven't a gorgeous smile and snowy teeth, but I get so darn' sick of seeing these stretched grin on every page."

"I know just what you mean," Diane said, leaning towrad him. "I think you're perfectly right."

Pete expanded visibly, and Jenny glanced once, swiftly, toward Elsa. His wife was sitting composedly, watching him with an amused expression. But Jenny was not amused. Diane had never been a flirt. Was she going to turn into one now?

For two weeks Jenny had been under a real strain. Perhaps it was foolish to take other people's affairs so much to heart, but she couldn't help it, particularly when they were members of her own family. Natalie's trouble, of course, was the lesser. But it was a very real thing to her, and Jenny, her practical side foremost, could not help but worry, too.

Natalie had gone stale. This was something which undoubtedly happened to most creative people, Jenny told herself. She remembered the frightening times when her father had paced restlessly through the house, frowning, irritable, unhappy. It was that time which usually came between periods of great productivity when the artist was tired and the creative side of him rebellious. She thought now, "If only Nat could take life easy at these times, get the good out of them, as if they were a sort of vacation. If she could only relax a little." But it seemed that this was impossible.

Natalie had sold her design to Lightfoot, had had such real encouragement from him, that she had come back from her trip to New York full of enthusiasm and wild plans for the future. "Maybe I can really get somewhere," she had confided to Jenny. "Maybe I can land at the top one of these days. It means dreadfully hard work, but I know I can do it."

That was the night she had come home, and they were sitting cross-legged on Jenny's bed. The next day she had been barely able to wait for breakfast to be over before she tore into the studio and dove into her work. She was subdued at noon that day. By evening she was haggard.

"I can't understand it!" she wailed. "I haven't a decent idea in my head. And I can't see why! Always before, a sale has stimulated me!"

Jenny comforted her. "You're tired. You worked so strenuously over that last one. Why don't you take a few days off?"

But Natalie wouldn't. She crouched over her drawing table and prodded her stubborn brain for ideas, but whatever came to her proved trite when she put it down on paper. She couldn't even rampage around the way she would like to, she grumbled to herself. Not with Brent right there in the studio with her, working hard and successfully at his two drawings for Bell's Agency.

And Jenny suffered with her. She was particularly fond of her clever sister, had always been closer to her than to Diane. But Diane, too, was a worry these days. Although she went into town almost every day, and often stayed there for dinner with one or another of the men she knew, her unhappy, restless presence was still there in the house.

The photographs Di had had taken for the model agency were beautiful, and when Natalie first saw them she had whistled. "Chalmers! Whew! How did you ever afford these, Di?"

"A GOOD PLACE TO DEAL"

"Maybe I am a rugged individualist!"

"No reporters ever interview me. But just the same I figure every man should have his own opinions about politics, foreign affairs, business, or what have you.

"Take all this talk nowadays about old-age benefits, for instance. That's something everybody wants. And each man has a different idea of how much security he wants and how he'll get it.

"I know there are a lot of old folks in this country that really need help. But while I'm young and earning good money, I figure the big part of my own security-building job is up to me.

"So, I'm hanging on to all my life insurance and adding to it whenever I can. It gives me and my family protection now — and a better income for the future. And it's all planned the way I want it.

"What's more, by relying on life insurance for my future security, I know exactly where I stand. My life policies are gilt-edged in any weather. I know just how much they're going to pay off — and when.

"That's the way I like it.

"Maybe that makes me a rugged individualist. But if it does, there are millions of others like me. Because most Canadians like to do things on their own!"
